BARE BRUNO'S SUDDEN RICHES

EASTMAN WARNS ROADS TO GIVE BETTER SERVICE

Urges Faster Trains and Lower Fares.

Spurs Station Plan

Chicago advocates of lake front rail terminal see likelihood of federal support in Co-ordinator Eastman's report citing need of modern railway facilities here. Details on page 4.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Warning that a major problem challenging railway management, the unprofitableness of passenger service, has been caused by the roads' failure to realize and emulate the enterprise of competing carriers, including pleasure automobiles, motor buses, and air transport, Joseph B. Eastman, transportation coördinator, told regional coordinating committees today that rail service still could be made profitable through modernization and coördination.

In a long report sent to regional offices, and which also will be used as a basis for formulating new legislation in congress, Mr. Eastman reviewed the tremendous losses suffered in recent years and listed nineteen recommendations for improvement. He also suggested coördination "by contract or joint rates and arrangements" of railway, highway, airway, and waterway transportation.

Blames High Fares.

The report was compiled chiefly on a survey of 1933 business, while customer opinion was gauged by 26,000 replies to a ballot.

"Present high fares are in large measure responsible for unprofitable rail operations, since they have not only put rail travel out of the reach of most people, but in many instances are more than the cost of travel by private automobile," Mr. Eastman said.

Modernization of services, elimination of waste, promotion of greater travel and coördination of transportation, he said, could be attained by the following steps:

"Anticipate and satisfy essential requirements for safe, clean, comfortable, complete, convenient, speedy, and hospitable carriage, intelligently coordinated with city travel facilities.

"Make rail travel more suitable by eliminating intricate routines and tariffs, indifferent and discourteous treatment, hawking and panhandling, noisy and unattractive depots, infrequent schedules, and exorbitant prices.

Urges Faster, Cheaper Service.

"Establish frequent and fast local service at 1½ cents per mile basic fare.

"Establish for the thrifty distance traveler frequent, speedy, intercarrier limited service at 2 cents basic fare.

"Establish for those who want modern conveniences at a reasonable cost, high speed, intercarrier reserved service at 3 cents basic fare, including berth.

"Establish for the luxury traveler a limited amount of high speed de luxe service at 5 cents basic fare, including rooms and all incidentals.

"Establish quantity discounts from the standard charges for families, parties, traveling salesmen, lodges, schools, and similar groups.

"Develop pleasure, educational, sporting, and other special event-travel by all expense trips, train cruises, and similar services.

Would Consolidate Functions.

"To eliminate waste, consolidate functions of eighty-nine duplicate and competitive trafic departments into a single joint organization—such as the Association of American Railroads."

Reviewing 1933 results, when the railways spent $200,000,0000 more for the passenger service than the revenues of $500,000,000 which it produced, Mr. Eastman said that a loss of $90,000,000 was suffered in handling baggage and express, $60,000,000 in coach passengers, $30,000,000 in handling sleeping and parlor car passengers, and $33,000,000 in dining car services.

Free transportation, which was responsible for a loss of $50,000,000, or about one-fourth of the passenger service deficit, should be drastically curtailed, Mr. Eastman said.

John B. Payne Seriously Ill After an Operation

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The condition of John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross, who is ill at the George Washington hospital, was reported unchanged today. Mr. Payne was operated on Saturday for appendicitis, and his condition was aggravated by a cold.

BILL PROVIDES 'SAVINGS BONDS' SALE TO PUBLIC

Power for Roosevelt

Bill clothing Roosevelt with power over spending of 4 billion dollars for public works and 800 millions for relief introduced in house. Gag rule plan prompts committee revolt. Details on page 5.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Small investors will be invited to buy "baby bonds" from the federal government and thus help pay for the gigantic expenditures of the New Deal, the secretary of the treasury, Henry Morgenthau Jr., announced today.

The bonds known as "savings bonds" will be issued in denominations ranging from $25 to $10,000 to fit the pocketbook of persons with limited funds to invest. They will be offered for sale at the beginning of each month and will bear interest at a rate not in excess of 3 per cent compounded semi-annually.

Secretary Morgenthau's new plan is embodied in a proposed law which also gives the treasury a new borrowing power of 12 billion dollars and which was introduced in the house of representatives today by Representative Robert L. Doughton [Dem., N. C.], chairman of the ways and means committee.

13 Billions Outstanding.

The Doughton bill would allow the treasury to have outstanding at any one time 25 billion dollars in bonds. The present amount outstanding is about 13 billions. Representative Doughton explained, and the bill, therefore, permits 12 billions more to be issued in order to borrow the funds which the New Deal is spending over and above its revenues.

Thus far the New Deal has been borrowing under the authorization of the Second Liberty loan act which provides that from the day on which that act was passed, thenceforward, the treasury could issue an accumulated total of 28 billions in bonds. Representative Doughton explained that an aggregate of 25 billions had been issued of which only 12 billions was still outstanding, but under the terms of the Liberty loan act only 3 billions more could be issued.

Instead of being static like the old limitation, the new 25 billions will be what was termed a "revolving authorization." In other words, regardless of how many bonds are issued and retired, the total outstanding may still go as high as 25 billions.

New "Squeeze" Is Seen.

Issuance of "savings bonds" by the treasury, another power conferred by the proposed law, is seen here as a new "squeeze" which the treasury is putting on the banks. The bonds will appeal to the persons with small savings accounts but will carry higher interest rates than banks can pay. There is serious question whether the treasury may not be embarking on a policy which will deplete bank deposits.

In this respect the government has the banks both coming and going. Under existing laws, the federal reserve board can regulate the interest rates which banks pay their depositors. The Federal Deposit Insurance corporation is asking similar power. The reserve board has already decreed that banks shall not pay more than 2½ per cent.

The government is thus in a position of telling the banks that they must pay their depositors low interest rates while at the same time the government is offering the depositors an investment carrying a higher rate of interest.

Higher than Savings Interest.

Although Secretary Morgenthau said that the first issue of baby bonds will have an interest rate of 2½ per cent, this rate will actually be higher than that which savings accounts draw in large cities like New York and Chicago.

To give the small investor the same liquidity that he would have in a bank account, the proposed law provides that the bonds be sold on a discount basis. The investor can then cash them in at any time he wishes and receive payment in direct ratio to the length of time he has held the bonds. For instance, having bought a ten year bond for 96 and held it for five years, he may cash it for 98.

The baby bonds are to be issued with maturities ranging from 10 to 20 years.

50,000 STUDENTS GET GOOD MEALS AT 20 CENTS EACH

F. O. Washam, director of lunchrooms for the board of education, told the Chicago Stewards' association at a meeting in the Congress hotel last night how his organization is able to sell high school students substantial meals at 20 cents each—and not lose money.

Before his appointment last September, Mr. Washam said, the lunchrooms operated, under the management of the various school principals, at a loss of $10,200. The principals were not at fault, he said, but the centralization of buying and the standardizing of menus effected important savings. At present 50,000 students are being fed daily in the high schools.

For his 20 cents, Mr. Washam said, the student gets soup, meat, vegetables, and a beverage. He added that parents are becoming convinced of the economy in letting their children eat in the lunchrooms.

Mrs. O'Shea Amazes Her Husband, She Does Indeed

Hugh O'Shea, colored, 58 years old, 517 East 33d street, accompanied his wife yesterday to the central police station, where she complained that a neighbor had swindled her out of $10. Policeman Edward Bergland, warant clerk, became suspicious of Mrs. O'Shea's mental condition when he questioned her and he ordered her held for psychopathic examination. Matrons who searched Mrs. O'Shea found $1,360 in bills pinned to her underskirt. O'Shea was astonished. "She works occasionally as a maid," he said, "but I had no idea she saved all that money."

Mrs. James A. Patten Seriously Ill in Hospital

Mrs. James A. Patten, 1426 Ridge avenue, Evanston, widow of the "wheat king" of the Chicago Board of Trade, is seriously ill in the Evanston hospital, it was learned yesterday. Mrs. Patten has been a patient in the hospital for a month. Last week, it was said, she suffered a number of sinking spells, but in the last few days some improvement in her condition has been noted. She is 76 years old.

Burglar Visits a Church, Takes All He Can Carry

The Rev. Arthur Taylor, pastor of the Green Street Congregational church, 5600 South Green street, reported to the police yesterday that early in the day a thief broke into the church and rifled the poor box of 50 cents. The burgler also stole a radio, napkins, and twelve tablecloths used the night before at a young people's party.

Zero Weather, Storms Sweep Most of Nation

Winter storms and intense cold, in some sections the severest experienced in many years, spread across three-quarters of the continent last night and threatened by nightfall today to reach the Atlantic coast.

Nature's bag of tricks spilled over yesterday, giving southern Louisiana an unprecedented snow, Puget sound and British Columbia one of the most devastating storms in the history of the west coast, California a blighted fruit crop, impassable snow in Oregon, flood conditions in half a dozen states, and subzero weather in Chicago for the first time this year.

Suburbs Report Lower Marks.

The mercury began its descent in the early morning hours yesterday and at noon it was 1 above zero. At 5 p. m. it was 1 below zero. North shore suburbs reported zero generally, but westward the towns and villages had readings as low as minus 6. Lake county suffered the worst of northern Illinois. From 5 below at Waukegan the temperature ranged to 10 below at Zion, 11 below at Libertyville, and 12 below at Mundelein.

Forecaster W. P. Day predicted a shift in the wind today from the frigid northwest to the south and southwest, with temperatures rising to 15 above zero. Some snow by nightfall was also in prospect, with a return of colder weather tomorrow.

At midnight as the wind appeared to be swinging around from the north, it was expected that the earlier forecast of 6 below zero in the city and 12 below in the suburbs would not be realized during the early morning hours today.

Cold Wave Breaks in West.

The stretch of western plains and the northwest prairies experienced a break in the cold wave last night, after temperatures dropped out of sight during the day. For the last week intense cold and heavy snows took a large toll of lives and impeded trafic. Trains from the northwest arrived in Chicago yesterday several hours late. As conditions improved in the west airplane travel, grounded since Saturday, was resumed.

Reports from British Columbia told of a raging blizzard and an all time record snowfall which paralyzed transportation, caused thousands of dollars property damage, and closed the Vancouver grain exchange, all public schools and the University of British Columbia.

With the passing of the cold wave in Oregon heavy rains deluged Seattle and Portland and deep snow fell in other parts of the state.

California's Imperial valley suffered crop damage estimated at $200,000, and fear was expressed for the fruit crop.

Snow in Southern Louisiana.

Pushing down into Texas, the cold brought a reading of 5 below in the north, with heavy snow and freezing temperatures on the Mexican border. Dallas had its coldest weather in two years. From Texas to Florida, the gulf was torn by storms which lashed the coast.

A general snow fell throughout Louisiana and for almost the first time in recent history Lake Charles and Abbeville in the southern part of the state were covered.

Several days of heavy rain in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Tennessee, and Kentucky spilled rivers over their banks and cut off highway travel. Near zero weather following last night added to the confusion.

The Willow river in Wisconsin burst a dam at St. Croix, near Hudson, wrecked a power house and railway trestle, and damaged a new bridge.

Snow Falls in Naples; 200 Injured by Falls on Ice

NAPLES, Jan. 21.—(AP)—This southern city of "Sunny Italy" looked like a winter resort today when nearly two inches of snow fell and the thermometer dropped to 29 degrees above zero Fahrenheit. Nearly 200 persons suffered minor injuries from falls and other accidents due to the snow and ice.

BY SEYMOUR KORMAN.

Earl Renner, confessed leader of a gang of sluggers and window smashers during the strike against the Chicago Motor Coach company last fall, admitted on the witness stand in the Criminal court of Judge William V. Brothers yesterday that he had committed perjury before the grand jury which investigated the violence occurring during the strike.

Renner's admission came on cross-examination by attorneys for William Taber and Joseph Kehoe, officials of the street car men's union, who are on trial on charges of aiding and abetting in the murder last Sept. 26 of James J. Kelly, a dispatcher for the bus company. It was construed by the defense as attacking Renner's credibility as a state witness.

Says He Lied to Aid Kehoe.

Renner said he lied to protect Kehoe when he told the grand jury that all the money he received for stoning bus windows and attempting to "get" bus employés had come from Ralph Stoltzmann, president of the union which called the strike and which is affiliated with the street car union.

Although Defense Attorneys Michael Ahern and Thomas D. Nash could not shake Renner's present testimony that he received the money from Kehoe, they contended that the state had failed to show by his direct testimony that Taber and Kehoe were parties to any conspiracy to kill Kelly.

On this basis Attorney Ahern argued a motion for a directed verdict of not guilty for the defendants. Judge Brothers overrul[illegible] the motion.

Defense Charges Clemency Move.

The defense launched a further attack on the credibility of Renner's testimony in an effort to show that he became a state witness with the hope of gaining clemency in his own case. Renner, Stoltzmann and 25 other men, including Renner's gang, are under indictment for the bus dispatcher's death and other strike violence. All have been granted trials separate from this one.

One of them is Albert Semple, 39 years old, 4747 Patterson avenue, a member of Renner's slugging crew who has confessed the actual killing of Kelly. He will take the witness stand today to testify against Taber and Kehoe.

Kelly was beaten on a southbound street car, was then dragged from the car and shot at Grand and Cicero avenues. He was on his way home from a north side garage of the bus company when the assault occurred. Renner's gun was used in the shooting, but he was not present, he testified.

Cross-Examination of Renner.

Early in his cross-examination, which was conducted by Attorney Nash, Renner said he had never been advised or encouraged by Taber and Kehoe to kill Kelly. He said he had disapproved of any violence against Kelly and had warned Semple, his brother, William Semple; Joseph White and John Bretschneider—all members of the slugging gang—against such tactics.

The latter three men, who are under indictment, were with Albert Semple when Kelly was murdered. Renner asserted that when he heard of the killing he told the four men they had done wrong. He was informed that they had been drinking, he said.

At this point the jury was sent out of the courtroom and Attorney Ahern moved for the directed verdict of acquittal.

Ahern Argues for Acquittal.

"Mr. Coghlan [Assistant State's Attorney Mal Coghlan] said in a conference in chambers that Renner is the only man Kehoe had any conversation with," Mr. Ahern declared.

STOCK TRADING AFTER RANSOM PAYMENT TOLD

Quit Job on April 4, Says Employer.

BY WILLARD EDWARDS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

(Pictures on Back Page.)

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Bruno Richard Hauptmann was depicted today in the testimony of witnesses at the Lindbergh baby murder trial as a man of three widely variant guises and temperaments.

Miss Cecelia M. Barr, a keen-eyed moving picture theater cashier, identified him as the slinking figure with turned down slouch hat who handed her a $5 ransom bill on the night of Nov. 26, 1933.

To Edward F. Morton, timekeeper on an apartment building project, he was the skilled carpenter who applied for work on March 21, 1932, who worked steadily until April 2 [the date when the $50,000 ransom for the child was paid], when he was absent, only to quit, never to return, on April 4.

And to William Frank, department of justice agent, who studied records of Hauptmann's finances, the man charged with the murder of the infant son of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was a bold and reckless stock market speculator whose transactions in 1933 totaled more than a quarter of a million dollars.

State's Progress Delayed.

Because of the extremely lengthy cross-examination of these witnesses, the state did not make the progress it had expected today. Completion of its case may be deferred until late this week.

It was learned tonight that Mrs. Greta Henkel, close friend of the late Isador Fisch, furrier acquaintance of Hauptmann, arrived in Flemington today. Reports are that she will be a defense witness who will testify that she frequently saw Fisch give Hauptmann gold certificates, presumably ransom bills, to cash. This would be in support of the defense theory that Hauptmann was merely Fisch's dupe.

Mrs. Henkel introduced Hauptmann to Fisch in 1932, it was said. The defense lawyers maintained some secrecy concerning the significance of her appearance.

But Hauptmann in an interview given through Defense Attorney C. Lloyd Fisher denied that he would name Fisch as the kidnaper.

Doesn't Know Who Did It.

"All I know," Fisher quoted the defendant as saying, "is that Fisch left me $15,000 ransom money in a shoe box. I cannot say that he was the kidnaper because I know nothing of the kidnaping."

Miss Barr's identification of Hauptmann as the man who passed a $5 ransom bill on her was positive. She has been 25 years a cashier in the Sheridan Square theater, in the Greenwich Village district in New York, she said, and remembers faces.

"It was on a Sunday night, Nov. 26, 1933," she said, "about 9:30 o'clock in the evening. The man came up to the window and threw a $5 bill at me. It was folded eight times."

She demonstrated with a bill, at the suggestion of Attorney General D. T. Wilentz, in what manner it had been folded. The piece of currency was a little packet only about an inch square when folded, she showed the jury.

Saw Him Watching Her.

"I couldn't see the amount of the bill until I opened it up," she continued. "As I was doing so I looked up and he was looking at me. I asked him, 'How many?' and he looked at the sign and said, 'One forty,' meaning the price of the seat. I gave him a ticket and his change."

Next day, she said, when police came to her, she easily remembered the man who had given her the bill and gave them a detailed description which fitted Hauptmann.

Defense Attorney Reilly staged a little strategy when he cross-examined the witness.

Q.—"Have you ever seen me before?" he asked the witness.

She hesitated. She thought she might have seen Reilly in Trenton the previous Saturday night, but finally answered in the negative.

"Haven't you seen me at your box office window in the last three weeks and didn't I talk to you?" demanded Reilly.

Calls Clerk to Stand.

Reilly ordered his clerk, James Rao, a dark little man, to stand up.

"Didn't you see him at the box office window and didn't we ask you about the case?" he inquired.

The witness again answered in the negative. Reilly dropped the matter there, but after court, making one of his daily announcements, he declared that he and Rao would testify that they had appeared at the box office window, but that Miss Barr couldn't remember them.

The cashier said Hauptmann had been dressed in a dark suit and a dark slouch hat, pulled down in front, and had worn no overcoat although the night was cold. Reilly borrowed a hat lying on a table and put it on to get a demonstration of how the hat had been turned down.

The hat slipped down over his ears and the courtroom crowd had a lot of fun which made the attorney turn an even more roseate hue than usual.

"Did you ever tell anybody you couldn't remember the man but that it would be a good 'ad' for the theater if you identified him?" he bellowed at the witness.

Miss Barr was absolutely sure she had not said any such thing.

Winchell Gets Look-in.

The cross-examination was concluded and Prosecutor Wilentz was about to excuse the woman when Walter Winchell, Broadway columnist, signaled to him frantically.

"O, yes," said Wilentz with a wry smile. "What was the name of the picture that night?"

"Winchell's 'Broadway through a Keyhole'" was the answer, and the columnist beamed while the crowd, easily stirred to merriment, whooped its enjoyment again.

Judge Thomas W. Trenchard, who has issued more than a hundred threats to clear the courtroom, got a little angrier than usual at the crowd. He ordered the names of the special guards called in order that he might instruct them. Some of the guards weren't present and most of the others were grouped up around the witness chair, where they could hear easily.

"You don't belong up here," the justice told the guards, testily. "Get back there where you can control that crowd. Bring any one you see laughing or causing disorder up here, and I'll deal with them. They're interfering with the proper progress of this trial."

QUITS JOB APRIL 4

Morton, the timekeeper, testified that Hauptmann was given employment as a carpenter on the Majestic Apartment building at 72d street and Central park, New York City, on March 21, 1932. This was three weeks after the kidnaping.

"He worked steadily up to and including April 1," the witness testified, consulting his records. "April 2 was a Saturday and he did not show up. April 3 was a Sunday. On April 4, a Monday, Hauptmann returned to work but quit that night and never came back."

Hauptmann had been hired for $100 a month, the timekeeper said. Cross-examined by Reilly, the witness said that the building had not been constructed by union labor.

"No Blue Eagle?" queried the lawyer.

"No," said the witness, grinning.

"What, no Blue Eagle!" shouted the attorney indignantly, while an ever increasing wave of merriment from the crowd signified that almost every one present was aware that in March, 1932, the Blue Eagle had not yet been hatched.

Two Other Witnesses.

There were two minor witnesses during the day. One was Barney L. Fink, telephone company employé, who testified that Dr. John F. Condon's telephone number up to April 12, 1932, had been "Sedgwick 3-7154," the number found written on a board in a closet in Hauptmann's home. The number was changed and privately listed after April 12, he said.

The other was William M. Coty, a bank teller, who told of noticing that the $5 bill received in a deposit from Miss Barr's theater was a Lindbergh ransom bill.

Frank, the department of justice agent, testified that the unemployed German carpenter had dabbled in the stock market before the payment of the ransom money, but had really blossomed out as a big time speculator after the payment. So important did the defense regard his testimony that Reilly had cross-examined him all morning and part of the afternoon session, seeking to show in general that the Hauptmanns had money before as well as after the payment of the ransom.

Bought Airplane Stocks.

There was a flurry of excitement when, during redirect examination by Prosecutor Wilentz, it was brought out that Hauptmann had speculated in airplane stocks. The state thought this was significant as indicating that Hauptmann knew something of aviation and consequently of Col. Lindbergh. Reilly protested heatedly that the line of questioning was most improper and made the customary demand for the withdrawal of a juror and the declaration of a mistrial.

Judge Trenchard ruled placidly that the questioning was irrelevant, but denied the motion for a mistrial.

One of the points regarded as significant by the state was Frank's testimony that the Hauptmann brokerage account had been inactive from early in 1931 until April, 1932. On April 8, only six days after the payment of the ransom, Hauptmann resumed his stock market speculations, it was revealed.

In the eight years from 1924 to 1932, the Hauptmanns deposited only $1.47 in silver coins in their bank account, it was also shown. But in the months following the payment of the ransom, $463.25 in silver coins was deposited. This evidence is in line with the state's theory that Hauptmann was busy cashing ransom bills for other currency and silver and thus amassed a large quantity of silver.

CASH DEALS DESCRIBED

Frank began by testifying he had made a compilation of the moneys deposited to the credit of Hauptmann and his wife on April 2, the day the ransom was paid.

The entire cash deposits of the Hauptmanns totaled only $203 on that date, the witness declared, after consulting records he abstracted from a briefcase. They also owned 50 shares of a motion picture company which had a market value of only $100 at the time.

Q.—Tell us how much cash was placed in the Hauptmann brokerage accounts from April 2, 1932, until Sept. 19, 1934, the date of his arrest. A.—Sixteen thousand nine hundred and forty-two dollars and seventy-five cents.

Q.—Give us the cash deposits in their banks during the same period. A.—Nine thousand and seventy-three dollars and twenty-five cents.

Represent Cash Only.

These figures, the witness pointed out, excluded all deposits made by checks, so that the totals represented cash deposits solely.

There was a loss of $3,403 shown in Hauptmann's market operations prior to the day the ransom was paid, Frank said. He suffered a loss of $5,728 in his speculations following the payment of the ransom, or a total loss of $9,131 in the market.

Over the protests of the defense, the witness was allowed to tell the jury his calculation of the total cash that came into the possession of the Hauptmanns after the ransom was paid. The total was $44,486, he said.

Hauptmann didn't like these figures, which seemed to substantiate clearly the state's contention that he was alone in the collection of the ransom and did not split any of the $50,000 with members of a gang. He whispered anxiously to Attorney Fisher.

Hauptmann's stock market operations started in 1930, but his transactions were comparatively small until 1933, the witness said. In that year the total cost of stock purchases by the defendant suddenly jumped to $256,442, the government agent testified.

Far from Poor Before.

Attorney Reilly's cross-examination of the witness brought out that the Hauptmanns had by no means been penniless prior to the ransom payment. From 1924 to 1928 the deposits in their bank account totaled $5,377, the witness testified. There was also a withdrawal of $3,750 in 1927. The defense contends that this sum was hidden by the Hauptmanns until Jan. 2, 1933, when it was used to purchase a mortgage. The state, of course, contends that the $3,750 was part of the $50,000 ransom money.

The defense attorneys constantly consulted Hauptmann as they pored over the records of his bank accounts and stock transactions. He answered their whispered questions eagerly, gesturing and pointing.

Q.—So Anna and Richard both had money before the kidnaping? A.—Yes, sir.

Q.—Their deposits ran as high as $2,800 a year both before and after the kidnaping? A.—After the kidnaping they were higher.

Q.—He was in Wall street, speculating, two and one-half years before the kidnaping? A.—Yes, sir.

Quizzed on Earlier Buying.

The attorney questioned the witness at length concerning Hauptmanns' stock market transactions in 1930 and 1931. The defendant sold out Jan. 31, 1931, retaining possession only of fifty shares of the motion picture stock previously referred to. He did not reenter the market until after the ransom had been paid.

It was not until March 31, 1933, that Hauptmann began speculating on a large scale, the witness revealed. An account was opened under the maiden name of his wife, Anna Schoeffler, and in the following month he purchased more than $11,000 worth of various stocks. In succeeding months he was buying and selling almost every day, the witness said, the total of the transactions being more than a quarter of a million dollars.

Wood Beam Figures in Bruno's Trial

Hauptmann to Take Stand as First Defense Witness

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Bruno Richard Hauptmann will be the first witness in his own defense. This was announced today after the defendant had made his statement that he was anxious to take the stand and deny "those lies."

Hauptmann's car was parked in the courthouse driveway this afternoon in readiness for the state's attempt to have it introduced in evidence. This is expected to be one of the state's hardest tasks tomorrow.

The ladder which the state insists was used in the kidnaping of Col. Lindbergh's son also is likely to be a bone of bitter contention tomorrow. The defense has maintained it should not be introduced because its custody has not been clearly traced.

That Isador Fisch, who Hauptmann claims left with him the ransom bills, often used the name "John" and even signed letters that way will be the story of a Bronx housewife when it comes the defense's turn to introduce evidence. It was a mysterious John to whom "Jafsie" Condon paid the $50,000 ransom in St. Raymond's cemetery. Condon has identified Hauptmann as "John."

The state's final witnesses will include several policemen who will tell of statements made by Bruno after his arrest. Another will be Millard Whited, who will say that he saw Hauptmann in the neighborhood of the Lindbergh home shortly before the kidnaping. Several other neighbors may take the stand with similar testimony.

Attorney Reilly took to coughing so violently today that Justice Trenchard was moved to compassion and presented the defense lawyer with a cough drop. It happened in this wise:

Cecilia Barr of Newark, the theater ticket seller who identified Hauptmann as the man who gave her a $5 ransom bill, took the stand in a slit skirt and an Alpine hat. The court, which had been filled with a crowd bored practically to tears by the details of Bruno's stock market transactions, took on an immediate air of attention.

The witness took the oath with her hand on her hip. That helped relieve the monotony, too.

Then, in the course of her testimony, the self-conscious cashier giggled and flirted a gay eye at her inquisitor. It set Reilly coughing and prompted the judge to his act of humanitarianism.

Mrs. Hauptmann showed signs of a new outburst today, again as the result of a woman's accusations against her husband. Her face was red and her hands tightly clenched, but she managed to control her temper.

Among the spectators in court today was a troupe of Swiss acrobats from some show or other, John O'Hara, the novelist, whose "Appointment in Samarra" has been praised with so many faint damns, and United States Senator Reynolds of North Carolina.

Mrs. Ollie Whately, the wife of the Lindbergh's butler now dead, was in court today, too. In contrast to her saddened demeanor the day she testified, today she seemed quite gay and laughed and chatted during a recess.

'RED' JOHNSON, BETTY GOW'S SAILOR FRIEND, IS MARRIED IN OSLO

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Henry [Red] Johnson, the man who talked to Betty Gow over the phone the night the Lindbergh baby was kidnaped, was married last week in Norway to his Norwegian sweetheart, Renge Olsen, it was learned today from Harry Wold, the girl's uncle.

Wold, the superintendent of a Brooklyn apartment house, said the girl's mother, who has been visiting relatives in Brooklyn, received a cable Thursday announcing the marriage.

It was Mrs. Olsen who gave "Red" a job when he returned from the United States, working in the fruit store she owns in Oslo.

STOLL KIDNAPER BELIEVED SEEN IN GARB OF WOMAN

Houston, Tex., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Police announced tonight an automobile seized here had been identified as one stolen in Moline, Ill., and expressed belief a "mysterious woman" who left the car a few seconds before they arrived was T. H. Robinson Jr., sought as the kidnaper of Mrs. Alice Speed Stoll of Louisville, Ky., last October.

A man and a woman, both of whom gave Houston addresses, were held for questioning by police at the request of the department of justice. The couple contended that they rented the car in Moline Jan. 5 and had since driven to Texas in it.

BRUNO ANXIOUS TO TAKE STAND AND DENY 'LIES'

Didn't Kill Baby and Isn't Afraid, He Says.

Flemington, N. J., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Bruno Richard Hauptmann still believes he has a "good chance" to be acquitted of the Lindbergh kidnaping and he is "not worried and not afraid."

His views on the progress of the trial, the truthfulness—or rather the mendacity—of witnesses, and his desire to take the witness stand and tell his story reached the public today through C. Lloyd Fisher, Flemington lawyer and member of the defense counsel. Mr. Fisher gave out what purported to be a question and answer interview with the defendant in his cell.

This was a substitute interview, newspaper men being excluded from the Hunterdon county jail and any extended conversation with Hauptmann in the courtroom.

Anxious to Take Stand.

"I am anxious to take the stand," Mr. Fisher quoted the ex-army machine gunner.

"I have listened to a lot of lies in that courtroom; now I would like to do my own talking and tell what is really the truth.

"Do you think the jury will believe you?"

"Yes."

"Are you worried about facing cross-examination?"

"Not a bit. I have been waiting a long time here to tell my story. They can ask me anything and I will tell the truth. I am not afraid."

"I feel all right. I will feel better when I have testified."

How About Ransom Money?

"That ransom money—how are you going to explain that?"

"I will tell how it is 'repeat' money. It was used over and over again. That happens in the stock market. It wasn't Lindbergh ransom money, you can bet on that!"

"Do you think the state proved a good case against you?"

"No; they did not prove anything so damaging, I don't think."

"What did they prove?"

"That is only their side yet. Wait until I tell the truth. You know, there were a lot of lies told on their side."

"Whom do you mean?"

"I mean Sisk most of all (Thomas Sisk, department of justice agent). Then I mean Hochmuth, the old man who said he saw me in Hopewell, and he must be crazy. He is an old man. And that Miss Alexander, she was lying—or she was mistaken. Even Dr. Condon said she was mistaken. I don't say she lied on purpose—but she is wrong. She never saw me there.

Calls Sisk Worst of All.

"But that Sisk—that man is the worst liar of all. He lied on purpose. And he knew it. That is why I got so mad. I think he told those stories because he wanted a reward or something like that. I can prove he told absolute lies if they want to ask me about that.

"Let me tell you this: He said I was sneaking looks out the windows when they were searching that bedroom in my house and I was looking out at the garage. That is a lie, because in that room where they had me there is no window facing out on the garage. If I look out a window of that room I cannot see the garage. There is only a plain blank wall in the direction of the garden and the garage. Sisk does not know what he is talking about. He is making up everything."

"Do you think you have a chance of being acquitted?" "Sure," he replied, "a good chance."

Only 22 in Lake County Jail; a 10 Year Record

Sheriff Lawrence Doolittle of Lake county said yesterday that the number of prisoners in the county jail at Waukegan was 22, the lowest number at any time in the last ten years. Ten of the prisoners are serving federal sentences.

AIR MAIL LINES SPURN SUBSIDY, ASK "FAIR" RATES

Pound-Mile Pay Basis Urged as Solution.

BY WAYNE THOMIS.

Operators of the major airlines assert that they do not want subsidy in any form for carrying air mail, and contend that revenue derived by the postoffice department from the sale of air mail stamps is sufficient to provide adequate pay for mail transportation over the trunk airways of the United States. This, it was indicated yesterday, is the concensus among officials of the lines which have offices in Chicago.

With all contracts between the airlines and the postoffice department expiring in April, May, and June, this topic of what constitutes a fair rate for transportation of air mail is a vital one for the industry. Some indication of just what the attitude of congress is to be upon this point is expected to be settled tomorrow or the next day when President Roosevelt is scheduled to make public the report of the Howell aviation commission.

Even among the operators themselves there is no agreement upon what constitutes a fair rate. Never since the pioneering days of the industry in 1924 and 1925 has a scientific method of paying the airline operators been worked out.

Urge Pound-Mile Pay Basis.

In general, however, the operators contend they should all be paid on a pound-mile basis—that is, they should be paid a basic rate for each pound of mail carried one mile. Under the existing contracts rates are on a mileage basis, with a maximum of 40 cents a mile regardless of the weight carried. This works to advantage for the small lines but decidedly to disadvantage of the larger companies, which handle the bulk of the mail trafic.

United Airlines, which carries an average of 45 per cent of all the air mail flown, often is called upon to haul 2,000 pounds of mail at one time. Such a load is actually flown at a loss, since two airplanes must be used in maintaining a schedule which calls for one plane, if any passengers have purchased tickets for the same trip.

Suggests 1.25-2 Mill Basis.

One operator who was willing to quote an actual figure avowed that rates should be set at between 1.25 mills and 2 mills per pound-mile. Others agreed that rates within those limits would make it possible for the air lines to earn actual operation costs from their mail contracts. Any profits would be made from passenger business, which is strictly seasonal.

Reducing the present mileage revenue of the lines to a pound-mile basis, the postoffice department's own statistical reports disclose that the four airlines which fly 90 per cent of all mail carried are receiving an average of 1.19 mills per pound-mile. Individually they were paid as follows: Eastern Airlines, 1.59 mills; American Airlines, 1.65 mills; Transcontinental Western Air, .71 mills, and United Airlines, .82 mills.

Stresses Need of Revision.

"The outstanding difficulty in air transportation today is the sudden and complete change of government policy toward this business. In the pioneering years the main objective of our government was to encourage the development of aviation and air transport. Aviation's national defense value was considered as was the economic value attributed to a major speeding up of mail and transportation progress," said one of the officials interviewed yesterday.

"I now believe that unless there is a reversion to this policy within 30 days the large companies will have reduced their entire cash resources to a point where they will be unable to carry on beyond June 15 without extensive refinancing which will not represent any new physical value but only the losses sustained during 1934."

WEST SUBURBAN HOSPITAL TO BE NOT FOR PROFIT

Votes for New Corporate Form to Save Taxes.

Stockholders of the West Suburban hospital of Oak Park have voted to transform the institution from a profit making to a not-for-profit corporation, it was learned yesterday. One of the principal motives for the change is the desire to obtain tax exemption for the hospital, according to spokesmen for the stockholders.

Under the reorganization plan, holders of $300,000 in preferred and $1,000,000 in common stock in the present hospital corporation will turn in their stock and receive in return low interest rate bonds of the new not-for-profit corporation. The bonds do not carry the privilege of foreclosure for interest defaults.

Institution of High Standing.

The hospital, known as one of the leading private institutions in the Chicago area, was founded by a group of physicians who have controled its business management as well as its professional direction. About 60 per cent of the stock is held by physicians. Medically, the institution has a class A [highest] rating.

Dr. Charles E. Humiston, a former president of the Chicago Medical society, was one of the founders and is still a trustee of the institution. Discussing the reorganization, Dr. Humiston said that all private hospitals have had hard financial sledding, and that under West Suburban's new corporate form the trustees expect to claim tax exemption.

Advantages in Taxation.

For some reason, which employés in the assessor's office surmised was merely an oversight, the hospital already has been exempt from real estate taxes for a number of years. As a not-for-profit corporation, according to Frederick W. Pringle, attorney for the trustees, it will be in a position to claim exemption also from the state capital stock tax and from federal processing, capital stock, and corporation income taxes.

"There are other reasons for forming the not-for-profit corporation" said Mr. Pringle. "As a private hospital, we have been unable to get charity patients toward whose expenses the relief authorities contribute.

Follows Example of Others.

Private patients also shy sometimes at going to a private hospital, thinking that because it is run for profit its rates are higher, although ours are no higher than those of any not-for-profit hospital giving equivalent service. Most of the private hospitals in Chicago have been turned into not-for-profit corporations in the last two years."

In at least one case, the transfer of a private hospital property to a not-for-profit corporation has failed to win tax exemption. The Garfield Park hospital underwent such a transformation in 1931, its stockholders receiving bonds for their equities. The assessor's staf refused it tax exemption for 1931 on the grounds that it was not a charitable institution, and the status of later years is still in litigation.

U. S. AGENTS TAKE GANGSTER OUT OF BELLEVUE; VANISH

Seize Weiss Kidnaping Suspect in N. Y.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Heavily armed federal agents went to the Bellevue hospital tonight, seized Walter Legenza, wounded gangster who is under sentence of death in Virginia, and carried him away in an ambulance. He was placed on a train in the Pennsylvania station, presumably to be taken to Richmond, although the agents declined to talk about their destination.

Through the roundup of a gang headed by Legenza and Robert Mais, who shot their way out of the state prison at Richmond on Sept. 29, 1934, the federal investigators and the police of Philadelphia believe they are nearing a solution of the kidnaping and murder of William Weiss in Philadelphia last October.

Believe Mais Went Along.

A report with the earmarks of authenticity had it that the agents here took Mais along with Legenza to the Virginia capital, where the sentence of death may be carried out. Another report was that they were being carried to Philadelphia for further questioning about the Weiss case.

Police Superintendent Joseph A. Lestrange of Philadelphia said late today that Martin Farrell, a companion of Mais and Legenza, had accompanied policemen to Neshaminy creek near the city and had pointed out to them the spot where the trio had tossed the body of Weiss after killing him. Federal agents have coöperated in the Weiss investigation and it was the roundup they made here on Friday that preceded the confession of Farrell. Mais also is said to have admitted participation in the crime.

Until their statements had been made the Philadelphia police had believed the body of the victim was tossed in the Delaware river. A ransom of $25,000, it has been reported, was paid by Weiss' relatives after he was killed.

At the place designated by Farrell the police dragged the creek and brought up a piece of cloth. They were forced to give up the work, however, by a heavy fog. They will resume tomorrow.

Mais and Legenza fled from the Richmond city jail after shooting three guards with pistols smuggled in to them. They eluded an intensive search and went to Philadelphia, where they seized Weiss on Oct. 26. Later Mais and Leganza engaged in a pistol battle with policemen there. Both escaped, but both of Legenza's legs were broken by bullets.

Round Up Whole Band.

He was brought here for treatment. The federal investigators found him, and through him the rest of the band. All had been questioned for four days before the whole story of their connection with the Weiss kidnaping was fully admitted.

Marie McKeever, girl friend of Mais, and Edwin Gale, a minor member of the gang, were seized here also and were sent to Philadelphia.

3 GREAT CHICAGO DENTAL SCHOOLS LEAD RESEARCH

Disease Prevention Field Well Established.

MAKE CHICAGO THE FIRST CITY IN THE WORLD

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Dentistry has its world's chief center in Chicago. This perhaps is natural enough in view of Chicago's contributions to the science of combating disease and the aches of mankind through proper care of the teeth.

Three great dental schools are here. For years they have attracted dentists from abroad to study advanced technique, while dental equipment made here is sent to all parts of the globe. Chicago dentists build clientèles in Europe.

Doctors, Surgeons, Dentists Unite.

Development of modern dentistry is the combined product of the doctors, surgeons, and dentists. Here are some of the historical sequences which the profession points to as showing the part played by Chicago:

Dr. Truman W. Brophy founded in 1882 the Chicago College of Dental Surgery, now the dental department of Loyola university. It is the fourth oldest dental school in the world. Dr. Brophy was an oral surgeon, and the Brophy operation for harelip and cleft palate is known throughout the world.

Five years later Dr. Greene V. Black founded Northwestern university dental school. Dr. Black is called the "father of modern operative dentistry." He developed dental nomenclature, and was known as dentistry's greatest scientific investigator and teacher. After his death in 1915 his statue was placed in Lincoln park.

U. of Illinois School Third.

The third school is the old Illinois Dental college, now the University of Illinois college of dentistry.

In medicine the late Dr. Frank Billings was foremost in his studies of focal infections at the roots of teeth, in tonsils, and elsewhere, and their relation to diseases of the system.

This focal infection theory and the discoveries of the havoc pus sacs may play with general bodily health was the chief factor that established dentistry in the great field of general disease prevention.

Thus it may be said that in Chicago dentistry emerged in its most modern phases as a special department of medical and surgical practice.

Research to Prevent Decay.

Now the dentists are concentrating on research to prevent dental decay. Educational work among the children is a great factor.

Ten years ago Dr. Charles Mayo said that three-fourths of the abdominal cases at the Mayo clinic in Rochester, Minn., came from mouth infections and that the next great step in preventive medicine must be taken by dentists. Good dentistry, it is said, can add ten years to human life expectancy. And that is the direction in which the profession is working today.

The Chicago Dental society, with 2,500 members, is the largest of its kind on earth. Its midwinter meeting attracts 10,000 to 12,000 dentists from near and far and is always an important event. Among its work the society has been waging a fight against charlatans and fake advertising.

Association Headquarters Here.

A quarter century ago in Chicago, the casting of dentures, inlays, bridges, and the rest, was standardized. Casting was not a new thing, but here it was developed to such a degree that dentists came from abroad to learn the latest technique.

Today artificial teeth look like natural ones. Bridgework fits, anesthetics have made dentistry and tooth pulling painless, the X-ray enables the dentist to learn of conditions down under the roots. Incipient cancer in the mouth is in the observation field of the dentist. Social welfare work in the schools and elsewhere has dentistry for an important segment. Industrial dentistry is growing.

It is estimated that if all the dental work needed in America could be done the cost of materials for bridgework alone would be about a billion dollars, while if all the work were done the aggregate bill would look like the national debt.

So one great drive is to educate the children that bad teeth are jungles for germs, a preventive work in which Chicago dentistry is a leader.

RICHARD SEARS II. IS FOUND INSANE; PUT IN HOSPITAL

Richard W. Sears II., son of one of the founders of Sears, Roebuck & Co., was adjudged insane at a hearing yesterday before County Judge Perry L. Persons of Lake county, and immediately was taken to Wilgus sanatorium, a private institution at Rockford.

The petition for the sanity hearing was filed yesterday by his uncle, Dr. James H. Robinson of Chicago, and his mother, Mrs. Anna L. Sears, testified at the short hearing held in the Sears home at Gages Lake, that her son had been drinking heavily since 1929. Lake county deputy sheriffs took him to the sanatorium shortly after the hearing which was conducted by a commission of three physicians appointed by Judge Persons.

STANLEY FIELD HEADS MUSEUM FOR 27TH YEAR

For the twenty-seventh time, Stanley Field was reëlected president of Field Museum of Natural History at the annual meeting of the institution's board of trustees which was held yesterday. Mr. Field has been president continuously since 1909.

All other officers who served during 1934 were reëlected. They are: Albert A. Sprague, first vice president; James Simpson, second vice president; Albert W. Harris, third vice president; Stephen C. Simms, director and secretary, and Solomon A. Smith, treasurer and assistant secretary.

U. S. LINER SAVES CREW OF 45 FROM SINKING VESSEL

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 21.—(AP)—The crew of 45 of the sinking Japanese freighter Hokuman Maru was snatched from death in a rescue in the Pacific ocean today.

Terse details of the dramatic rescue were flashed here by Capt. M. M. Jensen, master of the American mail liner President Jackson, which answered the stricken freighter's calls for assistance.

Capt. Jensen, in messages relayed to Globe Wireless said rough seas at first threatened to block the rescue attempts by making it impossible to bring lifeboats alongside the freighter, some 200 miles off the state of Washington.

Saves Crew in 2 Hours.

The seas quieted, however, and the liner was able to effect the rescue in less than two hours. The President Jackson continued her course from the orient toward Seattle, where she is due tomorrow. The Japanese freighter was left drifting helplessly.

The Hokuman Maru, a 4,000 ton vessel bound from Vancouver, B. C., for Osaka, Japan, started calling for aid early today, canceled the call, but at 10 a. m., again sought assistance. It was assumed the vessel's cargo of deck logs had shifted in rough weather, putting the freighter in distress.

Conquer Fire on British Ship.

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Fire in the British tanker Valverda, disabled in the Atlantic 1,200 miles east of the Bahamas, was conquered tonight, according to a message reported to have been sent to its owners. The French ship Petit Terre was standing by.

"Engine room completely gutted. Flames now subsided," read the message reported to have been sent to Glasgow by Capt. T. C. Thomas.

The Petit Terre flashed word to Mackay radio at 6 p. m. (C. S. T.) that it had reached the Valverda and was ready to give aid.

The British light cruiser Frobisher radioed that it expected to be alongside at 4 a. m tomorrow.

Other Ships Resume Course.

Three other vessels started to the spot near midocean, but resumed their course when informed the Petit Terre was at hand.

The Valverda's crew of thirty-six, it was reported late in the afternoon, was fighting to keep the fire away from her oil cargo.

The Valverda is a motor tanker, 8,807 tons gross register, built only last year and owned by Dow, Harrison & Co. of Glasgow, Scotland. It was reported bound from Rotterdam to Curacao in the Dutch West Indies.

SECOND HUSBAND IS JAILED FOR DIVORCE FRAUD

Frank J. Machovsky, 35 years old, 6530 South Troy street, a truck driver, was sentenced to 60 days in the county jail for contempt of court by Superior Judge Francis B. Allegretti yesterday after he was found guilty of testifying falsely in his divorce suit. He was the second husband ordered to jail for this cause within six days.

Machovsky won a default divorce from his wife, Florence, 33 years old, 1138 West 68th street, before Judge Allegretti last Oct. 5. He testified then that they had been married last Feb. 10 and had separated on March 31.

Yesterday Mrs. Machovsky testified that actually she lived with her husband until Sept. 3, when he deserted her, telling her to disregard a notice of the divorce suit, which she received last April.

Judge Allegretti ordered the divorce set aside, and instructed Attorney Reuben E. Swanson to draw up a counter suit for divorce for Mrs. Machovsky.

The first husband convicted of divorce fraud was Bernard J. Tasson, 5237 Fletcher street. He was sentenced last Wednesday to a year in jail.

Finds Husband She Believed Drowned Is Living on Coast

Mrs. Walter Lindstedt, of Kenosha, Wis., learned yesterday that her husband, who she thought was drowned in Lake Michigan when he disappeared last Sept. 7, is now living with a sister in Los Angeles, Cal. On the day he disappeared, Lindstedt's truck in which he delivered beer was found abandoned on the lake front in Waukegan. His overalls were found on the end of a pier nearby.

For Injured Comrade

Six policemen volunteered in a few minutes last night to give blood for a transfusion to Policeman John Brown of the New City station, who suffered serious injuries when he was struck by an automobile Jan. 10 at 43d street and Ashland avenue.

Chester Doonan, also of the New City station, was chosen as the first donor and the transfusion was conducted in the Evangelical hospital by Dr. J. C. Boodel. The condition of Policeman Brown, who is 44 years old and resides at 7709 South Hermitage avenue, was apparently improved by the operation. Dr. Boodel said that further transfusions would be necessary, however.

Andrew Reardon, 25 years old, 5722 South Wells street, whose automobile struck the policeman as he was directing trafic, was arrested on a charge of reckless driving. He is now at liberty on bonds.

MOVE TO SOFTEN ANTI-RELIGIOUS DRIVE IN MEXICO

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 21.—(AP)—A move to end the violent anti-religious campaign of various radical elements was taken today by the National Revolutionary [administration] party bloc in the chamber of deputies.

In announcing a program for explaining the purposes of socialistic education to the people of the nation, members of the bloc stated it would be carried out "without harming or trying to offend the religious beliefs of the people."

Outspoken opposition to the tactics of the Red Shirts, militant anti-Catholic organization formed by Secretary of Agriculture Garrido Canabal, was expressed by several deputies. The moderation of the deputies' program was expected to relieve the tenseness of the religious conflict which has cost several deaths in clashes in recent weeks.

Archbishop Pascual Diaz today indicated employés of the national revolutionary (government) party taking an active part in aiding the government's anti-religious propaganda face the probability of excommunication from the Catholic church.

Twelve Killed in Clash.

DURANGO, Mexico, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Eight rebels and three federal soldiers were killed today in a bitter fight resulting from a rebel attempt to hold up passengers after wrecking a train 20 miles west of here. The engineer was also killed.

SUIT DISMISSED, MRS. PEINE GETS POST WITH FIRM

The accounting suit filed a year ago by Mrs. Mercedes Peine, widow of Adolphus G. Peine, asking the dissolution of Alfred Decker & Cohn, a clothing manufacturing corporation, was dismissed by agreement yesterday by Circuit Judge Stanley H. Klarkowski. Peine was vice president of the company.

In her suit, the widow who holds $30,000 worth of the company's stock, charged that the officers and directors of the company permitted the company's assets to be wasted.

Attorney Ernest Schein, counsel for Mrs. Peine, in explaining the settlement said the widow had been asked to participate in running the concern and that she would take charge of a new women's wear department. Mrs. Peine is the former Countess Sencierski of Russia and the Argentine.

HUNT KARPIS IN PENNSYLVANIA; AUTO IS FOUND

BULLETIN.

Medina, O., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Two men, who Sherif Roy Kruggel believes may have been Alvin Karpis and Harry Campbell, kidnaped Dr. H. H. Hunsicker of Allentown, Pa., near Sellersville, Pa., at midnight last night. The men, armed with machine guns, forced the doctor into the back seat of his car. He said they trussed him and left him in a Grange hall near Wadsworth, O.

Dr. Hunsicker was left in the hall late tonight and freed himself in about an hour.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Armed and desperate, Alvin Karpis and his companion, Alvin Campbell, sped over eastern Pennsylvania highways tonight, pursued by federal, state, and local forces of law.

The full force of the state police and the federal government in the area was thrown into the hunt for America's Public Enemy No. 1 and his wounded companion, who blasted their way out of a police trap in Atlantic City yesterday and made good their escape from New Jersey.

They were trailed today into the wild and lonely Haycock mountain country, 40 miles north of Philadelphia and about 100 miles from the scene of their machine gunning break from an Atlantic City hotel.

There, two and a half miles from Quakertown, in Bucks county, on the fringe of the hilly, wooded Haycock area, the green sedan they stole in their flight from the shore was found.

Bullets had ripped its body in the rear and smashed its windshield. In it several machine gun shells were found.

From the spot on the lonely farm lane at which they deserted the car three courses lay open to them. Tonight authorities gave chase over the three roads.

Obtain Another Car?

One, considered the most likely, was that they had obtained another car—probably one of seven reported stolen in Bucks county during the day—and roared toward Philadelphia, hoping to make good their escape with the aid of one of the heaviest fogs to drop on eastern Pennsylvania in years.

The second was that they had taken to the Haycock mountains, there to go into hiding to obtain medical care for the wounds Campbell, machine-gunning pal of the gangster wanted in the kidnaping of Edwin J. Bremer, suffered in the break from Atlantic City yesterday.

The third possibility—and this was considered remote—was that after obtaining another car they had headed north and west, speeding into the more mountainous regions of central Pennsylvania.

Seen at Doylestown.

Credence was lent to the possibility that their immediate destination was Philadelphia when the Bucks county police broadcast an alarm that two men, one identified as Karpis, the other probably Campbell, had been sighted in Doylestown, county seat 25 miles north of Philadelphia, and were traveling fast in the direction of Philadelphia.

"Be on the lookout for car containing two men, one of them Alvin Karpis," the alarm said. "Left Doylestown, Pa., headed for Philadelphia at fast rate of speed. Use caution. These men are armed."

Federal agents, many of them recalled from Atlantic City after the abandoned car was found, pointed out that, regardless of the route the fugitives took, they were at a disadvantage because they had no knowledge of the eastern Pennsylvania sector.

Locality New to Karpis.

These operatives pointed out that Karpis was in totally unfamiliar territory in this area, since all his previous known haunts have been reported in Oklahoma City and other midwest points.

In southeastern Pennsylvania he and Campbell will find not only the lonely, hilly area in which their car was discovered, but a maze of highways and by-roads on which a stranger is readily lost.

A cordon of state police, federal agents, etc., was thrown across virtually every road in this part of the state while some state police searched the Haycock mountain area.

Two Women Held.

Meantime the two women Karpis and Campbell left behind them when they fled Atlantic City in their underclothing were brought to Philadelphia by federal agents.

One, known as Louise Graham, alias Dolores Delaney, police said, was wounded in the leg in the gun battle in the Shore City hotel. The other girl has identified herself to federal authorities as Winona Burdett, radio singer.

Karpis' Parents Tell Story of His Career as a Criminal

A little wizened man, John Karpavicz by name, was busy yesterday answering the calls of tenants in an apartment building at 2842 North Francisco avenue. They were demanding more heat. His wife, Anna, had arisen at dawn to sweep the snow from the sidewalks about the building.

Neither of them had time to read the newspaper headlines about the latest doings of their only son. In fact, Mrs. Karpavicz, who cannot read English, expected a daughter to tell her the story last evening.

The son, known to the law as Alvin Karpis, and to newspaper readers as the current Public Enemy No. 1, was the quarry of scores of federal agents somewhere in the east, after he and a companion had machine-gunned their way out of a police trap Sunday in an Atlantic City, N. J., hotel.

It's the Old, Old Story.

Speaking broken English, and suspicious of visitors, Mr. and Mrs. Karpavicz had little to say about Alvin, whom they have not seen in three years. What they told gave the not unusual picture of a son of poor but hard working parents turning to petty thievery, eventually being graduated from reform school to a career of major crimes.

"He stole automobile tires and they sent him to the reformatory," said the mother, explaining her son's start on his criminal career.

"I'm a good, honest American, a citizen," said Karpavicz repeatedly. He works hard as the janitor of the building.

"There's certainly no place in this flat for him," said Mrs. Emily Newbold, one of three sisters of the fugitive.

Karpis' "Rise" as a Criminal.

Karpis, now sought as one of the leaders of the gang which kidnaped Edward G. Bremer, St. Paul banker, and collected $200,000 ransom, was sent to a reformatory in Kansas as a petty burglar when he was 17 years old. Four years later, having escaped from the reformatory, he was sent to the Kansas state prison on the same charge. Freed within a year, he was rearrested almost immediately and sentenced to four years in the Oklahoma penitentiary at McAlester as a burglar, only to win a parole a short time later.

Since that time he has been named as a participant in four murders, in addition to the Bremer kidnaping. The first was that of Sheriff C. R. Kelly of West Plains, Mo., in December, 1931, in which Fred Barker, another of the Bremer kidnapers recently killed in Florida, was also implicated.

Linked with Dillinger.

A few months later Karpis and Barker were charged with the murder of Barker's father-in-law, A. W. Dunlap, at Webster, Wis. Karpis is believed to have been a member of the Dillinger gang when it killed W. Carter Baum, Chicago department of justice agent, at the Little Bohemia resort in Wisconsin last April. The fourth killing ascribed to him, with Fred Barker as a confederate, is that of John Lazia, Democratic leader in Kansas City, Mo., who was murdered last July.

Two minor confederates of Karpis in the Bremer kidnaping were arrested two weeks ago in Chicago and are now held in St. Paul, it was learned yesterday. The men are Harold Alderton, who rented the Bensenville apartment, discovered Sunday, in which Bremer was held captive for three weeks, and Elmer Farmer, another Bensenville resident, who is charged with harboring members of the gang.

Bremer Goes Before Jury.

As a result of the Bensenville discovery it probably will be necessary to get a new federal indictment charging members of the Karpis gang with violating the "Lindbergh" kidnaping statute. The previous indictment merely charged that the gang had taken Bremer to some unknown place in Wisconsin.

Dispatches from St. Paul stated that Bremer was among witnesses who appeared before the federal grand jury there yesterday, presumably to tell its members how he identified the premises where he was held on a recent visit to Bensenville. Alderton and Farmer, it was announced at St. Paul by United States Attorney George F. Sullivan, will be indicted on charges of harboring the kidnapers.

U. S. APOLOGIZES TO CANADA FOR RUM BOAT LOSS

Government to Pay for Vessel Sunk.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—United States' apology to the Canadian government for the sinking of the liquor running schooner I'm Alone by the coast guard in the Gulf of Mexico on March 22, 1929, has been made in a note from Secretary Hull to William D. Herridge, the Canadian minister.

The note explained that as soon as the necessary government authorization was received here Mr. Hull would also send a check for $50,666.50 to cover compensation of $25,000 to the Canadian government and damages of $25,666.50 to the master and members of the crew of the schooner, or their relatives.

Text of Hull's Note.

The apology and financial award were directed by a board of arbitration which found in favor of Canada. Secretary Hull's note read as follows:

"Sir: I have the honor to refer to the joint final report, dated Jan. 5, 1935, of the commissioners appointed by the United States and Canada to consider the claim of Canada in respect to the sinking of the schooner I'm Alone on March 22, 1929, which was filed with our respective governments on Jan. 9, 1935.

"The note that the commissioners found as a fact that, from September, 1928, down to the date of the sinking, the vessel was owned, controled, and at the critical times managed, her movements directed, and her cargo dealt with and disposed of, by a group of persons acting in concert who 'were entirely, or nearly so, citizens of the United States, and who employed her for the purposes mentioned,' namely, rum running, the cargo being destined for illegal introduction into, and sale in, the United States, and that they concluded that no damages should be awarded for the vessel or cargo, but, nevertheless, recommended that certain other payments should be made by the United States.

Asking for Appropriation.

"In accordance with the recommendations of the commissioners and the provision of article 4 of the convention of 23, 1924, that effect shall be given to the recommendations contained in the joint report of the commissioners, I am taking steps to obtain an appropriation for $50,666.50 which the commissioners recommended should be paid by the United States to his majesty's Canadian government.

"Although the commissioners find that the mission and use of the vessel at the time of its sinking were unlawful, nevertheless they also find that its sinking by the United States officers was unlawful. The government of the United States, therefore tenders to his majesty's Canadian government an apology for the sinking of the vessel."

COUNTY ACTS TO MAKE MONTHLY FISCAL REPORTS

President Clayton Smith of the Cook county board introduced a resolution yesterday at a board meeting under which it would be the settled policy of the board to make monthly or quarterly reports of the county government's financial condition for the information of taxpayers.

The resolution would put on a permanent basis, so far as the county is concerned, the periodical fiscal reports which heads of all of the major local governments have instructed their finance departments to prepare. The first of these reports, that of the sanitary district, was made public last week.

President Smith's resolution was referred to the board's finance committee, in order that the commissioners might confer with Michael J. O'Connor, deputy county controler, and Lee Howard, county auditor, on the form of the reports.

BORAH LAMBASTS WORLD COURT AS A SNARE FOR U. S.

Says It's Political, Not Judicial.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—William E. Borah of Idaho, dean and foremost orator of the senate, today delivered what probably will be his last address in a twelve year effort to keep the United States out of the league of nations world court.

The veteran campaigner spoke in a modulated, judicial tone as he assailed the court as a political and nonjudicial body which would inevitably embroil America in the political affairs of Europe. His address commanded silent and respectful attention save for a few interruptions from Majority Leader Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas, and seemed to have a profound effect on many of the doubtful senators.

Nevertheless, Senator Robinson expressed confidence after the senate recessed that the resolution of adherence would be adopted within the next four or five days, in fulfillment of the administration's demands.

Advisory Jurisdiction Assailed.

Senator Borah addressed himself solely to the question of the advisory jurisdiction of the court, which can be invoked by the league of nations but not by parties litigant. Reservation No. 5 of the pending protocols provides that such advisory opinions cannot be given, over an objection of this country, in any case in which the United States asserts an interest. But Senator Borah contended that the United States could still be drawn into political questions of Europe in which it had no interest.

"We are not dealing with a judicial tribunal," he declared. "Throw around the form of adhesion whatever safeguards you may, it still remains a tribunal into which political questions will inevitably intrude, into which economic questions will inevitably intrude, and into which national feelings will inevitably intrude."

Reviews Customs Case.

As an example of the political nature of the court, Senator Borah reviewed at great length the Austro-German customs union case, in which the league of nations requested an advisory opinion on the treaty.

"It was supposed to involve nothing but an interpretation of that treaty, whether Austria had alienated her independence in violation of the treaty of St. Germain," the senator said. "But the majority of that court yielded to political demands when they were called upon to render an opinion in which their respective nations were supremely interested.

"The chancellors of Europe invoked the aid of the court to accomplish their political ends and before the decision was handed down they knew what it was going to be and used it to bludgeon Germany and Austria into a dissolution of the treaty.

Political Hurricane.

"The treaty virtually established free trade between the two countries, and could not possibly have limited Austria's independence. But it burst like a storm, a political hurricane, over Europe. Briand declared publicly that France would use force if necessary to dissolve it.

"After the court had rendered its decision, the press of Europe almost universally denounced the Belgian judge for dissenting. The French press accused him of going off on a legal question and refusing to consider the political and economic consequences. The French newspapers called him a deserter."

Senator Robinson interrupted several times to declare that, in his opinion, there was nothing political in the decision, and that, anyway, the economic consequences justified the court's action.

Senator Borah said he would not no objection to a purely judicial tribunal to which nations could resort for a judicial settlement of differences, but that American policy was opposed to any intrusion in foreign political questions.

Postman Gets 18 Months for Stealing $874 Mail

Noble M. Sturn, 35 years old, 3065 Ninth avenue, Maywood, a substitute mail carrier, was sentenced to 18 months in Leavenworth penitentiary yesterday by Federal Judge William H. Holly for taking $874 from registered mail. Sturn pleaded guilty, but said he took the package of 14 registered letters from the desk in the Maywood post office last Nov. 1 as a joke on the clerk. All the money was recovered, but bonds worth $11,000 are believed to have been burned by Sturn.

KING ZOG SEEKS $1,000,000 A YEAR AMERICAN BRIDE

Wants Brains, Beauty and Ability, Too.

VIENNA, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Bachelor King Zog of Albania—39 years old and not bad looking—is casting around for a $1,000,000 a year American bride with enough intelligence and courage to help him reform his backward and sometimes violent little mountain kingdom.

The million dollar part of it is not a joke, and so far has been the principal objection to all well meant suggestions. American brides with seven figure annual incomes and the other necessary qualifications advanced thought, ability, and personal attractiveness] admittedly are not plentiful.

On several occasions King Zog has confided to friends that he would like an American girl as a bride, being more western in his ideas than inclined toward a Mohammedan marriage.

Liked Viennese Blonde.

At one time he took the American minister to Albania, then Charles C. Hart, former Washington newspaper correspondent, into his confidence and asked him to look over the field in the United States.

Hart made a survey and took back a number of marriageable names, including that of Miss Natalie Hays Hammond, only daughter of John Hays Hammond, American millionaire mining engineer and promoter. It was said Miss Hammond failed to qualify because her income fell short of $1,000,000.

For some time King Zog, the only bachelor monarch in the world, paid attentions to a beautiful Viennese blonde, but it appeared that her lack of money and title prevented a royal match.

The present King of Egypt, Fuad I., has three daughters, but all are too young for King Zog. Brothers and sisters in Fuad's numerous family have a number of marriageable daughters and it is thought by some the king may offer his hand and throne to one of these.

Italy Pulls Out.

Zog is trying to reform his little backward mountain kingdom. He has substituted a western code of justice for medieval vendetta and blood feuds which for centuries have cursed Albania as the dreaded Blackhand cursed Italy. Zog himself has led a romantically violent life, and his conquest of the throne in 1928 was a personal triumph. Political considerations make the financial assets of any prospective queen important. For some time Italy has been financing Albania in the hope of making a stanch ally. But Italy is said to have become tired of "holding the bag" and in consequence Zog is now said to be looking for new financial backing.

LAST STEP TAKEN TO GET PWA LOAN FOR SEAWAY LINK

The last step necessary to assure the granting of $2,814,000 by the Public Works administration for the Calumet-Sag link in the lakes to gulf waterway was taken yesterday when the county board adopted a resolution to pay $34,360 for eight pieces of privately owned property needed for easements on the south side of the Calumet river in Riverdale.

The sanitary district already has deeded to the government 200 acres of land necessary to the project and has voted $35,000. The city has appropriated $200,000, and a number of municipalities in the area have all deeded the stub ends of streets for easements.

Fire Destroys Vacant Residence; Hunt Arsonist

A fire which destroyed a vacant two story residence at 842 Lill avenue early today was attributed by the police and firemen to an incendiary. Lieut. Stephen J. Barry of the Sheffield avenue police and Chief Alvin Brandt of fire battalion 13 were told by persons living in the vicinity that a man was seen to run from the building shortly before flames broke out in four places. The roof of the home of Max Winkler, 846 Lill avenue, was damaged and the family was driven to the street. Total damage was estimated at about $2,500.

107 MASSACRED BY TRIBESMEN IN FRENCH AFRICA

Paris Official, Police Among Victims.

DJIBOUTI, French Somaliland, Jan. 21.—(AP)—One hundred and seven persons, including a French administrative official, were reported massacred today in this French-African territory by nomad tribesmen.

Those massacred were reported to include, besides the Frenchman, 18 native members of the Djibouti police force and 88 Somalis.

Seek Further Information.

PARIS, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Colonial authorities tonight were pressing Djibouti for further information of the reported massacre of 107 persons in Somaliland.

It was stated there are wild nomad tribesmen who live in desert regions along the Ethiopian border, sometimes staying within Ethiopia and at others living in French, Italian or English territory, and giving allegiance to no government whatever.

A report reaching here described the perpetrators of the massacre as coming from Ethiopian provinces, but doubt was expressed if the Ethiopian government, even if this were the case, could be held responsible any more than any other government along the border.

The administration of the interior regions of French Somaliland is carried on by French administrators who control large regions, being responsible directly to the governor general.

PORT AND RAIL TERMINAL.

Djibouti, French Somaliland, on the northern coast of Africa, is France's seaport terminal for the railroad leading to Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia. It is populated by French colonials, Somalis, and a sprinkling of international settlers.

It borders upon Italian Somaliland, focus of Italy's colonial expansion plans in northern Africa.

Somaliland and its neighboring territory, bordering upon Ethiopia, are the locale of recent violent clashes between Italian and Ethiopian forces, resulting in protests from both countries to the league of nations, with conflicting claims as to the responsibility for the outbreaks.

EASTMAN SPURS LAKE FRONT RAIL TERMINAL HOPES

Report Cites Need Here for Modern Facilities.

Advocates of Chicago's project of a $15,000,000 consolidated passenger station on the lake front saw hopes of federal sanction and support yesterday in a report made public in Washington by Joseph B. Eastman, railroad coördinator.

In an analysis of the modernization of railway passenger service, the report declared that in cities like Chicago the present cumbersome and expensive system of switching and transferring the traveling public must be eliminated.

Experts who drew the report said that to modernize the railroads in Chicago calls for consolidation of terminals on the lines laid down years ago by the Chicago Plan commission.

Envision 3 Modern Terminals.

The project of the city planners contemplates the construction at Randolph street just east of Michigan avenue of a $15,000,000 modern terminal to house 18 railroads, and the demolition of the four railway stations now scattered east of the river and south of the loop.

When completed, all of Chicago's trunk lines would then be concentrated into three modern terminals, the present North Western and the Union stations both west of the river, and the new structure at Randolph street.

The consolidated station project has been delayed by failure to reach an agreement among the railroads. The attitude of Mr. Eastman is viewed as a potent influence. If an agreement is reached, it is deemed likely that a request would be made for loans from the federal Public Works administration.

The report submitted by Coördinator Eastman named four cities where modernization is especially needed by the railroads.

The Object to Be Attained.

"The greatest need for intercarrier trains is found at the transcontinental gateways—Chicago, St. Louis, Memphis, and New Orleans," it said.

As to consolidations such as the one proposed in Chicago, the Eastman report asserted:

"From the traveler's standpoint the service should be unified by operation of joint depots at all common points of intercarrier trains, so that whenever possible delay, annoyance, and inconvenience of trains or depot transfers will be avoided."

Asked specifically about the Chicago problem, Mr. Eastman replied that he was reserving judgment until he received the report of the special committee which has been studying the situation for him.

6 CHILDREN SEE FATHER SHOOT WIFE, KILL SELF

While their six children looked on, George Tomsic, 46 years old, shot and possibly fatally wounded his wife, Theresa, 36 years old, and then killed himself with a bullet in the head early today in the basement flat of the family at 2652 South Sacramento avenue.

Mrs. Tomsic, an expectant mother, was struck in the abdomen. At the County hospital, where she was taken, it was said her chance to recover was slight.

The couple had quarreled and Tomsic was choking his wife when she called to Frances, 11 years old, eldest of the children. The child ran into the room and was thrust out by the father. The other youngsters were awakened and all tried to push in as their mother screamed. When they succeeded in entering they saw Tomsic fire on Mrs. Tomsic and then shoot himself.

Tomsic formerly worked in a factory manufacturing slot machines. He had been unemployed for months and on relief.

Sullivan Refuses to Dismiss Lofton Writ Contempt Case

Quickly overruling two motions asking that a contempt citation petition be dismissed against Attorney Joseph B. Lofton, 77 West Washington street, Chief Justice Denis E. Sullivan of the Criminal court yesterday allowed the attorney ten days in which to file a written answer to the charges.

Attorney Lofton, with Attorney Harrington representing him, appeared before the chief justice in the hearing at which he was charged with contempt of Judge Sullivan's court by obtaining the release of a prisoner from Joliet penitentiary in habeas corpus proceedings before Circuit Judge Max F. Allaben of Wheaton. Previously Judge Sullivan had told Lofton that he would refuse to issue such a writ on the ground that an appeal to the Supreme court was the proper procedure and he granted the request of Attorney Lofton that the court clerk prepare the record of the case in which Milton Panateles had been sent to Joliet for robbery in order that the record could be used in preparation of the appeal petition.

Record Used to Win Writ.

This record, however, was used in the habeas corpus hearing before Judge Allaben and was the basis of the contempt petition Judge Sullivan had instructed the state's attorney's office to draw up against Lofton.

When the clerk called the case yesterday Attorney Harrington handed Judge Sullivan the first of the written motions which asked the dismissal of the petitions on the ground that the court had no jurisdiction.

"Denied!" ruled Judge Sullivan as he pushed the document aside and he was handed the second petition which declared that, if there were a contempt, it had occurred in Du Page county and not Cook county.

"Denied!" the judge repeated. He then allowed Attorney Harrington ten days in which to prepare a defense on the charge.

"Where is this man Panateles supposed to be now?" Judge Sullivan inquired of Attorney Lofton, and was told the freed convict's address was 412 South Halsted street.

Orders Capias for Robber.

"Issue a capias and have him brought in here," he said to his clerk. "Do you know where he actually is now," turning again to Lofton.

"I saw him in my office yesterday," the attorney replied, "but since I have been retained as his lawyer I do not feel at liberty to disclose his whereabouts."

Attorney Lofton, who is chairman of the Chicago Bar association's committee on the defense of poor persons, took up Panateles' case after the prisoner had written to the association complaining that he was not fairly sentenced because he had been improperly represented by the public defender at his trial.

"When did your retainer close your mouth so you can't answer an ethical question in this court?" Judge Sullivan shot back.

Attorney Harrington explained that since the bar association forbade Lofton to accept a fee in the case, a retainer fee could not therefore be a criterion of when he had begun to represent Panateles.

"In the meantime, where is Panateles?" the judge asked again. He received no answer, and directed his bailif to notify the police department to "send out a general alarm and bring him in."

Asks Scope of Charges.

"We would like to know," Attorney Harrington told the court, "just what items of contempt Mr. Lofton will have to answer. Newspapers said on the 15th that you charged him with contempt and yet the petition cites subsequent acts."

"Mr. Harrington," replied Judge Sullivan as he leaned forward, "do you think the practice of law is a bag of tricks?"

A discussion of Panateles' present status with the law followed, whether he should be granted a new trial as had been ordered by Judge Harry M. Fisher and overruled by Judge Joseph B. David; whether he should be allowed to appeal to the Supreme court or be sent back to Joliet under the original mittimus. This discussion was interrupted by Judge Sullivan:

"I want to know if the prisoner has taken it on high!"

As the hearing was adjourned the police reported to Judge Sullivan that Panateles had not lived at the Halsted street address since he was sentenced in 1926, and that apparently he "had taken it on high."

Midlothian Schools Stay Closed; Await Legislation

The four grade schools in Midlothian, with their 920 pupils, were unable to reopen yesterday. County Superintendent Aken had expected them to open in anticipation of the general assembly's passage of the $200,000 school relief bill. School officials concluded not to incur obligations until funds became legally available.

HOMESTEAD PLAN ERRORS BLAMED ON 'EXPERIMENTS'

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Costly errors in development of subsistence homesteads were conceded tonight by the official in charge of their development and attributed to "the necessity of some experimentation."

Charles E. Pynchon, general manager of the Federal Subsistence Homesteads corporation, in an address said the enterprises, however, were "an adventure in humanity," holding possibilities of untold good for the future.

Sixty-two subsistence homestead projects have been approved, Pynchon said. When completed they will accommodate approximately 6,500 families. A total of 19 million out of a 25 million dollar revolving fund has been allocated. The mistakes, he said, were made at Reedsville, W. Va., the first project to be completed.

"There," he said, "we have centered various experimental endeavors." The project, he added, will cost more than estimates prescribed and more than the homesteaders will be called upon to pay.

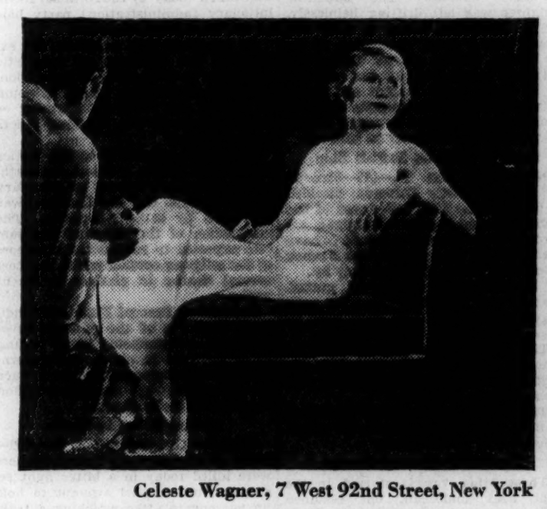
REAL INTERVIEWS WITH REAL FOLKS as told to Marion Lang EX-LAX Reporter

"I NEVER USE ANYTHING BUT EX-LAX"

says famous fashion model of New York



Celeste Wagner, 7 West 92nd Street, New York

"LIGHTS" ordered the cameraman. Miss Wagner took her pose under the blazing Kleig lamps. "Hold that pose", he commanded. They tried "shot" after "shot". If you don't think that's hard work, try it sometime. You'd be surprised, but you have to think of your health on a job like that.

Celeste Wagner stepped down from the model stand. The Ex-Lax reporter explained her mission. They talked it over, woman to woman. And here are the highlights of the comments made by one of New York's top fashion models:

"Running around all day from studio to studio on calls for posing, my meals are taken whenever I get a spare moment.

"Naturally, my stomach must be kept in perfect condition for I must be ready any time of the day or evening for a call for a quick shot (posing). Therefore, I cannot use a laxative other than Ex-Lax, for I can take two tablets of Ex-Lax upon retiring and know that I'll be able to get out on my work feeling fine next day.

"My mother first told me to try Ex-Lax about two years ago, since she found it excellent for herself and other members of our family. Mother heard of Ex-Lax on the radio program."

You don't have to be facing the camera and the Kleig lights to be just as much benefited by Ex-Lax. Every day you're facing the world... and your duties. You and Miss Wagner have this in common... when you need a laxative you want to be sure it's the right one.

Don't take a harsh laxative. It may do more harm than good. Ex-Lax is as thorough as any laxative you can take... yet, it is gentle. And gentleness means that it won't cause stomach pains, it won't leave you weak, it won't upset you. You hardly know you've taken a laxative, except for the results—the wonderful, pleasant, painless relief from constipation.

Then, too, Ex-Lax won't form a habit... you don't have to keep on increasing the dose to get results. And it's such a pleasure to take... just like eating a little piece of delicious chocolate.

That "Certain Something"

These are the facts about Ex-Lax. But to understand why so many people wouldn't even consider using any other laxative, you must go beyond the facts. Ex-Lax has a "certain something"—a certain satisfaction that they cannot find in any other laxative. It can't be put into words, but once you've tried Ex-Lax you won't be satisfied with less. It's just a "plus" quality... the combination of all of its qualities combined in the exclusive Ex-Lax way that puts Ex-Lax in a class by itself.

You can get Ex-Lax at any drug store... in 10c and 25c boxes. Look for the exact spelling... E-X-L-A-X. Don't experiment with substitutes!

COLD WAVE HERE... and we mean colds. Sneezing, sniffling, coughing, misery-creating colds. Guard against them this way: Get enough sleep, eat sensibly, dress warmly, keep out of drafts, keep your feet dry, and KEEP REGULAR... with Ex-Lax, the delicious chocolated laxative.

LOSES 28 POUNDS IN MEDICAL TEST

By Dr. W. M. Thompson.

"The results of recent medical experimentation of the detoxication methods of fat reduction is creating unusual interest. As a warning to those overweight it may be said that fat is as dangerous to the health as it is unattractive to the appearance. Doctors testing this detoxication method have reported on various cases. As an example: a case under observation of a married lady, thirty-four years of age, who was active yet continued to remain overweight until this method was employed. She quickly then lost twenty-eight pounds with no ill effects." If you are one of the 95% whose overweight is due to a toxic condition, overeating, drinking or faulty elimination, use the detoxication method at home for fat reduction, by obtaining BonKora, now available at your druggist. Thousands have already used it successfully to remove their excess weight, whether it be five pounds or fifty pounds. BonKora is harmless, easy to take and inexpensive. Those who want to reduce healthfully, should get BonKora from their druggist.—Adv.

4 BILLION BILL FILED IN HOUSE; POWER IS ISSUE

Gag Rule Program Brings Committee Revolt.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—An act clothing President Roosevelt with absolute powers over the spending of 4 billion 880 million dollars was introduced in the house of representatives today.

The huge spending measure would be the broadest grant of powers from the legislative to executive branch of the government during the present régime.

The 4 billion appropriation could be spent in amounts and in any corner of the land decided upon by the President and his circle of advisers. The remaining 880 millions would be used for relief until, according to the President's recent message, men were back at work in private industry.

Many Up in Arms.

Reporting out of the bill by Representative James P. Buchanan [Dem., Tex.], chairman of the house appropriations committee, precipitated a revolt in the rules committee. Some of the congressmen were up in arms because the measure had not earmarked their pet state projects.

The disaffection was not regarded as serious enough, however, to block the passage of a drastic gag rule by the committee before the house resumes its deliberations tomorrow noon.

The rule under consideration, it leaked out, would close debate on the rule itself to one hour and arguments on the spending program to three hours. An additional provision would prohibit any amendments except those offered by the appropriations committee.

Democrats Fail to Agree.

Unable to reach an agreement, the Democrats of the rules committee postponed the meeting until tomorrow although permission of the house to file the rule by midnight tonight had been gained earlier. The delay means that there can be no vote on the spending bill until Wednesday.

At a caucus of the Republican congressmen tonight it was decided to move to recommit the bill back to the committee and propose an amendment apportioning the 4 billions to the states according to the number of unemployed.

"The sentiment was unanimous against such an abdication of the powers of congress as this bill presents," said Minority Leader Bertrand Snell.

In general terms the bill appropriates the money "to be used in the discretion and under the direction of the President" for slum clearance, rural housing and electrification, reforestation, land reclamation, highways, CCC work "and other useful federal or non-federal work."

Civil Service Disregarded.

The bill specifically provides that the President may make appointments without regard to civil service laws or the classification act setting the compensation of officers and employés. It would be the President's power to prescribe and utilize the governmental agencies as he saw fit.

Another section sets forth that any one violating a rule or regulation laid down by executive order should be punishable by a fine not to exceed $5,000 or imprisonment not exceeding two years, or both.

The four billion dollar outlay is a completely new appropriation and amounts to more than a pre-depression federal budget. The 880 million dollars would be obtained from a half billion transfer from the RFC and unexpended balances from New Deal agencies.

Following introduction of the bill Minority Leader Snell inquired whether the house members would have a chance to look over the measure before its passage.

During the ensuing laughter from both sides Representative John J. O'Connor [Dem., N. Y.], chairman of the rules committee, said that they would.

40 Million Loan Bill Passes.

The house passed the Jones bill providing for loans of 40 million dollars to farmers who were unable to muster collateral for advances in the normal channels of finance. The only security for obtaining the new loans from the Farm Credit administration would be liens on live stock or growing crops.

Republican members protested in vain over the quick passage of the farm loan bill under a rule prohibiting amendments.

Hearings on the President's economic security program were begun before the house ways and means committee. The administration bill provides for $98,500,000 in expenditures the first year and $218,500,000 in subsequent years. The first witness was Edwin E. Witte, executive director of the committee on economic security. Secretary of Labor Perkins will appear tomorrow.

Jess Jones, head of the Reconstruction Finance corporation, appeared before the house banking and currency committee to urge the extension of the RFC for two more years.

NRA WAGE SCALE BLAMED AS 100 FACTORIES CLOSE

20,000 Shirt Workers May Lose Jobs.

New York, Jan. 21.—[[Special.]—One hundred shirt contractors, employing 20,000 shirtmakers in New York, Connecticut, and Pennsylvania, failed to open their shops today because, operating under NRA wage scales, they have been losing money for a year, it was announced by Jacob H. Steinberg, counsel for the National Association of Men's Shirt and Boys' Blouse Contractors.

Meyer Feinberg, the association's representative, told the cotton garment code authority, of which he is a member, that unless prices above cost were guaranteed the contractors would not open their shops. The authority took the demands of the association under advisement.

Counsel Tells of "Squeeze."

As Mr. Steinberg explained the plight of the contractors, they are being squeezed between NRA labor levels on one side and price cutting on the other. The shirt manufacturers who hire the contractors to make their garments constantly are at war with each other, he declared.

With the retail market in constant flux, they cannot sell shirts at a profit without cutting manufacturing costs. Thus they refuse to pay the contractors enough to enable them longer to continue to pay the minimum of 32½ cents an hour, established by the code.

At present, the association's counsel asserted, manufacturers are paying contractors between $2 and $2.50 a dozen for grade C shirts, which retail around 89 cents, while the cost of making them under the NRA is $2.50 a dozen.

Suggests Code Change.

Members of the association make 90 per cent of the shirts not produced by the large makers of advertised brands. The latter operate their own shops and are able to obtain retail prices above the general level at which the independents must sell their product.

The association has asked Washington to place responsibility for maintaining the code wage scale upon the manufacturers. As an alternative, it suggested that a temporary minimum retail price be written into the code. Mr. Steinberg said no reply had been received from Washington.

FAIR COMMITTEE TO START DETAIL WORK IN 2 DAYS

Leonard Hicks, permanent chairman of Mayor Kelly's World's Fair committee, announced yesterday that the committee would meet within the next two days to map out a definite program for giving Chicago the "world's finest playland center." "With our miles of lake front, our educational and recreational facilities, and our ideal location and climate in summer, we can offer the world something that no other city can approach," said Mr. Hicks. "We should have in Burnham park the largest convention hall in the world. Using certain structures as a nucleus, we can build a permanent exposition that will attract conventions and people from all over the country, thereby increasing our resources and keeping Chicago in the foreground."

218 Scholarships Given During Year by League

During 1934 the Children's Scholarship league gave scholarships to 218 high school students, according to an announcement yesterday by Mrs. Alma Livermore, executive secretary of the organization. Funds are derived from voluntary contributions. At the league's annual meeting at noon on Jan. 31 at 333 North Michigan avenue Dean Charles W. Gilkey of the University of Chicago is to speak.

'Times' Are Getting Better—Mr. America Is Dressing Up

Better times are here. That was the theme in the Palmer house yesterday as some five hundred delegates to the three day convention of the National Association of Clothiers and Furnishers gathered to decide what masculine America will wear this spring and summer. The clothiers predict that 1935 is going to be the best year the apparel men have had since the high silk hat and tail coat era of 1929.

What man wears is an accurate barometer of the times, according to P. B. Juster, Minneapolis, chairman of the national style committee. The "average man," he said, dresses down to bad times and in good years "takes a feather from the tail of the peacock."

But this spring and summer the peacock can learn from man. Colors are in favor. Rougher fabrics, tweeds, cheviots, and homespun are the order of the day. This summer the whites of the tropics will prevail, and sports clothes, with shirred backs and side pleats, will be the favorite of the man of leisure.

Two Factors Guide the Mode.

Two reasons are given for the change in the clothing habits of a nation. During the depression men wore out their old clothes and were slow to make new purchases. Now these clothes are threadbare and shiny. A return of optimism and the necessity of replacing worn cut garments has sent man on a shopping expedition. And his cheerful outlook for the future is reflected in the bright and cheery colors he is selecting.

Thus, the clothiers claim, what American males drape themselves with is an accurate index of how they view the national economic situation. And "drape" is the proper word. Clothes are looser fitting, more comfortable—and a razor edge crease in the trousers is frowned on. Additional time for leisure, with the shortening of working hours, has taught men the comfort of sports clothing and they are demanding equal comfort in business wear.

Formal Dress Comes Back.

The first full year of repeal, officials said, has increased the social consciousness of America. The men no longer feel uncomfortable in formal clothing, and the business of supplying this manner of dress has been better than at any time in the last five years.

"We can safely predict a very good business in the offing," Allon Singheimer, executive director, said.

And this is what they think of the National Recovery administration:

Changing hours of work was favored by 61 per cent, opposed by 39 per cent. Changing the wage scale was favored by 24 per cent, opposed by 76 per cent. Price fixing was favored by 70 per cent, opposed by 30 per cent. More trade practice rules were favored by 25 per cent, desired eliminated by 43 per cent. Ten per cent did not want any change in existing rules, and 22 per cent wanted better enforcement of present regulation. Stricter enforcement of NRA in all phases was favored by 56 per cent, 39 per cent wanted the NRA eliminated, and 5 per cent favored the elimination of the section 7-A [collective bargaining] regulation.

In general the clothiers thought that the NRA had increased business.

PENSION COSTS ESTIMATED AT BILLION A YEAR

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—An expert's estimate that the cost of old age pensions to the government would mount to 1 billion 300 million dollars annually in 45 years was given a house committee today at the opening of hearings on the administration's social security program.

Edwin E. Witte, executive director of the President's committee which helped draft the security proposals, testified before the ways and means committee that that sum might have to be matched by state contributions equally large under the President's plan.

Witte scoffed at the Townsend plan, which calls for $200 payments monthly to all over 65.

He said the tax proposed to pay for the Townsend pensions would produce in a year only enough to pay the cost of the program, an estimated 24 billion dollars or more, for only two or three months.

He presented long and intricate tables worked out by actuaries to show the cost of old age pensions for the first year would be fifty million dollars for the federal government, and at least that much by the states.

He figured that more states would have the plan in operation by the second year and 125 million dollars would be needed.

Commerce Group Protests Publicity on Income Taxes

A protest was sent to officials in Washington yesterday by the Chicago Association of Commerce against making the names of income tax payers public. The protest was based on the fear that the publication of the names of those with large incomes would expose them to kidnaping, racketeering, and the annoyance of curiosity seekers. It asks elimination of the publicity provision from the 1934 revenue act.

UNION TO PICKET MEADOWMOOR AGAIN TOMORROW

The Milk Wagon Drivers' union will resume picketing at the 100 stores of the Meadowmoor Dairies, Inc., tomorrow morning, according to an announcement yesterday by Attorney David Riskind, counsel for the union, after Federal Judge John P. Barnes had allowed him to withdraw the union's promise not to picket while the company's injunction suit was pending. Judge Barnes set Feb. 18 for the hearing on the report of Master in Chancery George E. Q. Johnson, who has recommended the dismissal of the suit.

Attorney Riskind, who with Attorney I. Harvey Levinson, presented the union's side at the hearings before Master Johnson, said one picket would patrol in front of each store with a placard on his back declaring the store to be unfair to the union.

Judge Barnes, who was to have acted yesterday upon the master's recommendation, granted the continuance on the plea of Attorney Joseph Roach, counsel for the dairy company, that he wished sufficient time to prepare objections to the report.

SUPREME COURT AIDS MOONEY AS IT REFUSES PLEA

Points Out Legal Path in Freedom Fight.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—In an opinion that was apparently sympathetic and which suggested another possible avenue of freedom, the United States Supreme court today denied without prejudice Thomas J. Mooney's request for leave to file a petition for a writ of habeas corpus.

Mooney has been confined in the San Quentin penitentiary since February, 1917, when he was convicted and sentenced to die for murder in connection with the 1916 Preparedness day bombings in San Francisco. The sentence was later commuted to life imprisonment.

Brief Opinion Read.

Ordinarily such petitions are granted or denied without comment, but in this case, which has aroused such widespread interest, a brief opinion was prepared and read by Chief Justice Hughes, explaining the reasons why the court could not act. Primarily this is because Mooney has not exhausted all available recourses in the courts of California, in the Supreme court's opinion.

"We do not find that the petitioner has applied for a writ of habeas corpus in the Supreme court of California on the grounds asserted here," the opinion said.

The opinion contained some rather caustic references to the conceptions of judicial process outlined in the brief submitted by the attorney general of California. The chief justice pointed out that the state took no issue with the facts—with the contention that Mooney's conviction was obtained solely upon perjured testimony—but had merely demurred on the ground that no federal question was raised.

Hits State's Argument.

"Reasoning from the premise that the petitioner has failed to show a denial of due process in the circumstances set forth in his petition, the attorney general urges that the state was not required to accord any corrective judicial process to remedy the alleged wrong," the opinion said. "The argument falls with the premise."

The opinion cited Mooney's contention that the testimony against him was not only perjured but later repudiated, that the state deliberately suppressed evidence that would have repudiated it at the trial, and that California nevertheless had failed to afford any corrective judicial process.

It also cites the fact that the California Supreme court construed its jurisdiction to be limited to questions of error in the law, and thus could find no ground for reversal of Mooney's conviction.

Suggests State Writ.

"We are not satisfied, however, that the state of California has failed to provide such corrective judicial process," the Supreme court opinion continues. "The prerogative writ of habeas corpus is available in that state. No decision of the Supreme court of California has been brought to our attention holding that the state court is without power to issue this historic remedial process when it appears that one is deprived of his liberty without due process of law in violation of the constitution of the United States.

"Upon the state courts, equally with the courts of the Union, rests the obligation to guard and enforce every right secured by that constitution. In view of the dominant requirement of the 14th amendment we are not at liberty to assume that the state has denied to its court jurisdiction to redress the prohibited wrong upon a proper showing and in an appropriate proceeding for that purpose."

Four governors of California have refused to pardon Mooney, and this was his second unsuccessful appeal to the United States Supreme court.

GOLD CLAUSE RULE BY SUPREME COURT IS EXPECTED FEB. 4

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The United States Supreme court today adjourned until Feb. 4, without announcing a decision in the 69 billion dollar gold clause cases.

Since this is a customary recess for the writing of opinions in cases under advisement, it is regarded as almost certain the court will hand down the gold clause opinions at the next meeting date.

The small chamber of the court was unusually crowded today, with many lawyers standing in the doorway and many more not able to get inside. Several hundred tourists were turned away.

There had been much speculation as to whether the court would decide the gold cases today, and this was not known until Chief Justice Hughes announced the last of a series of oral orders and called for admissions to the bar.

The gold clause cases, the outcome of which is awaited with great concern by the administration and the whole financial world, involve the validity of public resolution No. 10, which abrogated all gold clauses in public and private contracts.

A decision adverse to the government would increase such obligations from 100 to 169 billion dollars and upset the course of New Deal monetary policies.

Curtis Cowings, sentenced to the penitentiary for 1 year to life for burglary; Felix Kleba, 1 to 20 years for robbery, by Judge Denis E. Sullivan.

John Russo, 39 years old, former associate of Al Capone, and two friends were being held as robbery suspects after their arrest by the Maxwell street police yesterday. Russo has a police record dating back to 1916.

The others held are Paul Pellatiere, 31 years old, 3 police character, and his brother in law, Patsy Bonfiglio, 27 years old, a taxicab driver, both of 1844 Elburn avenue. Sergt. Maurice O'Keefe visited the Elburn avenue address and found two sawed off shotguns and two revolvers.

Pellatiere was arrested on suspicion. Bonfiglio visited him in his cell, was trailed from the police station, and was arrested in company with Russo. Capt. John Norton ordered that all three men be sent to the regular police showup, to be viewed by recent robbery victims.

SUPREME COURT TO STUDY ENTIRE NRA STRUCTURE

Consents to Review U. S. Code Defeat.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—While efforts were being made in the senate to remedy the petroleum section of the NRA, recently declared unconstitutional by the Supreme court, that tribunal today decided to review a case in which the whole NRA structure is involved.

The court assumed jurisdiction, on a government petition, in the case of William E. Belcher, Alabama sawmill operator who was indicted for violating the wage and hour provisions of the recovery act. Federal Judge W. I. Grubb held the act invalid and dismissed the indictment, whereupon the government brought the case directly to the Supreme court.

Involves Broader Points.

Judge Grubb's decision found the act unconstitutional not only as an improper delegation of legislative power to the President but also as an unwaranted interference with state rights. The oil section [9C] of NRA was declared void by the Supreme court on the former ground, but the Belcher case involves much broader questions of law and if Judge Grubb is sustained there will be nothing left of the NRA.

Senator Tom Connally of Texas sought to bring his bill designed to remedy the defects of section 9C to a vote in the senate, but action was deferred until tomorrow at the request of Senators Borah and Idaho and McNary of Oregon, both Republicans. Senator Borah, who said he was interested in giving all senators an opportunity to study the bill, indicated that he would attack it on constitutional grounds.

Is It Commerce? Is Issue.

The Supreme court has never held production to be commerce, and therefore subject to regulation by congress under the commerce clause of the constitution, and this will be the principal issue in the Belcher case. Senator Connally, however, said there was "every suggestion" in the Supreme court's opinion that section 9C would have been valid had congress made the proper findings of fact and determined the conditions under which the President could act.

"The court did not specifically hold that congress had the power to regulate production per se, and in the child labor case it held that production was clearly under the control of the states," Connally declared. "But there is a difference in this case. We don't want to regulate an article until it is already produced and in interstate commerce and even then after it has been condemned by the states themselves."

This referred to oil produced in excess of state quotas, which the federal oil administration prohibited from interstate commerce.

JAPANESE AIM TO PROMOTE PEACE, HIROTA DECLARES

Stands Firm on Demand for Strong Navy.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 22 [Tuesday]. — A pledge to the world that Japan will bind herself to the promotion of peace was made by Foreign Minister Koki Hirota, speaking before the plenary session of the diet meeting this morning for the first time this year. The chamber of the upper house was crowded to capacity and was heavily guarded.

This and reiteration of the stand which Admiral Isoroku Yamamoto, naval delegate, enunciated in London of maintaining armaments up to a point where the nation will not be menaced or controled by other nations, were high lights of the speech.

Hirota spoke of Japan's affiliation with Manchukuo, negotiations for purchase of the North Manchuria railway from soviet Russia, desire for peace and order in China, and Japan's desires in world trade. No startling declarations of new policy were made.

Opposition to Attack.

The nation as a whole was not so much interested in the Hirota speech as in the interpellations which are to follow. It is expected the question will be asked whether Japan is not to blame for the breakup of the London naval talks. Considerable interest also is attached to the interpellation by Dr. Tatsukichi Minobe, outstanding authority on the constitution, regarding cabinet and public connections with the Formosa bank bribery scandal. Opposition leaders expect to center their attack on the lukewarmness of the government toward famine stricken farmers. However, observers agree that there is no likelihood of dissolution of the cabinet.

The foreign minister spoke with optimism of the future progress of Manchukuo under Japan's influence and the expected economic benefits to each. He expressed pleasure that Emperor Kang Teh of Manchukuo will pay a visit to Emperor Hirohito in Japan this spring.

Firm on Naval Policy.

Hirota turned to naval disarmaments saying "the policy of the Japanese government is to carry out sweeping reduction of armaments and to effect total abolition of drastic limitation of offensive arms so as to free each power from the menace of other powers and in fact to make it impossible for any power to manage another.

Japan's abrogation of the Washington naval limitations treaty of 1922 "must not be taken to mean that we intend to launch out on any expansion of our armaments. . . . On the contrary we look forward to conclusion of another pact to supersede the Washington treaty," he said.

Referring to the "vital economic interdependence" and the "historic bond of friendship" between Japan and the United States, Hirota declared "there is no question between the two countries which is intrinsically difficult of amicable solution. Certainly it is unimaginable that there should be any cause of conflict between the two countries.

Can Settle All Disputes.

"As for our former ally, Great Britain, while it is true that in order to safeguard our overseas trade we have yet to discuss various matters, I can not think of any part of the globe where adjustment of interests between us might be considered in any way unattainable."

It is in this spirit Japan wishes to deal with those two and all countries of the world, Hirota said, and added, "We have been guided wholly by the same spirit in all our negotiations with the soviet union."

"Our government is planning to accelerate peaceful development of soviet-Japanese relations by redoubling efforts for solution of other pending problems." Hirota urged Russia to give special consideration to the erection of military works in the far east, especially along the soviet-Manchukuo frontiers, with a view to promoting mutual trust and assurance."

China Becomes Quiet.

The political situation in China is relatively quiet and there is no civil war, Hirota agreed. But he noted that while the communists have been subdued in Kiangsi and Fukien provinces on the middle east coast the remnants of the Red armies are establishing themselves in the western provinces. Thus Japan is obliged to continue to watch China. Moreover China has not put down all anti-Japanese agitation.

"Japan attaches great importance to her friendship with other states in east Asia and counts on their participation in bearing the serious responsibilities for the maintenance of peace and order in this part of the world."

Laying by far the greatest stress on China among foreign nations with whom Japan has relations, Hirota significantly announced that Japan will pursue a policy "of assisting China to recover her stability." He expressed gratification that there is a growing trend among the Chinese to appreciate the true motive of Japan, and hope that China will collaborate with us further in that direction.

Tarif Restrictions.

Trade restrictions by high tarifs, import restrictions, and exchange control have hurt Japan, Hirota asserted. Some countries have gone so far as to abrogate their commercial treaties with Japan. "Such a situation is regrettable not only for the sake of Japan but also from the broader viewpoint of the world's economic rehabilitation."

Japan is trying to come to a fair agreement with each one of the powers concerned. Hirota points to Japan's great population on one hand and meager natural resources on the other as creating the necessity for foreign trade.

The foreign minister denied that Japan resorts to unfair devices for expansion of trade. Japan's trade amounts to only 3 per cent of the world's total, and Japan stands only seventh or eighth among the principal trading nations of the world.

Referring to international problems, Hirota said: "Japan's withdrawal from the league of nations will become effective March 27 and ours will be the greater burden of responsibility. The road for Japan to take has long been chosen." Concluding, he pleaded for the united support of the nation for Japan's foreign policy.

MYRIAD HAIRPINS BACK GOLDBERG IN G. O. P. PRIMARY

Friends Cite Career as Proof of Ability.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Sol H. Goldberg put the hump in the hairpins of the world and so his associates are convinced that he could perform some similar miracle if he were boosted into the mayor's chair by way of the Republican primary just five weeks from today.

Mr. Golberg, king of the hair fastener manufacturers, who is one of four who filed for the Republican nomination, was on his way to New York yesterday, possibly to meet some new crisis in the hair dressing problem, but inquiry at his south side office as to the business experience that leads his supporters to believe him qualified to run Chicago as mayor brought voluble response.

"I'll be glad to give you some authentic figures," said an assistant after giving some general figures about the extent of Mr. Goldberg's enterprises. "They will astonish you.

Hairpins? Billions of 'Em!

"In this country there are 38,000,000, possibly 40,000,000 girls and women between the ages of 13 and 65 who wear hairpins. Each one of them loses an average of between 1½ and 2 hairpins each day. Figure that. It means a loss of about 60,000,000 pins a day that must be replaced.

"And Mr. Goldberg is ready to replace them—about 21,000,000,000 pins a year. Hairpins are lost everywhere, but women find new ones in neat gold or silver packages at every notion counter and every five and ten cent store in the country. We use up enough wire every year to reach around the world four times.

"Right now Mr. Goldberg is developing two new fields. In the last five years he has given away 20,000,000 hairpins to the men of India in order to make them hairpin conscious and stop using the sticks they have worn for years.

A Pin for Every Crisis.

"Then he is developing the manufacture of colored hairpins, red for red hair, auburn for auburn, and so forth, so that every women can match her hair and her hairpins.

"There is no telling how rich the field will be.

"When Irene Castle bobbed her hair and a world of women followed suit the business in 16 weeks dropped from a yearly volume of $9,000,000 to a ratio of about $200,000 annually. Then Mr. Goldberg invented the pin for bobbed hair. That was a crisis that Mr. Goldberg met in a masterful way. That's the kind of a man he is."

In the meantime, with Mr. Goldberg on his way to New York and Emil C. Wetten, another candidate, laid up with an ulcerated tooth, Mortimer B. Flynn, the most active of the quartet, was busy at his new headquarters receiving Republican ward committeemen he had invited to call on him. A large number conferred with him and later held their own meeting, in which they discussed the possibility of persuading Wetten, Goldberg, and Mrs. Grace Gray to retire from the primary and leave a clear field to Flynn so that they could "start the election campaign at once."

Embarrassing Moment.

The Democrats came in for a slight share of embarrassment yesterday when it was disclosed that Gustave A. Brand, their slate candidate for city treasurer, has been a member of the Hamilton club for the last ten years. That club is known as a Republican organization, but it was explained that in recent years there has been no close requirement as to the political affiliations of an applicant of membership.

Membership drives have been put on one after another, and it is said to be possible that some Socialists and prohibitionists now enjoy the privileges of the clubhouse.

LOOT STORE OF $5,000 IN JEWELS.

Burglars broke into the store of the Ring Craft Jewelers, 1583 Ogden avenue, some time over the week-end and took rings, watches and diamonds valued at more than $5,000, it was reported yesterday by Joseph Rotunno, 3335 Diversey boulevard, the owner.

JAPAN, RUSSIA REACH AGREEMENT FOR SALE OF CHINESE RAILWAY

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

TOKIO, Jan. 22.—[Tuesday.]—As the result of a seven hour conference ending at 2 a. m. today, a complete agreement has been reached for the sale of Russia's half share of the Chinese Eastern railway to Manchukuo. Only minor details now remain, and these are expected to be settled within a day or two. Thus negotiations have finally ended after a year and seven months of hard oriental bargaining.

As today's negotiations ended, Shigenhori Togo and Benedict Kozlovski ordered champagne to celebrate the occasion. A committee will be organized by Japan, Russia, and Manchukuo to draft an agreement which will be signed in Tokio in February. A total of forty meetings already have been held.

The basic understanding, by Japanese Foreign Minister Koki Hirota and Russian Ambassador Constantin Yurenev, put the price at 140,000,000 yen [currently $39,250,000] and an employés' retirement allowance of 30,000,000 yen, bringing the total near $48,000,000. It is understood the Russians made considerable concessions in today's meeting, withdrawing the claim that the soviets should keep consulate buildings and properties. One-third of the sale price is payable in cash and two-thirds in goods, half of the cash becoming due when the agreement is signed and the remainder within three years. Payment in goods also would fall due within three years.

UPHAM TO SEEK MORE REVENUE FROM LICENSES

A campaign to collect fees for miscellaneous city licenses, especially those issued to taverns and to cigaret vendors, will start within the next week, Controler Robert B. Upham announced yesterday.

The drive is expected to bring sufficient revenue to bolster other city funds so that pay rolls can be met without a sale of tax warants before March 1, Mr. Upham explained.

"We have a new system of listing taverns by street addresses and keeping close check on delinquents," he said.

28 MILLION MORE SPENT ON FEWER RELIEF FAMILIES

Expenditures for '33 and '34 Analyzed.

Although the cost of the Illinois Emergency Relief commission's activities in 1934 soared $28,561,382 above the previous year's expenditures, there were actually fewer families on its rolls in the year just ended, an analysis showed yesterday.

The records disclosed that there were 3,122,589 "family month" units of relief in 1934, while in 1933 there were 3,155,220 "family months." In 1933 the commission spent $78,279,847, while last year its expenditures were $106,841,229.

Cause of Increased Expense.

Prime reason for the $28,000,000 boost was the increase in relief to the average family from $24,81 in 1933 to $32,49 in 1934. This in turn was largely due to the liberalizing of relief budgets, particularly in rural areas, and to expansion of the work relief program, which is substantially more expensive than direct relief.

In this connection relief officials also advance the explanation that families long on the relief rolls by 1934 had exhausted every resource, household goods as well as financial aid, and required more help.

The many special activities entered into by the commission last year accounted for one-fifth, $5,494,619, of the increased cost. Included were the general educational program, college student aid, federal statistical research projects, rural school extension, and professional and technical work relief. Such items were negligible in 1933.

Ten per Cent Spent on Administration.

The cost of administration last year was $11,564,646, which was 10.82 per cent of the total expenditures. In May, 1934, the administrative cost was 11.3 per cent, and in November it was down to 9.6 per cent. As the result of reductions in staf totaling 1,189, the figure was finally cut to 9.22 per cent in December.

Wilfred S. Reynolds, executive secretary of the commission, was informed yesterday that the Federal Emergency Relief administration had allotted Illinois an additional $2,880,038 for relief in the latter half of January. Previously the FERA had given this state $6,441,915, promising more when the state legislature acted to provide funds from the sales tax.

WORLD IN HELL RIGHT NOW, SAYS CHURCH LEADER

Calls Mankind's Ills the Real Inferno.

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.

One and a quarter million members of the Congregational Christian Churches last night were urged by their national leader to worship at the shrine of "the uncomfortable god" and to realize that hell no longer is a mere theological idea but a definition of the fix most of the world is in right now.

The speaker was the Rev. Dr. Jay T. Stocking of St. Louis, moderator of the Congregational Christian general council. He gave his moderatorial address before 300 church leaders assembled at the First Congregational church in Evanston for the annual meeting of the national executive conference of the denomination. Sessions of the conference will continue throughout the week.

Attack on Three Fronts.

Dr. Stocking pointed out the church's three fold attack on the world's hells of here and now, with especial emphasis on the attack directed against the hell of social and economic maladjustments. The attack against this is being led, he said, by the denomination's new council of social action presided over by Prof. Arthur E. Holt of the Chicago Theological seminary.

The other two organized assaults of the Congregational Christian Churches against hell, Dr. Stocking said, are under the generalship of the foreign and home missions' agencies. He pointed out that the efforts of earlier missionaries were directed toward saving the heathen from a future inferno.

"The founders of modern missions," said Dr. Stocking, "were filled with pity and sympathy. Their mission was to save men from hell. This must ever be the motive of missions. We must have a sense of hell, not the hell of a one time theological faith but the hell that is a present observable fact. We do not need to preach hell for there is plenty of it in the world to be seen."

"An Uncomfortable God."

"We must worship an uncomfortable god," Dr. Stocking continued. "Our day has been asking for a comfortable god to believe in.

"We have sought a god who was satisfied with moderate virtue. The only god by whom this world can be saved is an uncomfortable god who gives man no rest in the presence of need until he rises to meet it."

Dr. Walter H. Rollins of New York was elected president of the national council of state superintendents of the Congregational Christian Churches at a meeting of the conference of that organization yesterday in Evanston.

24 Canal Zone Planes Hop on Caribbean Tour Today

AUTOISTS CROWD IN FOR LICENSES; DEADLINE NEARS

Six Windows Sell Stickers at City Hall.

Automobile owners thronged the Chicago office of the secretary of state at 120 South Ashland avenue yesterday to obtain their 1935 state license plates before the deadline Friday, when, according to announcements, the police department will begin issuing summonses to drivers of cars with old licenses.

In the city hall another rush was on to obtain city license stickers before that day. To accommodate the crowds George F. Lohman, deputy city collector, opened two new windows in addition to the four which were placed in service Saturday.

Suffer for Past Lenience.

In the past years no consistent effort was made by the city and state officials to oblige automobile owners to display new licenses before March 1 and the police believe that this tardiness has prompted the motorists to become generally lax in observing the motor vehicle statutes and ordinances. It was pointed out that the law provides that license plates for each year shall be displayed from the first day of that year.

Secretary of State Edward J. Hughes again yesterday urged automobile owners to procure new licenses as quickly as possible. He said that he would not make any recommendation to police officials on the time when they should start arresting drivers of cars with old licenses.

"The law is clear in regard to automobile owners being required to have their new licenses from the first of the year, but the manner in which it shall be enforced is up to the discretion of the police," he said.

In the office of the secretary of state here, Stanley Kozinski, assistant secretary of state, has ordered that the office be opened at 8 a. m., a half hour earlier than usual, and that it shall remain open in the evening until the last applicant is served.

A checkup on the city streets yesterday revealed that numerous motorists were still displaying old license plates.

List of Tardy Autoists.

A few 1934 numbers picked at random and the owners to whom they were issued are as follows:

984-405—Albert J. Marks, 825 Waveland avenue.
216-696—James T. Greenlee, 637 North Grove avenue, Oak Park.

In front of 6337 North Claremont avenue an automobile was parked bearing license plates from the year 1933. A checkup disclosed that they were issued to Frank H. O'Connor, 6337 North Claremont avenue, secretary to Ald. James R. Quinn of the Fiftieth ward.

When a reporter called yesterday O'Connor was not in the city hall, where he has a desk in the local transportation committee rooms. Ald. Quinn is head of the committee. Mrs. O'Connor said on the telephone that her husband had not used the car in a year.

Book Lists Low Numbers.

The first automobile license book was issued yesterday by the secretary of state containing the names of owners of the first 25,000 license plates to be issued. An examination of the first several hundred numbers disclosed, with few exceptions, that automobile owners were given the same low numbers which they had last year.

Patrick A. Nash, head of the local Democratic party, was given No. 15, which had been issued for a number of years to the late Edward J. Brundage, former attorney general.

As in the previous years No. 1 was issued to Sidney S. Gorham, lawyer, 436 South Stone avenue, La Grange; No. 2 to Henry W. Austin, banker, 1044 Lake street, Oak Park; and Nos. 3 and 23 to Louis L. Emmerson of Mount Vernon, former secretary of state and governor.

John G. Oglesby of Elkhart, former lieutenant governor, was issued No. 7 and P. J. Lucey, 70 Cedar street, former attorney general, was issued No. 16.

It was reported that beginning next year Secretary Hughes would add letters to the license numbers to permit the use of fewer numerals on the plates.

Vatican Reveals It Will Establish Press Bureau

VATICAN CITY, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The Vatican is about to establish a press bureau, it was learned today, following the example of other governments of Europe. Although the idea had been spurned for many years, it will soon be put into effect. The Foreign Press Association of Italy requested Pope Pius to make this change when he received its members at the conclusion of the holy year.

STOMACH UPSET

Get at the real cause. That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of trying to patch up a poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged intestines or constipation.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets help the intestines in a soothing, healing way. When the bowels are performing their natural functions, people rarely suffer from indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Try Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound. Know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain. All druggists, 15c, 30c and 60c.

GETS PRISON TERM

ALFRED CODMAN JR.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Alfred Codman Jr., 32 years old, Harvard graduate and son of a wealthy New York and Boston stock broker, was sentenced yesterday to one to fourteen years in the penitentiary for manslaughter. Codman was found guilty two weeks ago by Judge Grover C. Niemeyer of the Criminal court of having been the driver of the automobile which fled after it killed Mrs. Elizabeth Freytag, 32 years old, 3145 Cambridge avenue, last Feb. 3 at Sheridan road and Briar place. He was arrested in his room at the Commonwealth hotel shortly after the accident, in which Mrs. Freytag's husband, Arthur, was seriously injured. Attorney James J. McDermott said he would appeal Judge Niemeyer's order which overruled his motion for a new trial, and Codman was allowed his liberty in bail of $10,000.

EVANSTON STARTS ITS COMPULSORY AUTO TEST TODAY

Inspection Is Required for All Its Drivers.

BY HAL FOUST.

Evanston this afternoon will inaugurate the first compulsory automobile inspection service in Illinois. The suburb's council last year passed an ordinance requiring all motor vehicles registered in its jurisdiction to be submitted for tests twice a year. A fee of 75 cents a year is charged.

A test station will be opened this afternoon at University place and Maple street. This is just west of the Chicago and North Western railroad and two blocks north of Church street.

The station is equipped with machines for testing brakes, wheel alignment, and lights. It will be operated by the police department's bureau of accident prevention, headed by Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml.

Voluntary Compliance Urged.

"We are asking the automobile owners of Evanston to drive to the safety lanes voluntarily without summonses," said Police Chief William O. Freeman. "On each car that passes the tests will be placed a windshield o. k. sticker.

"The 75 cent fee will cover all costs of operation, so that the service is not added to the general tax burden. For the 75 cents the owner may return for additional inspections as often as he desires.

"It is a moderate charge for the benefit of knowing that a car is in mechanical condition to meet emergencies of trafic. Especially is this true in view of the findings at THE TRIBUNE'S safety lane last year that about half the cars are not in a safe condition."

Cites the Case of Memphis.

"Memphis, with the only municipality operated compulsory auto tests in America," said Lieut. Kreml, "was able to cut its trafic deaths 24 per cent last year while the death rate nationally was increasing.

In Evanston, the majority of cars in accidents are mechanically defective when inspected after the crashes and we have been able to determine that at least 20 per cent were defective before the accidents happened."

It is doubtful that Evanston police will for a few months make any arrests for failure of residents' cars to carry the o. k. stickers. The ordinance, however, provides fines ranging from $1 to $200 for noncompliance.

Three Youths Seized as Car Theft Suspects; One Is Shot

AUTOMOBILE THEFTS.
Automobiles stolen, 29; recovered, 14; stripped, 3 [from police records for 24 hours ending at midnight Sunday].

Three youths, suspected of being automobile thieves, were arrested yesterday morning after one of them had been shot by police in a chase through near north side streets. John Mentel, 23 years old, 1901 Superior street, was taken to the Bridewell hospital with a bullet wound in his left arm. The others, Clarence Murray, 21 years old, 1742 Ohio street, and Edward Solankowski, 17 years old, 1911 Huron street, were locked up at the detective bureau.

WOMAN STRUCK BY HIT AND RUN MOTORIST DIES

Driver Is Killed Cranking Truck in Gear.

Mrs. Mary Barron, 66 years old, 1853 West 17th street, died in the County hospital yesterday of injuries suffered Sunday when she was struck by an automobile at 18th and Jefferson streets. The driver fled after the accident and has not been apprehended.

For several hours after her death the body lay unidentified at the county morgue. Mrs. Barron's son-in-law, Peter Szott, called there and made the identification late last night.

Mrs. Barron's death and three others brought the 1935 Cook county automobile toll to forty-eight. Up to 4 o'clock yesterday the 1935 fatalities within the Chicago city limits totaled forty and the number of injured in trafic accidents 800. The other Cook county deaths were:

Arthur Geering, 39 years old, 2160 North Maplewood avenue, a truck driver, was killed yesterday when a truck he was cranking, which had been left in gear, started suddenly and crushed him against another truck in a garage at 4550 Gladys avenue.

Matthew Sobczak, 68 years old, 2334 North Hamlin avenue, died in St. Elizabeth's hospital last night of injuries suffered on Sunday when he was struck at Fullerton and Hamlin avenues by an automobile driven by Keith Paulson, 2326 North Lawndale avenue. Paulson's car bore the 1934 license plate 919-075.

John S. Gorman, 35 years old, 4909 West 24th street, employed in a Civilian Conservation corps camp at Palos Park, was killed yesterday in an automobile collision in Willow Springs. Harry Jaegermann, 24 years old, of Wheeling, driver of the other car, who was held for the inquest told police Gorman failed to observe a stop sign. Both cars bore 1934 licenses.

Kalikst Jakimowinz, 41 years old, 2137 Canton street, and Joseph M. Wasilewski, 42 years old, 2913 Hersberg street, Franklin Park, were seriously injured early yesterday when an automobile struck them as they were changing a tire on their car at Asbury avenue and Brummel street, Evanston. Jacob Schintgen, 24 years old, 1842 Touhy avenue, the other driver, said rain freezing on his windshield obscured his vision. Both cars had 1934 license plates.

Injured at Litchfield.

RECKLESS DRIVER IN RUSSIA GETS DEATH SENTENCE

[Copyright: 1935: By the New York Times.]

MOSCOW, Jan. 21.—In soviet Russia they know how to punish a reckless automobile driver—if his offense is serious enough—so effectively he will never drive recklessly again. They shoot him.

The Supreme court of Crimea has just inflicted such a sentence at Simferopol on a chauffeur named Sapelnik. Sapelnik took a government car from a garage for a joyride while intoxicated, it was testified. Turning a corner sharply, he ran into a large group of Red navy sailors and injured seven of them.

After the trial Sapelnik was sentenced to death. The garage dispatcher who let him take the car was sentenced to two years imprisonment and the garage manager was sentenced to three months.

JUDGE ORDERS BANKER SQUIRES AND FIVE FREED

John G. Squires, former president of the Citizens' State Bank of Chicago, which was closed on May 25, 1932, and five other former officials of the bank, were freed of charges of conspiracy in connection with the bank's closing, when Judge Donald S. McKinley of the Criminal court directed a jury yesterday to return a verdict of not guilty. The other defendants were Hugo H. Dernahl, vice president; Robyn K. MacFadden, controler; Nicholas L. Schank, cashier; and Oliver A. Landry and Clinton E. Cooper, directors. All have been at liberty on bonds.

TEAMSTER ROW FLARES AGAIN IN TWO COURTS

Weber Names Mayor and 10 in "Plot."

Dissension, which has enlivened coal drivers' organizations in the past, flared anew at two points yesterday.

In an amended bill filed in the Superior court, eleven men, including Mayor Kelly and State's Attorney Courtney, were named as having conspired to install James [Lefty] Lynch as controling head of the Coal Drivers, Helpers and Handlers' union, local 704. The bill charged that Lynch said he paid Capt. Daniel Gilbert, head of the state's attorney's police, also a defendant, $4,500 to "swing the deal."

The bill amends a suit for an injunction and appointment of a receiver for the union filed recently by Attorney Theodore Miller, former assistant state's attorney, in behalf of Albert Weber, former president of the union.

Persons Named in Bill.

Besides Kelly, Courtney, Gilbert, and Lynch, the others named are James B. McCahey, president of the board of education, who is also a director of the Chicago Coal Merchants' association; Sergts. John W. McGloon and Thomas J. McLaughlin of the state's attorney's police; Leslie G. Goudie, chairman of the teamsters' joint council; Walter Trias, Frank Kasper, and a man known only as "Two Gun Jack," alleged sluggers for Lynch.

Weber in his bill relates that last March he heard Lynch tell of paying Capt. Gilbert the money. The purpose of the conspiracy, the bill sets forth, was to force coal teamsters in the city to work for lower wages.

Weber Now in Other Group.

The union is affiliated with the American Federation of Labor. Its rival group is the Chicago Coal Teamsters, Chauffeurs, and Hikers' union, local 704. Lynch was installed as secretary-treasurer and business manager of the recognized union last Feb. 30, while Weber was president. Recently Lynch was voted out and Thomas Cronin was elected president. Weber is now active for the so-called "outlaw" union.

Capt. Gilbert branded the allegations in the amended bill as "fantastic," adding that "it is an honor to be sued by a man like Weber."

The second flareup of the day came when Municipal Judge Joseph H. McGarry refused to issue warants for the arrest of State's Attorney Courtney and Sergt. Thomas Kelly of the state's attorney's police. The warant was asked by Joseph Harrington, counsel for the "outlaw" union, on the ground the two had violated a state law by interfering with the "peaceful assembly" of the unrecognized union.

MADE TO OUR SPECIFICATIONS

If you could only see the way our clothing is watched over by

STANFORD WILLIAMS

Because there are so many ways of tailoring clothing—and because there is only one way of tailoring fine clothing—we have established our own shops for the production of our Fieldcrest clothes. Of course, Stanford Williams cannot personally supervise every garment that carries the Field label but if your suit has one of our Stanford Williams' labels in it right now the chances are that before it ever went into our stocks Stanford Williams personally inspected the tailoring very minutely. And for every garment that isn't made in our own beautifully day-lighted shops he's laid down a list of specifications that are as significant as the terms of an international treaty. Without being too technical all that is necessary to say is that these specifications require hand-tailoring throughout in order to make our clothing the finest we know of.

SHOES

Did you ever examine a hide closely? Probably not. We don't know many people who go about examining hides closely. But if you ever had occasion to look at the back of the animal's neck and the part of the hide around the hips you'd notice that in a good healthy critter there would be a lot of what we call "fat wrinkles." Now fat wrinkles can't ever be erased when that part of the hide is tanned down so we don't use that section of the hide. Naturally the part around the legs is scarred from the exercise it gets; that's eliminated. The sides and under portion of the hide aren't much good because they are too flabby. So that leaves us with just the top part of the back—the heart of the hide—and that's what we demand for quality shoes.

In which we pull our

out of rabbits!

"Fur-felt" hats, we say in advertising to our readers. And you say, "What do you mean, fur-felt hats?" Just this: only about six square inches from the top of the back of a rabbit are considered good enough for the hats we like to sell you. Therefore, it takes a goodly number of such squares for your hat. You could buy a wool-felt hat, but you wouldn't probably like it.

Appreciated by many men is the fact that The Store for Men carries not a piece of women's merchandise. Thankfully, these men have come to realize that here is a man's store that dares to be one hundred per cent masculine. And thankful, too, are thousands of women who shop for men because they realize that anything they buy at this store for men is certain to rate a definite male OK.

Acclaimed, too, by hundreds of other particular gentlemen is the fact that they are always assured of the new things first at Field's. Well aware they are that regardless of whether they want a custom-made suit or half a dozen dollar ties they can always be certain of complete selection, fresh, up-to-the-minute merchandise and the latest of ideas . . . for The Store for Men's constant clearance policy guarantees that.

But in addition to these accepted traditions there is something else which these thousands of Chicago men have grown to demand when they contemplate buying anything at all for themselves. They insist on "Field quality." And because the term "Field quality" covers such a multitude of things we usually phrase it like this—"made to our specifications."

"What specifications?" you ask. Here's our answer:

NECKWEAR

That's why we are so insistent on a lot of things that ordinarily never go into the making of cheaper ties. First, we send our own representatives out to comb the silk markets here and abroad for the finest of fabrics (practically each year a European trip is made just to select exclusive silks and patterns no one else will have). Then we either make these silks into ties in our own factory or specify that they be tailored by hand by some of the leading tie makers in the country; and only over a pattern that we know has proven completely satisfactory to the largest number of men.

We have a code of our own when it comes to

PAJAMAS

And when it comes to shirts, too, for that matter. But we insist in the tailoring of pajamas that our coats be two inches longer than the United States Bureau of Standards requires them to be. That means that you sleep in comfort with no binding, no creeping and no strangulation. As for our shirts, it is necessary for the tails to be longer, for the buttons to be of the finest ocean pearl, for the collars to be so pre-shrunk that no matter what happens to them when they are laundered, they will always fit perfectly. That's what we mean when we say "tailored to our own specifications."

Confesses Perjury During Murder Inquiry.

"Renner by his own testimony disavows that Kehoe and Taber had any connection with the killing.

"The killing was the outgrowth of a drunken moment. There was not the remotest authorization on the part of the defendants. If there had been any conspiracy Renner was the only agent through whom the defendants could act, and Renner's testimony should end the state's case."

In denying the defense motion Judge Brothers said that he could not force the state to rest its case merely on the basis of an informal conference in chambers.

His Grand Jury Testimony.

The jury returned and Attorney Nash resumed the cross-examination of Renner, taking up his testimony before the grand jury. Mr. Nash asked the witnesses if he did not realize that he was under oath at that time as at present. Renner said he didn't realize "it was the same thing."

Q.—You knew you were lying when you said Stoltzmann was the man who gave you the money [for the violence]. Did you have anything against him? A.—No, I did it to save Kehoe.

Q.—You were willing to accuse an innocent man? A.—I didn't want Stoltzmann to go to the chair.

Q.—You were satisfied if Stoltzmann got life? A.—No, sir.

Q.—You were willing to commit perjury before the grand jury to save Kehoe. Are you willing to commit it now to save yourself? A.—No.

Q.—What caused you to change and make this new resolution? A.—Mr. Crowley [First Assistant State's Attorney Wilbert F. Crowley] talked to me and told me what I had done.

Origin of His Testimony.

Attorney Nash then asked Renner how he happened to be a witness. Renner said he decided to testify for the state on the suggestion of Public Defender Benjamin Bachrach and after signing a paper with Prosecutor Crowley. This paper, he said, provided that Renner's hope for clemency would depend on whether Judge Brothers believed he was telling the truth on the stand. Renner produced this paper on Mr. Nash's request, admitting that the prosecutor had told him to carry it in his pocket and offer it when asked.

"It is not the province of the court to decide whether this man is telling the truth," Nash declared. "That is up to the jury."

Judge Brothers asked Renner if he had been told of his constitutional rights before signing the paper and if he realized that his testimony was tantamount to a plea of guilty.

"You know that the penalty for murder is the electric chair or the penitentiary," Judge Brothers said.

Judge Calls for Transcript.

The judge ordered the prosecution to produce today the complete transcript of the questioning of Renner after his evidence before the grand jury. It was during this questioning by Crowley, Renner said, that he changed his story and said he had received money from Kehoe instead of from Stoltzmann.

On re-direct examination, Prosecutor Coghlan asked Renner whether Kehoe had ever criticized the work of his gang of vandals "in comparison with the operations of the south side gang."

"Yes," Renner answered, "Kehoe told me once that we were supposed to do more work. He said the south side was doing twice as much. I said we were doing our best but would try and do better. He said we had better 'get' the bus dispatcher. I said I didn't think so because the police were riding us pretty hard."

DIRECT EXAMINATION

The completion of Renner's direct testimony, which he began on Saturday, occupied the morning session of court. Near the close of this Renner told of being informed of the slaying of Kelly on the night of Sept. 26. He said he had spent the evening in a cigar store at North and Cicero avenues.

"Bretschneider was the first man I met after the killing," Renner declared. "I said to him: 'You weren't with those fellows, were you?' He said he had been. I told him he should have had more brains. He told me the others had encountered him on Cicero avenue as they were ready to leave in their machine.

"John said he asked them where they were going and they told him they were going to get that bus dispatcher. John asked: 'Does Tubby [Renner] know about it?' They said no, and John wanted to talk to me but Al Semple said: 'To hell with Tubby. John Kett wants it.'" [Kett is a street car employé who acts as steward for the union at the north side car barns].

He Meets Bill Semple.

Renner said that later that evening he saw William Semple on Cicero avenue and asked him if he had been present when the shooting occurred.

"Bill said he had been," Renner testified, "and he declared: 'You know how Al is when he has been drinking.'

"I told him he should have hit Al in the jaw. Bill said: 'Yes, I should have.'"

Renner said he slept in the cigar store until 8 o'clock the next morning, when he was awakened by Abe Margolis, bondsman for the union officials.

"We drove to the street car union headquarters in Abe's car and saw Kehoe," Renner said. "I told Kehoe that if John Kett had kept his nose out of it, the bus dispatcher [Kelly] would not have been shot. I told Kehoe Al had used my gun, but I hadn't been there. Kehoe said: 'That's kindergarten stuff,' and he was mad. I told him I understood the men had been drunk.

Taber and Kehoe to Court.

"Kehoe said he didn't know what he could do for them. Margolis said he would call up the state's attorney's office and have them stop pushing the men around. Later Taber came in and said to Kehoe: 'Hurry up, we've got to go to court.'"

Renner said he was arrested three days later.

Earlier Renner told of vain attempts to find and "slug" William Guangi, a supply wagon driver for the bus company, during the first two weeks of September. Kehoe had ordered Guangi "put in a hospital," the witness declared.

During the period when Renner, the Semples, White and Bretschneider were hunting Guangi, Renner said he met Taber for the first time.

"Kehoe wasn't in at the headquarters one morning," Renner said, "and I saw Taber. I asked him for a few dollars until I could see Kehoe. Taber gave me $10.

Gets $50 from Kehoe.

"After looking for Guangi on the nights of Sept. 8 and 9 near the 2900 block on Albany avenue, where he lived, I saw Kehoe on Sept. 10. He gave me $50. I gave Al Semple $13 and $9 each to White and Bretschneider. Then I gambled on the horses and lost Bill Semple's and my money.

"The next day Kehoe told me to see Lloyd Slee [leader of the south side gang of vandals] and Kehoe said: 'Get these bus sluggers and get them good.'"

Renner then told of meeting Slee and Wayne Hoover, one of Slee's men, at 61st street and Cottage Grove avenue on two succeeding evenings, and of trailing buses in efforts to encounter the company's "strong men." These efforts were fruitless.

Renner said he met Stoltzmann on Sept. 13, in Kehoe's office.

Hunt for Guangi Goes On.

"Stoltzmann told me to go with the Semples, White and Bretschneider to West Harrison street, where somewhere between 5200 and 5600 there lived a man who was supposed to be driving Guangi around," Renner said. The men went there that night and found the automobile, from the license number given them by Stoltzmann. Renner said, but did not find the driver.

"What was your purpose in looking for the driver?" Assistant State's Attorney Coghlan asked.

"To give him a lacing," Renner answered.

"What do you mean by that?"

"Beat him up."

"Who told you to do that?"

The attempt to "get" the driver was repeated the night of Sept. 14, Renner said, but he and his confederates were frightened away when three cars full of men drove up in front of a building at 5300 Harrison street.

PLAN TO SHORTEN ILLINOIS SESSION DUE THIS WEEK

Both Houses Expected to Fill Committees.

BY PERCY WOOD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Appointment of standing committees in both houses and the launching of a movement to cut the 59th regular session of the general assembly to five, instead of six months—thus completing work by June 1—are on the calendar for the current legislative week, which starts tomorrow.

All recent governors have urged a shortening of the regular sessions, among them the present head of the state, Gov. Horner. This year Speaker John P. Devine of the house of representatives promises to make a strong try at what, to date, has been merely visionary.

Move to Speed Action.

The longest, perhaps the dullest, and without doubt one of the most important tasks at any regular session is the examination and approval of appropriations requests for the code departments and the state officers.

Customarily the requests have been introduced during the last half of the session—that is, after April 1. Many appropriations require days of committee dissection, and frequently other days of discussion by the whole house, rows and disputes accompanying both appearances.

In recognition of this fact and "beginning now," as he put it today, Speaker Devine will start lobbying with department heads and elected officers to have their appropriations introduced by Feb. 15 at the latest.

Sees Way to Shorten Session.

He believes that if all have been referred to the appropriations committee by that date they can be disposed of by May 1, and the session—so far as the house is concerned—made ready for adjournment in another month. And since the senate requires less time than its larger brother-chamber, the chances are that if the speaker is successful the session can be shortened.

There is little likelihood any of the code departments will stir the anger of the appropriations committee by asking for an increase above their 1933 grant. Gov. Horner predicted today that "none will be larger and some may be smaller."

Horner Meets U. Trustees.

The governor took care of one situation Saturday when he met with the trustees of the University of Illinois and suggested that they shelve a new building program they wish to incorporate in their appropriations. The "suggestion," it is understood, will be followed.

The trustees are reported to have proposed new quarters for the journalism department, the state geological and natural history surveys, a new dental school building in Chicago, an addition to the armory, and a new mining and metallurgy building.

The governor believes all these projects worthy and feels that later they should be granted, but was reported to have been firm in his advice that no attempt be made now to obtain legislative consent for the construction.

Lewis May Head Group.

Speaker Devine expects to have his full list of committees ready for announcement within two or three days. He would not discuss chairmanships today but it was reported that Representative F. W. Lewis of Robinson, a downstate Horner leader, will head the new executive committee which is expected to be an important group. Lewis also will act as downstate floor leader for the administration. The No. 1 floor chief for the Democrats is Benjamin S. Adamowski of Chicago.

There will be no house committee on uniform laws this session. Speaker Devine will combine it with the old committee on judicial department and practice and the new group will be called the committee on judicial department and uniform laws.

BURNED BY OIL BLAST.

BIRTHDAY QUEEN FINALISTS TO BE NAMED TONIGHT

The preliminary selection of candidates to represent Chicago's typical working girl, who will be "queen for a day" over the President's birthday ball festivities on Jan. 30, will be made at 8 o'clock tonight in the Louis XVI. room of the Hotel Sherman.

More than 400 working girls have registered for the contest. From these 400, ten finalists will be chosen tonight. Judges are John Root and A. N. Rebori, architects; William Welsh and Maud Ellis, portrait painters; Mary Rend, painter and Rollo Timponi, theater manager.

The queen, to be named later in the week, will preside over the huge ball and barbecue on Jan. 30 in the International amphitheater at the stockyards. In addition, she will enjoy for the day a penthouse with servants and a complete wardrobe.

SAAR VOTE LIFTS CURTAIN ON NEW DRAMA IN EUROPE

Nazi Victory Stirs Eupen and Malmedy.

BY EDMOND TAYLOR.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

EUPEN, Belgium, Jan. 21—The Saar plebiscite has lifted the curtain on a new European drama and this corner of post-war Belgium is one of the best vantage points from which to watch it.

The landslide victory for Germany in the Saar has electrified the German population of the cantons of Eupen and Malmedy which were taken from the reich and given to Belgium by the Versailles treaty. The call of the fatherland is stronger than ever in their hearts. The same thing is true everywhere there are large German minorities outside the frontiers of the reich. Nazi dreams of rallying all those who speak the German tongue around the German state have received a powerful impetus.

Danzig and Austria Goals.

For the moment, the Free City of Danzig and Austria appear to be the immediate goal of the Nazis, but the 3,000,000 Germans in Czechoslovakia and the 60,000 Germans in Eupen and Malmedy are next on the list.

However sincere Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler may seem in his declaration that there is no longer a territorial problem between France and Germany, it would be bold prophecy to declare that the question of Alsace and Lorraine will never be raised again, to say nothing of the Polish corridor.

In Eupen and Malmedy the Saar victory has been celebrated and Nazi propaganda is active. There is some tension.

Authorities are disturbed because on the day that the Saar plebiscite results were announced a few swastika flags were hoisted, a few shouted "Heil Hitler," a few others hissed the Belgium flag, and the populace generally took no pains to hide its joy. The residents are irritated because reinforcements of gendarmes were rushed here. The presence of gendarmes is considered "provocative."

No Real Rebellion.

There is no allegation of actual rebellion on one side or brutal repression on the other. The conflict on the surface does not appear serious, largely because of the tolerant and humane Belgian administration and the peaceable character of the population.

Nevertheless, the conflict is very deep. This is a German community. It is true that when the Versailles treaty detached the cantons of Eupen and Malmedy from Germany, it provided that there should be a sort of plebiscite, and the plebiscite which was held in 1920 returned a heavy majority of pro-Belgian votes. Unlike the Saar plebiscite, the vote was not secret, and intelligent Belgians admit it did not represent the true wishes of the population.

[Article 34 of the Versailles treaty specified that "during the six months of the coming into force of this treaty registers will be opened by the Belgian authority at Eupen and Malmedy in which inhabitants of the territory will be entitled to record in writing a desire to see the whole or part of it remain under German sovereignty." As a result of this expression the region became a part of Belgium in a proclamation issued Jan. 10, 1920.]

Many Belgians admit that if a new plebiscite were held in Eupen and Malmedy the result would probably approach Hitler's 90 per cent majority in the Saar.

The Belgians, however, have no intention of holding a second plebiscite. They insist that any talk of another plebiscite is preaching revisionism. Under a law passed recently anyone who has acquired Belgian citizenship since the war is liable to lose it if he participates in propaganda against the territorial integrity of the kingdom. This law has terrified the inhabitants of Eupen and Malmedy who have no taste, even in such a mild form, for martyrdom.

Consequently there is no organization working openly for a return of the cantons to Germans. The pro-German sentiments of the people, until last week, were manifested strictly in legal agitation to preserve their minority rights by defending their German tongue and customs.

The Germans complain that the Brussels government is trying to make Belgians out of them, but admit the methods used are gentle. One particularly sore point seems to be expressed in the frequent charge that pro-Belgians get the best official jobs or other kinds of advantages.

Interviews with pro-German citizens, indicate that while the population submits to its present lot, it is by no means resigned to remain always the well-treated minority in a foreign state.

IN ALIMONY CASE

MRS. VERA BARNUM.

Mrs. Vera V. Barnum, who lives at the Allerton hotel, burst into tears yesterday when she saw her former husband, F. Ralph Barnum, en route to alimony row in the county jail and persuaded Superior Judge Rudolph F. Desort to free him.

Through her attorney, Joseph H. Becker, Mrs. Barnum had Barnum arrested Saturday on a writ of attachment, alleging he owes her $1,080 in alimony. She divorced him on Nov. 7, 1932, after 13 years of marriage. Barnum spent the week-end in jail. Yesterday after pleading inability to pay up he was ordered to jail for six months.

Then Mrs. Barnum began to weep. Judge Desort continued the case to Feb. 5 when Barnum promised to pay her part of the arrears.

BELGRADE, Jugo-Slavia, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Six miners were killed today in a fire damp explosion in the "Serbski-Balkan" lignite mine near Zajetchar. The exact number of miners trapped was not immediately known, but it is believed 24 were working in the danger zone.

LEAGUE ASSUMES TASK OF CARING FOR SAAR EXILES

Council Acts After Paris Submits Plea.

GENEVA, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The league of nations today tacitly shouldered moral and financial responsibility for the thousands of refugees fleeing from the Saar Basin territory. The league council voted that proposals for settling the problem shall be submitted at its next session.

France informed the council she willingly welcomed the refugees, which have been pouring over the border at the rate of hundreds daily, but said financial support from the league was needed because for fifteen years inhabitants of the Saar have been "in a sense subjects of the league of nations."

Take Fling at Germany.

At the same time the French took a gently subtle fling at Germany, the French memorandum insisting that the league's mission is to prevent harmful effects of continued emigration from the Saar "by dealing with the causes of that evil."

"Germany agreed not to resort to reprisals," said the French note, "and strict observance of that agreement will dispel apprehensions and prevent an exodus which at the present state of the labor market raises delicate problems, both for the refugees and for the populations among whom they seek to establish themselves."

The opinion was expressed in the memorandum that the majority of refugees voted for maintenance of league administration, "hence the league has a responsibility both humanitarian and direct."

Moreover, it was pointed out, the refugee problem cannot be solved without international coöperation.

James G. MacDonald, high commissioner for refugees, said tonight there were some tens of thousands of German refugees from their homeland, including 1,500 to 2,000 in the Saar, still uncared for.

"Many of them are now in desperate need," he said.

Purge Ranks of Saar Nazis.

SAARBRUECKEN, Saar Basin Territory, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Ten Nazis were ousted from the German front today in a campaign to purge the party ranks of trouble makers in the Saar basin.

The disciplinary action coincided with the first smashing of an anti-Nazi store window in Saarbruecken. The window was used by dissident Catholics to display anti-Hitler religious books and leaflets. It was broken and the contents removed.

Those disciplined were six miners, a baker, a tailor, an electrician, and a merchant. A total of 16 Nazis has been cut from the rolls within the week.

Sixty high functionaries who have worked for the league of nations for the 15 years of the Geneva body's administration may be out in the cold after March 1, when Germany takes the Saar back again. The Nazi government has refused to absorb them into the new régime. The league commission is demanding that these men, who were ranking directors of various ministeries, be taken back by the German government without being demoted more than one degree.

GERMAN FIGHTS FOR $15,000,000 OF MISSING KIN

Hunts Persons Who Knew Grandfather in Chicago.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—Fifteen million dollars, which is reported to be in the safekeeping of an Illinois or Wisconsin court, and a German who became rich in Milwaukee and Chicago under an assumed name, and disappeared in 1923, figure in a mystery.

The strange story was unfolded when Willi Steinhofel, a dairy owner, called at THE TRIBUNE'S bureau in Berlin and expressed a desire to place an advertisment. He said he intended to offer a reward of $10,000 to the person or persons who will help him collect the inheritance from Karl Piepkorn—his grandfather.

Piepkorn, according to his grandson, disappeared under unusual circumstances in France while a less closely related branch of the family reported the inheritance of $15,000,000 to the Reichsbank and the courts in Kammin, Pomerania.

Must Get Bank's O. K.

Steinhofel is unable to place an ad in THE TRIBUNE until the Reichsbank grants him permission to buy foreign currency with which to pay for it.

He declared Piepkorn, who was born in Freinstein, Pomerania, in 1853, left his wife and four children after a quarrel in 1888. Among the children was Bertha, who later became Frau Steinhofel, Willi's mother. She still lives in Freinstein. Mrs. Piepkorn, the wife, knew that her husband had gone to America. Piepkorn's sister, the story goes, joined him in Milwaukee, where she married a man named Brockhauser. Her heirs are still supposed to be living in Milwaukee.

The elder Piepkorn moved on to Chicago, where it is said he dabbled in grain and railroad stock. Later he became interested in lumber at Chilton, near Appleton, Wis. Freinstein forgot about him.

Tried to Buy Estate.

Steinhofel said he was suddenly reminded of his grandfather when a distant relative, Adolf Kiekhofer, attempted to buy an estate on which the grandson was working. He inquired where Kiekhofer obtained the money to buy an estate, and learned that Kiekhofer expected a large sum from the United States.

Together with his mother, he hired an agent, Adolf Dickmann, to trace his grandfather. He said the investigation revealed Piepkorn had changed his name and made a huge fortune. In 1923 Piepkorn came to Europe to cure his asthma at the invitation of another branch of the family. Steinhofel said that he never was seen again.

French police, he added, found a corpse of an elderly man whom they assumed to be an American because his spectacle case, the only object left in his pocket, bore the name of a Boston oculist. The cause of death was uncertain, although murder was considered possible. Steinhofel declared that later the trunks of an American, who presumably was Piepkorn, were found in Cologne.

Unable to Get Information.

Steinhofel said that when he attempted to establish the name of the person who had left the millions to Kiekhofer, Kammin authorities and the Reichsbank refused to divulge the information. Dickmann, the grandson's agent, has refused to reveal the name Piepkorn assumed in America, Steinhofel charges.

Now Steinhofel is seeking persons in the United States who might have known his grandfather and the name he adopted. He has employed the services of Berlin's leading American lawyer, who today confirmed Steinhofel's statements.

11 MINERS KILLED BY BLAST, GAS IN PENNSYLVANIA

Black Damp Spreads to Other Pits.

Gilberton, Pa., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Trapped in a coal mine level 1,000 feet from the surface, 11 miners were killed today, 2 were reported missing and 71 were injured by an explosion. The blast tore through the Gilberton colliery of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company.

Two of those injured were reported in a critical condition. Twenty-five were in hospitals. Two hundred workers in the shaft were imperiled by the blast.

Most of the injured suffered from poisonous fumes that seeped to other levels of the mine and penetrated even to neighboring mines of the Mahanoy Valley coal fields on the southwestern edge of this state's hard coal anthracite area.

Wife Sues for Separation from James J. McGrath

James J. McGrath, superintendent of the Midland building, 176 West Adams street, was sued for separate maintenance in the Superior court yesterday by Mrs. Marie L. McGrath, 1916 Bradley place, on grounds of cruelty and neglect. Her bill says she found McGrath and his secretary, Miss Adelaide Hedlund, 7539 Yale avenue, in rooms together on two occasions. Mrs. McGrath recently sued Miss Hedlund for $100,000 in the Superior court for the loss of McGrath's love.

SUNNY LIVING
starts at the table

How you feel and how you look depend largely on the foods you eat. The balanced menu provides the "bulk" to prevent common constipation—caused by lack of this essential fiber.

Common constipation frequently causes headaches, loss of appetite and energy. Yet, in most cases, it can be overcome pleasantly and safely by eating a delicious cereal.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a natural food for normal individuals. It furnishes "bulk" in convenient and concentrated form. ALL-BRAN also provides vitamin B and iron.

Isn't this sunny way better than taking patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Chronic cases, with each meal. If relief is not obtained, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or use in cooking. Get the red-and-green package at your grocer's. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Keep on the Sunny Side of Life

ADVERTISE IN THE TRIBUNE

A "Slight Cold" It Was Yesterday!

Today He is Down with Pneumonia!

The Necessity of Prompt and Internal Treatment of a Cold!

THE COMMON COLD is nothing to take lightly. Yearly, it takes a greater toll in life, in health, in time lost from work and school and in medical expense, than any other affliction to which humanity is subject.

The U. S. Bureau of Public Health Service says the common cold is the most frequent cause of illness and that it is often the forerunner of bronchitis, bronchial pneumonia and other equally serious respiratory diseases.

One reason why colds make such fast headway and become so grave in nature is that people are prone to take them too lightly and treat them too casually. Every cold, health authorities will tell you, is a dangerous cold. Every cold will bear watching and business-like treatment.

It is well to remember that a cold is an internal infection. The symptoms may or may not be localized, but whether they are or not, a cold is a systemic infection produced by a virus that has gained access to the body.

As an internal infection, a cold, very plainly, calls for internal treatment. Purely local treatments—applications of this or that—may help temporarily suppress the symptoms, but they won't get at the seat of the trouble, an infection within the body.

A cold, moreover, calls for a cold treatment and not a preparation good for all kinds of other ailments besides colds. Patently, a "cure-all" cannot be as efficacious as a definite treatment.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, to put it briefly, is what a cold calls for. First of all, it is a cold tablet made expressly for the treatment of colds and nothing else. It is not "also good" for the relief of earaches, toothaches, dandruff and falling arches. It is, expressly, a cold treatment.

Secondly, Bromo Quinine is internal treatment. It is something you take into your body to combat the infection within. Working internally, or inside you, Bromo Quinine does four things of paramount importance in the relief of a cold.

First, it opens the bowels, gently but firmly, an acknowledgedly advisable step in the treatment of a cold. Second, it checks the infection in the system. Third, it relieves the headache and fever. Fourth, it tones the system and helps fortify against further attack.

Of vital importance is this fourfold effect in the treatment of a cold and, in Bromo Quinine, you get it in the form of a single tablet.

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is safe as well as efficacious. It contains nothing harmful and leaves no bad after-effects. The fact that it is the largest-selling cold tablet in the world, and has been the stand-by of millions for more than forty years in the treatment of colds, assures you at once of its efficacy and harmlessness.

The course of common sense is the course of safety. When you feel a cold coming on, depend not on half-way measures. Go at once to your druggist and get a package of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine. Begin taking the tablets immediately, two every four hours. Usually, if taken in time, Bromo Quinine will stop a cold the first day and that's the speed of action you want to ward off the danger of complications.

All drug stores sell Bromo Quinine tablets and the few pennies' cost may save you much in worry, suspense and expense. Ask firmly for Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine and insist upon getting what you ask for. There is nothing "just as good".

"The Newspaper is an institution developed by modern civilization to present the news of the day, to foster commerce and industry, to inform and lead public opinion, and to furnish that check upon government which no constitution has ever been able to provide."—Chicago Tribune.

A SMOOTH ARTICLE.

Prof. Moley's address before the Commercial club of Chicago was a smooth article. On that point all can be agreed. The question remains whether the speech was smooth like a healing ointment or smooth like a mouthful of butter.

Was the professor expressing the administration's sincere purpose to pursue a program of moderation, of gradually diminishing interference with the states and with private enterprise? He obviously was attempting to create that impression. If words mean anything, he, as spokesman of the administration, was saying once more that the President proposes nothing more than a few minor alterations here and there in our political and economic relationships. And congress, he says, will not get out of hand.

That is one alternative. The other takes into account the professor's reputation—whether deserved or not we do not venture to say—of being a skilful practitioner of the art of propaganda. It used to be called hornswoggling. Was Prof. Moley trying to allay the fears of the prominent citizens who were in his audience with a view to disarming their opposition until too late?

We hope not. We wish to believe that Mr. Moley's remarks and the inferences which they seemed to create are a genuine expression of the President's opposition to the extremists. We wish to regard him as a rock-rooted opponent of the vagaries of Townsend, Long, Norris, Coughlin, Sinclair, and Zack Foster. Unfortunately, Mr. Moley said little which, upon close examination, can be taken as confirmation of this hopeful view.

He did, to be sure, make kindly references to Mr. Insull (whom the government has just unsuccessfully prosecuted). He did make complimentary references to Chicago's progress in suppressing crime (which were as irrelevant as they were gratifying). He did make a spirited attack upon a type of public utility holding company (of which there are few survivors of consequence) and thereby may have created in the minds of his listeners the impression that this was the only form of business organization which had anything to fear from Washington. The essential trouble with these holding companies, he said, was that they were too big for one man to handle.

Prof. Moley's time was limited, which may account for his failure to pay much attention to the federal budget and its 4½ billion dollar unbalance. He had little to offer in comment on the proposal to give the President unlimited jurisdiction over the spending of 4 billion dollars for public works, a sum which probably exceeds the total holdings at book value of all utility holding companies in 1929, and is to be spent over an area far wider than any holding company's sphere of operation. He said nothing of the new encroachment of the federal government upon the federal reserve system, with all that is implied of political wildcatting.

Mr. Moley did speak at some length about the new social security program and sought to create the impression that it had been carefully thought out. Citizens who keep in touch with affairs at Washington may have raised their eyebrows, knowing as they do that the schemes were slapped together in considerable haste, largely as a counterblast to the incomparable Dr. Townsend. The professor threw no light on the government's plan to entrench the RFC burocracy and offered no hint regarding the policy of the government toward NRA and AAA, if, indeed, there is a policy. He volunteered no information which could be interpreted as an intention to halt the squandering of hundreds of millions of dollars on idiotic public works of the order of the Fort Peck dam, all of which must be paid for out of taxation.

There seem to have been a good many things that Prof. Moley did not say. If the members of the Commercial club have as much horse sense as most of their fellow citizens are disposed to credit them with, the omissions will not be overlooked. A gear, running smoothly in an oil bath, still has teeth.

DEFENSE OF COUNTRY.

An audience at the University of Chicago assembled last week to hear a symposium on the question of bearing arms for national defense and were offered, among other opinions, some sound thinking by Maj. John L. Griffiths, athletic commissioner of the Big Ten conference. Maj. Griffiths said he had been invited to defend the patriotic side of the armed defense issue, and added that he had been warned it would be the unpopular side. He confessed inability to understand why in such an environment the patriotic side would be unpopular, but we suspect the confession was ironic rather than naïve.

The prevalence of radical pacifism among college youth is not, we think, as general as its occasional, sensational advertisment has made it appear. There is more of it and of other radical doctrins than is good for America or its youth. It seems to be industriously cultivated by some of their teachers as well as by subversive agitators from outside the college precincts. But mischievous as this influence is, we are confident the normal rank and file of American young manhood and womanhood are not impressed by it. Upon them, who will determine the quality of American life, Maj. Griffith's exposure of the fallacies of radical pacifism and his appeal to the virtues which have sustained our own and every other healthy and self-respecting people are not thrown away. A callow minority does, as he said, think it "smart to ridicule patriotism, loyalty, self-sacrifice, love of home, and love of American institutions." But the main body of American youth can be depended upon to cherish them. They deserve, we think, better protection from the influence of instructors who have no understanding of the forces which support civilized society, to say nothing of perverted cranks like a contributor to this symposium, a former professor of philosophy at the state university, who declared that he would not fight for America but would for soviet Russia. The latter type reduces his doctrin to the absurd. It is the less obvious and more effective undermining of American loyalties and the lack of vigorous defense of American ideals and institutions among American educators that need correction.

THE QUESTION OF THE FAIR.

An excellent beginning has been made by Mayor Kelly toward an intelligent decision upon the question of continuing the Fair next year. The mayor has appointed a strong committee of thirty representative Chicagoans as suggested in a council resolution adopted some months ago. Prompt determination is now imperative, as the Fair is already in process of demolition. The committee includes representatives of labor and the major industrial and commercial enterprises of the city and of the railways and citizens of broad civic interests. Its findings may be expected to express the practical considerations involved as well as the larger views of public benefit which are characteristic of the Chicago spirit and were so inspiringly realized by A Century of Progress Exposition.

WHY THEY GOT AWAY.

Alvin Karpis and Harry Campbell, two of our most talented gunmen, were located in a fourth story flat in Atlantic City and escaped from a posse of twenty policemen after a running fight in which much ammunition was expended with no important results. The advantage of preparedness and surprise was on the side of the officers. There were 20 policemen to two gangsters. Yet the gangsters escaped, probably without a wound, and have disappeared. This raid will rank high in the record of police incompetence or worse. Its failure means that the officers of the law were cowardly, grossly inefficient or corrupt; perhaps all three.

The law abiding people of Atlantic City ought to interest themselves in their police. They are paying wages and apparently getting something worse than nothing in return. Similar fiascoes have occurred in other communities—one in the outskirts of Chicago for which the Indiana police were chiefly responsible—but in every instance citizens ought to recognize it as a product, directly or indirectly, of the coöperation of professional crime and corrupt politics.

LICENSE PLATES AS A SYMBOL.

Motorists of Chicago have been warned that next Friday, Jan. 25, is the deadline for the purchase of 1935 license plates. No automobile will be permitted on the streets after that day, it is announced, unless the new plates are in place.

It is hoped that this regulation will be carried out rigorously. There is much to be said in favor of reducing the license fees, but they have not been reduced by the legislature. The continued presence on the streets of large numbers of cars bearing last year's licenses is therefore an advertisment to all and sundry that laws are made in Illinois to be broken. An old license plate is an invitation to every citizen who sees it to try to sneak a fast one over on his own account.

Today there are thousands of these advertisments and invitations in Chicago. They are found on every street in every neighborhood. The police will discover that insistence upon enforcement of the motor license law will be of considerable help in discouraging other forms of lawbreaking.

Editorial of the Day

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

Since its introduction in Staunton, Va., 27 years ago this month, the manager system has been adopted in hundreds of cities. In a few cases it has been abandoned, but the trend is toward wider use. Limerick, Ireland, and Washington Court House, O., are the most recent cities to adopt the plan. They bring the total number of cities in the world employing city managers to 451. Of these, 432 are in the United States.

The solidity of the manager type of local government is indicated by the polls taken last year. Eleven cities voted in 1934 whether to abandon or retain the plan. All but one, Fall River, Mass., voted to retain the system. In Fall River the system was abandoned, but the city manager was elected mayor.

The prospects are for numerous additions to the ranks of manager cities, for 25 American municipalities are now conducting campaigns to establish council-manager régimes. The most prominent of these cities are Pittsburgh, Pa., and Syracuse, N. Y. The use of the manager plan in counties is a much newer enterprise. Thus far seven counties in the United States actually are governed through a manager.

Cincinnati, as the largest of the successful manager cities, naturally occupies the place of world leadership. Hamilton county, with the precedent established in Cincinnati before it, may be expected to consider favorably the manager plan on a county-wide basis. If after another year we adopt the county manager plan, we shall be even more secure in the premier place of leadership in local government.

"'FRANCIS DRAKE ESTATE' AGENT Enters Prison."—Headline. Now that's just too bad! There are hundreds, maybe thousands, of people scattered over the country who just love to hand over large bunches of money just to entertain the pleasant illusion for a while, anyhow, that they are lineal descendants of Sir Francis and entitled to a share of the swag (if any) he stole from the Spaniards. He was the John Dillinger of the sixteenth century and if any slick confidence man tried to make out that I was related to that bloody old pirate I would throw the kitchen stove at him. But it takes all sorts of people to make a world, as has been well said about three million times, and so there are those who love to think they descended straight from this romping old buccaneer and that when all the money he stole is finally found down on the coast of Cornwall maybe they'll get ten thousand pieces of eight. Eight what? They don't know.

FIFTY THOUSAND MILLION dollars was what the World's War cost American taxpayers, according to the figures of Secretary Morgenthau. Gosh! You will probably get the idea that our doughboy slept on a feather bed every night, took an eau de cologne bath every morning, breakfasted on humming birds' tongues, grapefruit and champagne, wore fresh silk undies and a new uniform every day, and was attended by a valet, a butler and a secretary. Also that he rode to the battlefield in a high powered limousine car, with a white carnation in his buttonhole, and after he had killed enough for the day he got back in his automobile and said, "Home, James," to his chauffeur. Oh, yes, that's the way our soldiers lived at the front, no matter what they say. Otherwise, how come the war cost fifty thousand million dollars? Huh!

BUT JINKS HOODOO says that Bill is all wrong as to how the police dog got its name. Bill said that the police dog was so called because if anything bigger than a toy spaniel chased him he would start yelling for the police. Not at all, saith Jinks Hoodoo. The German shepherd dogs when they were first brought to this country scared everybody almost to death. And every time one of them walked along the street without a leash (they never did put a leash on the monsters and they don't yet) frightened pedestrians would cry out piteously, "Oh, please don't let that awful thing bite me!" or "Please hold him back until I can climb a tree," or "Please tell my mother how I died," or something like that, so the German shepherd dogs began to be called "Please" dogs. In time this name was corrupted into "police" dogs. Well, that may have been it, but I still think Bill's theory is the more plausible.

BUTLER ROBERT HIDER, who presided over the very swank ball given by the butlers, valets and chauffeurs of the smart set in New York, spoke thus to the press: "Above all, this is an elegant and genteel affair." A very noble sentiment indeed, and one that should be put up in electric lights six feet high in the ballroom of their wealthy employers whenever they give a gay party. And then we would not be pained, as we sometimes are, by the recital of how two youthful representatives of our very best families engaged in a low brawl and socked each other on the beezer. Nor would gentlemen drink so many, many cocktails, and, after announcing they were going to swim across the Atlantic ocean, take a dive into the goldfish bowl. Or assemble in the butler's pantry and put on the coats of the butler and the walters and sing "Sweet Adeline" until 6 o'clock in the morning. When you think it over "Elegant and Genteel" is a good motto for one and all.

MEASLES.

MEASLES is the most contagious of all our epidemic diseases with the possible exception of influenza and the common cold. Most people have it at some time or other and the disease is not quarantined in some communities because it it so common. Within the last few months measles has been more prevalent throughout the United States than at any time since 1926. Some states are now reporting 1,000 fresh cases each week. In ordinary years there are more than 400,000 cases in the United States. The disease has been followed this year in some patients with the usual train of complications—running ears, mastoid infection, pneumonia, and occasionally tuberculosis.

The patient has first what appears to be an acute cold with aching all over the body and a hoarse, croupy cough. The eyes become watery and inflamed and there is a tendency on the part of the sufferer to avoid a strong light. The puffy faced, woebegone child with bleary eyes describes the situation.

The characteristic skin eruption usually comes on the fourth day. The small red spots may first appear on the forehead along the margin of the hair, on the sides of the face, and behind the ears. The neck and chest are next involved and later the arms, hands, and legs. Ordinarily the eruption is "all out," as we say, in twenty-four hours, although in some cases it may be delayed two or three days. As in scarlet fever when the rash fades there is peeling of the skin. The fever at times may be quite high.

Even though a child is in perfect health an attack of measles must not be considered lightly. In children under 2 years of age the disease is often quite severe. In older children, if uncomplicated, it is rarely serious. Danger lies, however, in complications that may involve the eyes, the nose and throat, the ears, and the lungs.

The exact cause of measles is unknown, although the research of Ruth Tunnicliff in describing a coccuslike organism is most suggestive. Despite the fact that the disease is conveyed usually by direct contact from the sick to the well, there is no doubt but that infection may be transmitted through objects and articles that have been contaminated, such as clothing, toys, handkerchiefs, and towels.

Convalescent serum, that is, serum that is obtained from patients who have had the disease and who have recovered, has been used both for the prevention and for the cure of measles. Convalescent blood serum or whole blood (blood plus cells) from one of the parents may be used if the infection is severe and will often lead to a marked reduction in the severity of symptoms and a shorter course.

Good nursing is necessary. Liquids should be given freely and the diet restricted largely to fruit juices, malted milk, thin soups, milk, and eggs. Hot lemonade furnishes alkalis as well as fluid. Laxatives should be avoided, particularly at the beginning of the disease. Particular pains must be taken to keep the nose and mouth as free from accumulated mucus as possible, and mouth washes or gargles can be used, care being taken not to tire the patient with too many things to do. Because of the danger of bronchial and lung infections the air of the sickroom should be kept moist through the use of a kettle of boiling water.

During epidemics entirely too large a proportion of those affected show involvement of the middle ear, and in some epidemics as high as 25 per cent of the cases will be followed by pneumonia. If recovery is followed by a persistent cough the chest should be X-rayed to determine the condition of the lungs.

Many observers believe that measles is increasing in severity and that the numerous complications require careful attention. The disease has been foolishly regarded by many as a harmless infection.

FACIAL NEURALGIA.

E. P. K. writes: I read in your column about a drug that can be used for the relief of facial neuralgia or tic douloureux. What is the name of this drug and where can it be purchased?

REPLY.

You probably have in mind trichlorethylene. Your druggist can obtain it for you. Place 20 to 25 drops on a piece of gauze and hold to the nose. After six to ten breaths have been drawn through the gauze the chemical will have evaporated and the vapor carried to the membrane of the nose. This may be repeated three or four times each day. Inhalation should be continued until the odor has entirely disappeared. Inasmuch as the drug occasionally produces dizziness, drowsiness, and sleep it is well to use it when lying down. Do not use the drug unless you have pain and then be guided by the direction of your physician.

HAIR HAS ODOR.

Mrs. H. M. W. writes: My 12 year old daughter has very strong smelling hair. What causes this?

REPLY.

Very oily hair has a tendency to transmit a strong odor. Investigate possible infection and use frequent shampoos.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph. D.

The idea that woman is the "weaker sex" has no evidence from science. From the very beginning of life girl babies show a lower mortality rate than boy babies. In fact, it is much more difficult, according to life insurance companies, to rear a boy than a girl, from the standpoint of health. A study of the death rate from tuberculosis between 1900 and 1920 by an insurance company showed that women are much more resistant to this disease than are men. So who is the more delicate?

BACK TO THE SOIL.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Why should poor America [or rich America, if you prefer] feed from the public treasuries of the nation and the individual states 5,000,000 idle people, in spite of the enormous size of the territory of this country and the thinness of its population? The United States has about twice the population of Germany, while Germany has one-third less territory than the state of Texas.

I am astonished that in spite of the many schemes that have been suggested, adopted, executed and again abandoned [from Roosevelt's first bright idea that all that was necessary to break the depression was to put money into circulation, no matter how, down to the latest plans that are being hatched], it seems to have occurred to no one that the concentration of immense crowds of people with no work in our monster cities is one of the primary causes of the evil [although in its turn it is the result of the building up of huge factories whose enormous output has in the very first place helped to produce the stagnation]. Hence the remedy will be in deflating the sizes of our cities instead of deflating the currency.

And how can that be done? Instead of wasting the nation's wealth in projects such as the Tennessee valley project the government should:

[1] Pass a law to buy up from the large farmers with their thousands of acres the larger part of their estates and then sell [or, if need be, give] them in small allotments of let me say one hundred acres each to those who are willing to provide for themselves and their families by working these small farms. A one hundred acre farm will, under normal conditions, not only allow a man to raise a family of any size he cares to, but it will also enable him to sell enough of his produce to save from $500 to $1,000 a year. For those who cannot farm, but who are willing to learn it, several large farms should be set apart as schools, where, with the proper interest and industry, any young man can, within a year's time, learn enough to be able to start for himself. Money spent by the government for the cause of a back to the soil movement would seem to yield more tangible results than all the other schemes that have been devised for "putting money into circulation."

[2] Encourage city and town industries whose nature permits their being carried on on a small scale, because one hundred small factory establishments will be able to give work to relatively more people than one factory putting out the same amount of commodities. M. METLEN.

German Department, Loyola University.

ON BEHALF OF STRAPHANGERS.

Oak Park, Ill., Jan. 11.—Anent your editorial pleas for elevated highways in the interest of automobile riders and the safety of the public why not consider also the interest and comfort as well as the safety of the public which have no automobiles and need something in addition to "modern street cars" if they, too, are to save a portion of their daily time in traveling.

If elevated highways are built, provision should be made for passenger-carrying express lines on these elevated highways. It seems as if something similar should already have been established along the outer drive. God knows the common people who travel about Chicago need at least as much consideration as auto riders or airplane interests.

Speaking in behalf of the long-suffering straphanger it is to be hoped our good mayor will exercise the same ingenuity for car riders that he has in all other directions, so that at the end of his tenure of office we can say, "Kelly was the man who solved one of the hardest problems in the universe, a unified and adequate transportation system for Chicago." J. LAWRENCE.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Just a friendly little tip to the general public to save their quarters from those photo snappers in the loop district. They took my youngster's picture. I mailed in my quarter three weeks ago. We never received the pictures. MRS. L. W.

ADVICE TO PHILANTHROPISTS.

Chicago, Jan. 15.—Why do not some of the individuals who yearly donate large sums of money for charitable purposes select several reliable families and lend them a certain amount of money to start them in a line of work that would prove profitable to them and by doing so eliminate them from the relief rolls? There are many families who have had farming experience and are willing to do that work again, but are unable to because of the lack of cash to get started. P. H.

YOUNG GIRLS PREFERRED.

Oak Park, Ill., Jan. 14.—Will one of your kind readers who is in the business of employing women tell me just why I'm turned down from a position I know I'm capable of filling? I've never been called homely. I weigh about 120 pounds and am about 5 feet 5 inches in height. My dress is as good or better than the average office girl, as dressmaking is a sideline of mine. O! but here's the reason—I'm too ancient; I'm 36. I no doubt could pass for 30, but I've been honest about my age.

Now I'd like some one to tell me why I'm too old. I've twenty years of business experience to my credit. No, it isn't to my credit, for it apparently hasn't any value. Over ten of these years were spent in a bank doing man sized jobs and at that time I received what might be considered as man sized pay. Now I'm too old for the bank's pension systems.

For the last year or so I've had several temporary jobs and worked by the side of the young women of 22 or 25 who seem to be the most desired to fill today's positions. They do just enough work to get by, no more. Five minutes before the final bell rings they begin putting their work away. If asked to work overtime they feel abused. Their minds are on the boy friends and, if married, on their housekeeping.

I know you must think me just a crabby old maid, but I was just turned down again today and I'm all het up.

DISCOURAGED.

THEN WHY "SPECIAL" ACCLAIM?

Chicago, Jan. 16.—Why do you say in your "Honolulu-Oakland by Air" editorial that the "average man or woman will assume that a flight that can be made by a woman cannot be extraordinarily difficult or hazardous"? The assumption that any feat accomplished by a woman could be neither difficult nor hazardous is absurd. On the contrary, special acclaim should be given a woman for performing a feat that would be perilous for a man equally skilled in air craft. Belittling the dangers of Miss Earhart's flight from Honolulu to Oakland because she is a woman and therefore incapable of accomplishing anything "extraordinarily difficult or hazardous" will not minimize the dangers of air travel for the average man or woman.

By Mae Tinèe

Good Morning!

Well, well! If here isn't "The Grand Duchess and the Waiter" back on the screen again! This time the story is gracefully draped with song, and so the production becomes musical instead of straight comedy, as it has been before.

For those who like just to relax and be made happy in a movie theater, "Here Is My Heart" is ideal entertainment. It's light as champagne bubbles and its effect is pleasantly exhilarating.

The plot has had some clever alterations and is br.. ly delineated by a picked cast whose white lights are Bing Crosby and Kitty Carlisle. Roland Young, Reginald Owen and Alison Skipworth satellite n glowing fashion.

Mr. Crosby is discovered as a fugitive from radio broadcasts. He has run away from an adoring and importunate public to do the things he's always wanted to do. Fishing in the middle of the Atlantic is one of them.

Fate shores him at Monte Carlo, where, reduc.. l to penury—and living in luxury—.. discovers the beauteous Princess Alexandra, her brother, Prince Nickolas, and her attendants and friends, the Countess Rostova and Prince Vladimir.

That he may do as he will—i. e., become her highness' waiter—Mr. J. Paul Jones buys the hotel—and so on, tunefully and engagingly to a happy ending.

Mr. Crosby is the most engaging creature! Crooning voice. Crooning personality. Easy as an old shoe. His quiet sense of humor never fails him and—he's far from being hard on the eyes, don't you think?

Roland Young and Reginald Owen are funny and amusing moments are contributed by Arthur Houseman and Akim Tamiroff.

"June in January," "Love Is Just Around the Corner," and "With Every Breath I Take" are the songs that charm. One of the these Mr. Crosby sings with himself—utilizing a phonograph record.

See you tomorrow.

Harvard to Offer Special Courses on Government Service

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Harvard university, recognizing the growing complexity of governmental activities, is developing a plan for training men for government service, Dr. James Bryant Conant, president of the university, announced today. He outlined the plan at a joint dinner of the Harvard Business School Club of New York and the Economic club.

The general basis of the plan will be to give men of technical and scientific training a coördinated instruction in the social sciences, Dr. Conant said. All the resources of the university are being brought into play.

Virginia Bruce Rising Again to Movie Stardom

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

Hollywood, Cal., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Virginia Bruce seems close to that starring eminence in films which she voluntarily quit three years ago when she thought she was retiring permanently to private life as Mrs. John Gilbert. Metro studios promise probable starring elevation for the slim blonde and newly divorced Mrs. Gilbert No. 4 shortly. Miss Bruce will play the featured rôle in M. G. M.'s "Times Square Lady", with Robert Taylor, a youthful "find," opposite her, and Pinky Tomlin, so-called "Hog Callin' Crooner," also introduced to film audiences in the cast.

Tomlin is a young man who doesn't know the meaning of the word "no" when uttered by film studio officials. He first "crashed" their attention here by writing the currently popular song, "The Object of My Affections," and then fighting his way onto local night club dance floors and offering to sing it. The commotion interested the movie people and the next thing they knew Tomlin had talked himself into their midst, with a contract.

Anna Sten has an odd trinket which, like the admiral's flag in the navy, always flies on her set when she is there at work. It's a tiny pair of red flannel drawers, and for her story, "The Wedding Night," now being filmed at United Artists studio, the tiny drawers flutter from the camera of Gregg Toland, head cameraman. The little red underpants came off a Russian doll which Miss Sten brought with her to Hollywood nearly two years ago. She gave them to Toland when the latter was filming her first American story, "Nana," which turned out a success.

Vidor's script girl on the set is Betty Hill, expected soon to become his wife. Miss Hill was named in the divorce action by Vidor's ex-wife, Eleanor Boardman. She has been an invaluable factor in every film success made by Director Vidor in several years.

Producer Sam Goldwyn has decided the time has arrived to put Herbert Asbury's story, "Barbary Coast," upon the screen. Goldwyn acquired the rights a year ago and had a couple of scenarists working on it, but decided that when the Legion of Decency campaign was in full force was not the right time to launch this story. Goldwyn's contention is that he can present the story as a completed film in perfect good taste. "It will not be the kind of a story for a children's Saturday matinée," this producer explains, "but it will not be a vulgar or dirty story in any sense. I never have made that kind of a story. Likewise, I never have made a story only for children; that is not the style of motion pictures that I am qualified to turn out."

Club Women Cheer Brooks' Declaration Against World Court

There are no new problems confronting America today in government or in any question to be decided by the government, Attorney C. Wayland Brooks yesterday told one hundred delegates of the Cook County Federation of Women's Clubs at the Palmer house. Present problems, he said, are constant ones, and are in constant need of attention from citizens.

Mr. Brooks detailed a list of problems now being given consideration by civic organizations. Among them were the bonus, liquor, the kind of government desired, taxes, representation, and the delegation of powers. All of these, he said, were pressing questions right after the revolutionary war, and had continued to be so.

After tracing the development of American government in all its branches, Mr. Brooks expressed his personal opinion on only one question. That is opposition to America entering the world court. This stand was cheered by the club women.

Tavern Club to Give Dance for Irish Troupe

BY JUDITH CASS.

With a dinner or supper dance as rare these days as a balmy breeze, enthusiastic approval will greet the news this morning that the Tavern club is to have a supper-dance on Saturday, Feb. 2. Even more interesting is the fact that the party is to be given for the Abbey Theater Players of Dublin, Ireland, who open a Chicago engagement next Monday evening.

Two years ago when the players were here the Tavern gave a similar party for them and it has not only been one of the fondest memories of their stay but also of all of those Tavern members and guests who were present.

This time many will have seen the players on the stage before meeting them at the supper-dance, for their first two performances next Monday and Tuesday evenings are to be society benefits for the Little Company of Mary hospital. It is too bad that George Russell (A. E.), the Irish mystic poet who was here last week for a visit with his son and daughter-in-law, the Diarmuid Russells, in Lake Forest, could not wait for their coming, since he was responsible in part for their organization back in the 1890s. With Lady Gregory and George Moore, Mr. Russell helped to bring players from London to Dublin in 1899 to produce W. B. Yeats' "Countess Cathleen."

This inspired Dramatist Yeats to write two one act plays in Irish dialect, each with a distinctive Irish locale, that resulted in the founding of the company of Abbey players.

Stuyvesant Peabodys Plan Cocktail Party.

If the Abbey players reach Chicago in time next Sunday they will be entertained at the cocktail hour by Mr. and Mrs. Stuyvesant Peabody. Miss Jean Schweppe and her cousin, Miss Mary Reed, will have one of the largest box parties at the second benefit performance a week from tonight when "The Far Off Hills" is given.

Mr. and Mrs. Lester Armour are planning a box party for Monday night, and so are Mr. and Mrs. Peter B. Carey, Mr. and Mrs. William Roy Carney, Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Walter J. Summings, Harold F. McCormick, and Mr. and Mrs. Albert A. Sprague.

To add to the general festivity of the two evenings Mrs. John R. Hurley has selected a group of pretty debutantes and post-debs to vend flowers and cigarets. The group includes Miss Nancy Avery, Miss Betty Babson, Miss Barbara Bastien, Miss Deborah Butler, Miss Beth Coleman, Miss Mary Chatillon, Miss Nancy Doering, Miss Barbara Fortune, Miss Isobel Gordon and her sister Marion, Miss Mary Harrington, Miss Ethel Johnston, Miss Frances Jeffery, Miss Durie Malcolm, Miss Muriel Picher, Miss Bette Rich, Miss Ellen Wacker, Miss Honoré White, and Miss Jean Wilhelm.

Plan Theater Party at Tea Thursday.

During the tea hour Thursday afternoon at the Casino plans will get under way for the opening night of "Continental Varieties" at the Studebaker theater on Feb. 4, a benefit for the Chicago Maternity Center. The meeting has been called by the five women who have accepted the general chairmanship of the evening including Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mrs. L. Hamilton McCormick, Mrs. Clark J. Lawrence, Mrs. John Andrews King, and Mrs. George A. Carpenter.

Because "Continental Varieties," starring Lucienne Boyer, has been so enthusiastically received in the east, it is predicted that the opening here will compare with the opening of the Ballet Russe in social as well as artistic importance. The benefit will mark the 40th anniversary of the founding of the Maternity Center.

Noel Cremin Will Wed in Colorado.

Some time between the first and the tenth of February Mrs. Joseph W. Cremin and her daughter, Noel, are leaving for Colorado Springs and the first time Miss Cremin comes back to Chicago she will be Mrs. Robert Henry Perlitz of Houston, Tex.

Because they want to make a certain cruise boat, also because they met in Colorado, Miss Cremin and her fiancé have hastened their post-Easter Chicago wedding plans and are making the final arrangements for a ceremony to be held at 11 o'clock the morning of Feb. 23 in Pauline chapel in Broadmoor, a suburb of Colorado Springs. Msgr. Joseph P. Morrison is going from Chicago especially to read the mass, and then the entire wedding party will adjourn to the Cheyenne

THROUGH THE LOOKING GLASS

An expert facial, with cream patted in by expert fingers until the skin fairly oozes oil, is one way to keep the complexion at its best during cold waves.

One way to combat the complexion destruction these cold waves bring in their wake is to break down and treat yourself to a facial. Months of creaming with your own two hands won't do as much to fight the ravages of cold and wind as one hour in a treatment chair, with a skilful operator slapping oil and still more oil on your face and neck.

We know because we tried it just yesterday, in a mood of desperation, about a skin so dry it threatened to blow away with the next cold gust. And we were so irritated we wouldn't have minded blowing with it — provided we were headed south.

If there is one thing in this world that makes us curl up and purr like a contented kitten beside a fire it's to have some one with light, magic fingers give us a treatment. The physical relaxation it induces is alone worth paying for—and what it does for the skin is worth writing sonnets about.

In the facial we had to try to get a little softness and suppleness into a wind dried complexion there is first a generous creaming of the back. This unkinks the nerves and the cream doesn't do the skin anything but good. Then you lie back in the downy chair and the girl gives face and neck the works. Starts with an oiling. Your skin fairly drinks it in. Then a gentle scrubbing with a complexion brush and soap and then nourishing cream patted in until the skin fairly oozes oil.

Then a little stimulation cream which makes the skin tingle. This is to your complexion what exercise is to your body and it's a great normalizer of all conditions—as necessary to dry as to oily skins. After this there is still more creaming, with a special heavy cream around the eyes. Your skin has had its nourishment and feels like satin.

Then, to wake you up, comes a mask of cotton saturated in tonic; you're left alone in your wrappings and if you don't snooze you're a nervous woman indeed.

The glow and the glory of your skin after such a session will delight you. If you're wanting to look your best for some large evening by all means preface your date with a treatment. And if you just want to keep your skin fit, in the face of ravaging weather, a facial is something you should really figure on in your beauty budget.

Household Tasks Can Keep You as Sprightly as Gym Work

BY ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

I heard one of our housekeeping sisters bitterly bemoaning the fact that she couldn't afford the gym and reducing salon courses that keep her unmarried, business-woman sister fit and trim.

The plain truth is that the woman with household duties to perform has all the breaks when it comes to exercise opportunity. I am not referring to the overworked woman with a flock of youngsters to look after. I mean the average household duty performer who would be worrying about her figure.

Another plain truth about the home woman as opposed to the business sister who HAS to keep fit is that the former is lazier about her personal upkeep.

But opposed to the economic urge as an inspiration, hasn't the housewife a man and children to spur her on? Naturally, I am not indicting all homebodies.

But there is a group—and not such a small one among the home women—who have oodles of time to work on themselves, and don't.

Their will power isn't what it should be for their figure's sake. They nibble and piece, time and again during the day. Their three meals are more than ample. They don't schedule their time for a daily outdoor airing. And they don't do their household duties the way they might be done in order to get real exercise benefit from the work. Running up and downstairs [grand for the legs and ankles, by the way] could be converted into a carriage beautifier by refusing to grasp the balustrade and bend the back and plow the way upstairs.

Vacuum cleaning could be done with erect figure instead of with a hunched over one. Sweeping could be done without hunched shoulders. Reaching up to shelves may be turned into a swell stretching exercise. No, you housekeeping girls have the gym work and your own reducing salon right there at your fireside It's HAVING to keep herself fit that makes that business sister the more sprightly looking one.

U. of M. Fraternities Cancel Plans for House Parties

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Several hundred girls who were coming here to attend house parties at fraternities in connection with the University of Michigan J-hop on Feb. 8 will have to change their plans. This is the result of the university's having warned the fraternities to raise their standards of social conduct. Six organizations have canceled house party plans, that being the interpretation of the broad warning of university officials.

Exhibits Show Merit in Lack of Instruction

Mrs. Beckwith, "Pa" Hunt Win Praise.

BY ELEANOR JEWETT.

The merits of a lack of instruction were never better illustrated than in the two current exhibitions by self taught artists, one of sculpture by Cyraa Cutter Beckwith in the Robert Breckenridge gallery, 908 North Michigan avenue, and the other, just around the corner, of paintings by "Pa" Hunt, in the Lingafelt and Myers studio, 130 East Delaware place.

Where ignorance is bliss, t'were folly to, be wise, or words to that effect, aptly sum up the charm of the "Pa" Hunt pictures. Hunt was a figure in Provincetown, that summer haunt of artists, and he became influenced by the painting atmosphere when he reached the age of sixty.

He spread a sheet tight between two posts and created his first painting upon that background. Then he graduated to canvas and painted for his own pleasure all kinds of pictures. He painted houses and boats, gardens, the sea, street corners, hills, and, in Paris, the Eiffel tower. His paintings were admired by professional artists. He was dubbed the "American Rousseau." He was given an exhibit in New York and his work was welcomed in the Provincetown art gallery exhibitions.

"Pa" Hunt did not let flattery turn his head. He painted in a simple, unsophisticated manner, up to the best moderne tradition, and he did not allow any one to tell him different. He had a lot of fun out of his art. The pictures yield a lot of fun now to the interested visitor. They are quaint and colorful and naive, and quite up to the standards set for us by the Carnegie, for example. Old Mr. Hunt is dead but his spirit lives, and chuckles, in these paintings.

The sculptor, Mrs. Beckwith, is much more the professional than was "Pa" Hunt. She took up modeling two years ago and, without instruction, created those things which she felt the urge to make.

Her natural talent is remarkable. Her work is charming in the tiny pieces; nowhere will you find a more exquisite group than "Motherhood," and in the larger heads, the portraits, there is a fine understanding and a remarkable skill. She gets a likeness marvelously.

We have too few sculptors in Chicago to let Mrs. Beckwith retire into private life after this show. Her genius with clay should be encouraged.

The exhibitions will continue to Jan. 31 and are well worth seeing.

Carrie Chapman Catt White House Guest; Sees Feminine Gains

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Carrie Chapman Catt, staying at the White House for the first time in 55 years of crusading, today made glowing prophecies there for both her causes, peace and feminine progress.

"The great women leaders are not gone," said Mrs. Catt. "When a cause reaches a point where it needs a leader, one will spring up.

"Fifty is the ideal age for the woman leader. Ruth Bryan Owen, minister to Denmark, impressed me tremendously as one woman at the right age really to do things—and I think she is doing them.

"Mr. Hitler is a back number in every respect. For every woman to get herself a husband instead of a job would mean polygamy in Germany. A band of women have gone to Mr. Hitler and got it officially said the time had not yet come when all women can be put back into the home."

SANDY CALDER, sculptor of "mobiles," gave his circus Sunday evening at the Walter S. Brewsters, his tent and ring in a corner of the high ceilinged Adam gallery, a Renoir, a Pruna, a Cezanne, a Picasso, a Toulouse-Lautrec, and a Derain or two gazing from their frames at the spectacle. Seated in rows of chairs and in cushions on the floor were the guests, applauding the acts and bursting into "The Man on the Flying Trapeze" when two of Mr. Calder's little wire figures neatly swung from the bars and one expertly caught into the little loop at the foot of the other as they met in midair.

Circus—Competition—Economical—Political.

All the familiar circus acts and a few side show specialties were given, with Mr. Calder, coatless, wearing ancient corduroy trousers, manipulating the strings that motivated the performers. There were wild west riders made of wire and felt, waving their sombreros; Japanese acrobats, tumblers, trained seals that tossed a tiny red ball back and forth with their noses, bareback riders, and a wild animal act with a lion of wire and wool tossing his mane threateningly.

There was a sword swallower and a strong man with bulging muscles outlined in wire; a knife thrower who hurled javelins at a wire lady in a spangled skirt. There was ever the shot that opened a bird cage, releasing the traditional white pigeons. And finally there was a chariot race, the horses with manes of looped wire, looking like horses by Chirico, racing madly down the rug, the miniature figures in the chariots waving flags and a gong adding to the excitement.

The circus over, Mr. Calder donned his coat and his favorite tie, made of red and green patchwork, and everybody sat down to supper. And the man with the black mustache by Derain, the Pruna nude, the girl by Renoir, Picasso's "blue period" absinthe drinker, and the music hall favorite by Toulouse-Lautrec continue to gaze at the animated scene.

KATHRYN CARVER, former wife of Adolphe Menjou of the cinema, gave a party at her hotel Saturday evening to which she invited Chicagoans who had entertained her during her visit in town. A young matron who was there told a feature of the evening. Immediately after dinner a troupe of dancers from a night club came in and performed. After they had concluded their number Miss Carver sent them into an adjoining room, ordered refreshments, and permitted the gentlemen of the party to join them for a post-prandial drink. While the husbands were chatting with the dancers the wives decided they would rehearse a little dance number, too. This they did, and when the husbands returned they were astonished to have their wives jump into a lively dance ensemble, as agile as anything. Now don't say we don't tell you what's going on around town.

WHEN WILL ROGERS flew to town last week, on his way to Notre Dame, where he was scheduled to speak, he found the weather pretty cold and that the overcoat he had with him, a tan camel's hair polo coat, was not his, but his son's, a much smaller size than his own similar coat. Humorist Rogers was unable to get into the coat, so a friend took him to a favorite tailor to buy another. Well, you've heard about the extravagance of movie stars. We beg to report that Mr. Rogers bought the cheapest coat in the house—$23.50. He spent about an hour there chinning with the proprietor, though.

HELEN BELL of the Children's theater, which is producing "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" next Saturday morning at the Harris theater, telephoned a young woman society editor of a suburban paper to give her some information about the play.

"What is the play?" the young woman asked.

"O, yes, 'Snow White in the Seventh Ward,'" she said. "When is the first performance?"

Navy Blue Takes the Lead in Styles for Springtime

BY RHEA SEEGER.

The annual spring excitement about navy blue is getting around. Navy blue suits carefully copied from the trig little page boy uniforms, even to scarlet seam binding, thin wool street dresses masquerading as coats with crisp white accents of white line or piqué, are distinctive in navy blue.

Navy blue bonnet hats or dashing off the face felts with gay cockades of scarlet or white to wear with these indigo ensembles of high fashion are just a few of the possibilities. Navy blue costume accessories to please the most critical soul are coming, so that you can really startle the boulevard with your fashion knowledge.

One ravishing color contrast with navy blue that hasn't been used often enough is a clear shade of canary yellow—for instance, a yellow sheer linen blouse with smooth blue wool or canary yellow crêpe. Canary yellow sweaters with rough navy blue tweeds. And with your midnight blue evening gown or dance dress of crisp stiffened lace or clinging chiffon try a belt of yellow flowers, and a yard square yellow chiffon handkerchief dripping from your fingers or wrist. Or, better yet, wear one of those delectably ruched capes of canary yellow tulle or net.

Stitched taffeta headgear in navy blue is just about the best of millinery fabrics. Stunning brimmed hats made of yards of fine pleatings or with crowns and brims made of rows and rows of stitching are the popular hats for these dark blue clothes. These hats are decidedly different, for low, flat crowns predominate. In fact, most of the newest models seem to have reached new low records. They are neat little numbers that have been especially designed to top correctly the slim, crisply cut and tailored new blue clothes that everybody grabs in a hurry while they are high fashion.

RED STEFAN

By PATRICIA WENTWORTH.

SYNOPSIS.

Stephen Enderby, an Englishman, had lived as a boy on the Russian estate of his stepfather and grew up with the large brood of children of a peasant family. When his mother died he went to live with his guardian in England. After the revolution in Russia, as Stefan Ivanovitch, he became a "secret observer" for England, adopting various peasant rôles to hide his identity. Now Stephen has inherited the fortune of his guardian and wants to quit his hazardous work. He is escaping out of Tronsk when he meets and rescues Elizabeth Radin, the widow of an executed engineer. Though English, her husband was half Russian. She is flying from the advances of Commissar Petroff, who is also after a secret formula of her husband's. Stephen takes her with him and tells her his history. Though he has fallen in love with her he refrains from letting her know. They are overtaken by Petroff and Irina, a beautiful communist, who wanted Stephen herself and resents Elizabeth. Stephen plans to outwit them by denouncing Elizabeth, claiming he never suspected her identity until she began to talk in her sleep. Petroff believes his story, as does Irina. Elizabeth thinks Stephen has turned against her. But he is waiting his chance, which comes, to knock Petroff out. Then Stephen disguises himself and Elizabeth and they slip away, traveling by train to another village where Stephen keeps a horse and sledge in which they continue toward the Polish border. Stephen is known in this vicinity as Nikolai. They stop overnight at a house in a village where the schoolmaster tells them of a broadcast he has heard about two people wanted by the police as enemies of the state.

INSTALMENT XXXII.

SUSPECTED.

They were all watching the schoolmaster. He unfolded a piece of paper and bent it over to catch the light. Then he read in his rasping voice:

"The man: Over 6 feet in height and very powerfully built. Red hair and beard. Bright blue eyes. Bronzed complexion. Age about 30. The woman: Five foot 5. Slight build. Black hair. Gray eyes. Good teeth. Small hands and feet. Small triangular scar on the back of the left hand. Age about 24."

Elizabeth's hands were clasped upon her lap. They were pressing down upon her knees in an effort to stop that betraying tremor. She did not need to look down at her hands, but she did look down at them with a sick involuntary glance. The left hand was uppermost, and the scar showed faintly through the brown stain that Stephen had used. It would be Petroff who had remembered the scar. His mother had struck at her with his scissors, and he had seen the wound heal and leave that little three-cornered mark. She shifted her grip and covered it.

No sooner had she done so than her fear increased. She ought not to have moved her hands. It was the last thing she ought to have done. If the schoolmaster were watching her he might think. . . . She looked up and saw his eyes fixed upon her. Behind the thick lenses they had a cold, unwavering stare like the eyes of a fish seen through the plate-glass of an aquarium.

For a moment Elizabeth felt as if she were going to faint. Then Stephen broke in with a hearty laugh.

"They won't get far, those two. A man who's got red hair ought to be careful about getting into trouble. He's a marked man, and with a description like this out against him any one who sees him half a mile away can't help smelling a rat. O no—he won't get far, you'll see."

"You came from Orli?" said the schoolmaster abruptly. He addressed Elizabeth, but it was Stephen who answered.

"Yes, this morning."

"And before that?"

"From Moscow." Again it was Stephen who spoke.

The schoolmaster turned and looked at him.

"Does your sister never speak?"

"O, sometimes—sometimes," said Stephen, laughing.

Stasia's father threw back his head and laughed, too.

"That's a good joke! Don't you call that a good joke, Ilya? She's a woman, isn't she? And he asks if she can talk! I call that as good a joke as I've heard. Can she talk, indeed! It's easily seen you're not married, schoolmaster."

Anton Glinka took no notice. He asked Elizabeth directly.

"Is your husband alive?"

Without looking up, Elizabeth said, "No."

"And when he was alive you lived in Moscow?"

Elizabeth said, "Yes."

"What was he, this husband of yours?"

Now he and every one must see how she was trembling. What a poor weak fool she was to shake at a word and betray Stephen. It didn't matter about herself, but it mattered about Stephen. She was betraying Stephen. She sat there dumb, and heard Stephen answer for her.

"Ah!—you'd better ask me about that. Her husband? Poor Anna! Look how she shakes at the very sound of his name. You shouldn't torment her with your questions, because she's silly in her head and strangers frighten her." He dropped his voice to a confidential tone. "She was married to a Chinese—one of those Chinese executioners. Li Fan Tung was his name. A great big hulk of a man and as yellow as corn. No wonder she shivers and shakes when any one asks her about him. Yellow as corn and eyes like slits, and one of these big curved knives at his belt, and a revolver on the top of that. He'd come home to his dinner and tell her about the people he'd shot—thirty and forty in a day—all counter-revolutionaries, and a good riddance, of course, but it put Anna off her food. A woman hasn't the stomach for that sort of thing. I can tell you he gave one the creeps. And why she married him nobody knows. But she was always a bit weak in the head—I suppose she couldn't say 'No.'"

"Would you like to hold him?" she said.

The baby was soft and warm, and very deeply asleep. Elizabeth put an arm about it, and felt safer. She could even begin to be angry with Stephen for saying she had been married to a Chinaman.

"And he is dead?" said the schoolmaster.

"A month ago," said Stephen. "Some one shot him in the back on a dark night, so I had to go and fetch Anna away. We are going to the collective farm at Rasni. That's the life—isn't it, Ilya? All working together, with the state behind you."

The schoolmaster listened, frowning. Presently he went back to the piece of paper from which he had read the broadcast message. When Stephen stopped, he turned it again to catch the light.

"Six foot in height and very powerfully built——."

Late in the evening when the guests had all gone and the children were asleep, Elizabeth had a word with Stephen. He had been out with Ilya to see to the beasts, and she came across to the door and leaned against it, not speaking at first, but looking at him, her eyes bright and angry. On the platform of the stove Stasia was feeding her baby, her shoulder turned to the room and her head bent. Just so might Mary have watched her child. To all intents and purposes they were alone.

"What is it?" said Stephen.

Elizabeth leaned on the door.

"That man—suspected us."

Stephen nodded.

"It doesn't matter. We'll be gone before dawn. By the time he finds out that we're not at Rasni we'll be over the frontier."

"Shall we?"

"Of course we shall. I told you that before."

They were so close together that with the least movement she could have touched him, or he her. Neither of them made that movement. A bright anger sprang up in Elizabeth like a bright, brittle flame. She said a little breathlessly:

"Why did you say I had been married to a Chinaman?"

"You were giving yourself away. I suppose you know you were shaking."

The flame of anger died. She had so nearly betrayed them both.

"I tried not to."

"Well, I had to say something to account for it. I'm sorry you minded the Chinese executioner. I thought I invented him rather well. You see, the important thing just then was to produce something that would take the wind out of the schoolmaster's sails. A Chinese executioner was exciting. Village people like stories of what goes on in Moscow, and the more blood and thunder the better."

Quite suddenly Elizabeth's eyes laughed up at him. They at least were not disfigured. When she laughed, they were very starry.

"I'm so tired of being weak in the head," she said.

Don't Correct Baby Talk of Young Children

BY GLADYS HUNTINGTON BEVANS

We were talking yesterday about not using baby talk to the "youngest" for the reason that his only pattern for language is what he hears about him, and that such prattle is confusing to him and a handicap in his efforts to communicate with the world at large.

But though we do believe that, we do not believe that it is our duty as parents to set forth upon a crusade of correction and to try to erase from a little boy or girl's speech those fascinating, individual, early words that he creates to convey his meaning to us.

I can't imagine anything more dull than to try dutifully and academically to correct the rich, strange words that the young child uses as a reproduction of what our speech sounds like to him—or as his best imitation, with the limited power at his command, of that subtle process called speech.

There comes a time, to be sure, when it is a kindness to a child to give him the right pronunciation for the wrong one in order to save him from the embarrassment of smiles from grownups or ridicule from his own kind.

But when he is little and learning the delicate coördinations of speech, we let him alone—not only for his sake but for our own. For who would want to miss the interesting versions of language that our babies and little boys and girls offer us? "Umph" and "eemey" and "fange" give piquancy to the conversation, in otherwise beautiful English, of the tiny boy who loves "elephants" and "automobiles" and "fire enginesl" "Om beese" as the answer to "Who are you?" will in the course of time be answered by "I'm baby," so enjoy it and don't bother the blond baby girl about it yet.

The strange jargon that no one but mother understands will untangle itself in the course of time—in normal cases. Some children take longer than others to do it. So let's enjoy the language they create but let us also be sure that our own speech is clear and not too rapid.

Sir Hamilton Harty Reherses Orchestra for Concerts Here

Sir Hamilton Harty, noted conductor in chief of the London Symphony orchestra, had his first rehersal with the Chicago Symphony orchestra yesterday morning in preparation for his appearance as guest conductor Thursday evening and Friday afternoon.

He made his first Chicago appearance a year ago, when, as now, he came to take the baton during the midwinter vacation of Frederick Stock, and he was here again last summer as one of the guest conductors during the season of the orchestra at the Swift Bridge, A Century of Progress.

For four years he has appeared during the summer season of concerts at Hollywood Bowl. In his present engagement he will conduct Mozart's Divertimento for strings and horns, Frederick Delius' "In a Summer Garden," a march from "Hamlet" and the overture to "Beatrice and Benedict," both by Berlioz, and Brahms' Fourth Symphony.

How Christmas Seal Dollar Is Spent Is Told by Institute

Preceding the final windup of the annual Christmas seal sale of the Chicago Tuberculosis institute, Mrs. Theo B. Sachs, executive director of the institute, yesterday issued a statement showing how the Christmas seal receipts are spent.

The Christmas seal dollar is divided, she pointed out, into four main divisions, each an important part of the yearly health budget. They are: Health education, 60.5 per cent; nursing service, 23.3 per cent; clinical costs, 11.7 per cent and administration, 4.5 per cent.

Regardless of whether the recent sale reaches the anticipated goal, this budget will be followed out insofar as division of percentages is concerned, Mrs. Sachs said. Nevertheless, it is imperative, she added, that the needed amount be realized, and for this reason persons who have not yet sent in their remittances have been urged to do so.

Elisabeth Bergner Scores Triumph in N. Y. Stage Debut

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—The promise Elisabeth Bergner gave in the film "Catherine the Great" when it appeared in America a year ago was richly fulfilled when she made her first American personal appearance tonight as the star of "Escape Me Never."

Always kind to distinguished Londoners, New York's first nighters became completely incoherent in their praises tonight and proclaimed Miss Bergner the greatest actress they ever saw. Not since Helen Hayes' triumph in "Coquette" has an actress scored so overwhelming a personal triumph.

Tiny, blonde, and not at all beautiful, Miss Bergner has a magic that cannot be gainsaid. Her low pitched tones quieted the house whenever she spoke, and tonight's was a difficult bronchial audience.

Mountain Country club for a wedding breakfast.

For a number of years past Mr. and Mrs. Cremin have leased a house at Broadmoor. It was there that the friendship between Miss Cremin and Mr. Perlitz developed into romonce and it is there that a number of the pre-nuptial parties are to be held.

Miss Florence Cremin, who has been spending the winter in Broadmoor, is to precede her sister to the altar as maid of honor. Miss Anne Perlitz, a sister of the bridegroom, will be the only bridesmaid.

Charles Perlitz will be his brother's best man and ushering will be Henry Baby of Chicago, Thomas Green of Houston and William Cremin, who is making the trip from Princeton, N. J., for the wedding. Young Mr. Cremin is a senior this year at Princeton.

One of the nicest of the many parties for the young couple will be the dinner-dance Mrs. Ralph Giddings is giving for them Feb. 21 at her home in Colorado Springs. Mr. and Mrs. Cremin will give the bridal dinner at their Broadmoor residence the night of Washington's birthday.

Miss Jane Eckert Bride on Saturday.

Wedding plans are also the all engrossing topic about the Hinsdale residence of Mr. and Mrs. Walter H. Eckert. At 8:0 Saturday evening in the Union church in Hinsdale the Eckerts' lovely daughter, Jane, will repeat her wedding vows with Fredcrick Alan Dawson, son of the Alex L. Dawsons, also of Hinsdale. After the ceremony there will be a reception at the Eckert home.

Two of Miss Eckert's Wellesley classmates are coming to precede her to the altar. Miss Nella Nevelle, whose home is in Houston, Tex., will be her maid of honor and Miss Olive Riley of Boston, a bridesmaid. Two more bridesmaids will be Mrs. George Davey [the former Mary Esther Churchill], whose home is now in South Bend, and Miss Barbara Dawson, a sister of the bridegroom.

Charles Kimball of Philadelphia, brother-in-law of Mr. Dawson, is to be the best man, and ushering will be Thomas Dawson, Herbert Bruckner, Frazer Irons, Clement Thompson, Philip West, and John West.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney S. Gorham entertained for Miss Eckert and Mr. Dawson at a very gay dinner-dance Friday evening at the Glenview club. On Sunday evening the Horace Holcombs, the George Bells, and the junior Dana Slades, all Hinsdale residents, entertained them at dinner and bridge. On Thursday evening Mr. and Mrs. Charles Kimball, who will have arrived from Philadelphia, are having a dinner and theater party and on Friday evening Mr. and Mrs. Eckert are giving the bridal dinner at home.

On Saturday evening Mr. Dawson and his bride will slip away from the reception on a wedding trip that will take them to Bermuda. Upon their return they are to make their home on Forest avenue in Evanston.

Mary Bradley Will Give Lecture Today.

Mrs. William Nelson Pelouze, Mrs. Allan M. Clement, Mrs. David O. Dunbar, Mrs. George A. Thorne, Mrs. Spencer L. Adams, and Mrs. Charles Wrigley are a few of those who have made luncheon reservations today at the Woman's Athletic club. The luncheon will follow Mary Hastings Bradley's lecture "As We Were."

The Cercle Francais will hear Philippe Soupault speak on "Literature and the Depression" this afternoon at its 2 o'clock conference. Preceding M. Soupault's talk Mme. M. M. Sorson will read "The Ant and the Grasshopper." M. and Mme. Marcel Peyronnet, the new French vice consul and his wife, are to be special guests and Mrs. Lewis Bernays and Mrs. Walter Deemer will preside at the tea table.

Of interest this evening on the north shore will be the demonstration of the teletactor, an electrical instrument that teaches the deaf to learn a language through the fingers, by Prof. Robert H. Gault at Mr. and Mrs. Morton Mergentheim's log house at 1258 Scott avenue in Hubbard Woods. The evening is to be a benefit for the American Institute for the Deaf Blind.

Mrs. Walter J. Jarratt is opening her home at 229 Lake Shore drive at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon for a meeting of the Tower Town Group of the Chicago Junior school. The highlight of the afternoon will be an illustrated lecture on "Early Chicago" by Miss Caroline McIllvaine, former director of the Chicago Historical society.

Color Selected for Birthday Ball.

From Washington comes word that the official color for the decorations of the President's birthday ball to be held Jan. 30 will be bluebird blue. This color, which is brighter than an Alice blue, will drape the walls and the boxes, so our smarter hostesses will begin to plan an evening gown for the occasion that will harmonize with the blue.

Mrs. Frederic W. Upham and Mrs. Frederick T. Haskell are this week's radio speakers for the ball. Mrs. Haskell, who is head of the Presbyterian hospital board, will speak tomorrow afternoon and Mrs. Upham will speak Friday.

Theron Chapman will have the first exhibit of his camera work shortly—although unofficial—on a billboard outside of the Harris theater. The members of the cast of the Junior league's production of "Snow White" will be his subjects.

Immediately after the rehersals this afternoon Mrs. Chapman, who plays the part of one of the dwarfs, will take all of the actresses to her apartment, where her husband will be waiting with his camera. The finished work will serve to advertise the league's play at the theater.

Mrs. William F. Burrows and her daughter, Miss Louisa Burrows, have gone west as usual for the winter. They are in Pasadena now, but at the end of the month they will go to Chandler, Ariz., where they will stay until returning to Lake Forest in May.

CONQUERING CONTRACT

By P. HAL SIMS

THE TIME FACTOR.

This is one factor, in both bidding and playing cards of which it is really impossible to exaggerate the importance. Undoubtedly it receives recognition in the play; no teaching of card playing, no discussion of difficult or touch-and-go hands can ignore it. Nevertheless, we do not hear much, if anything, about it in connection with bidding. Yet bidding is an attempt to forecast the number of tricks which the partnership of twenty-six cards can expect to take if they secure the declaration.

I EXTEND ITS SCOPE FURTHER THAN THIS. I believe that the bidding should not only take into account the number of tricks likely to be made [or lost], but also, wherever possible, the LINE OF PLAY MOST LIKELY TO PRODUCE THE GREATEST NUMBER OF TRICKS OR TO REDUCE THE RISK TO A MINIMUM.

I call this "synchronizing the bidding to the ultimate line of play," and this refers not only to the plays your side expects to make, but also those which the enemy is likely to attempt, or even to be able to develop against you; assuming that they attack in the most effective manner which their cards permit, and also assuming that such important cards as you believe to be against you in view of the bidding are placed where they will do the most harm. These considerations can crop up in almost any bidding sequence. Notable examples which we have discussed include employment or rejection of the one-over-one in the process of placing the no-trump declaration in the right hand. The no-trump bid with a long concealed strong suit is another example, securing the declaration for the "declarer" type of hand, no matter whether the bid ends up in his suit or in no trumps. Then there is the hand where in the final stages you take over control and nail down the declaration in the hand which is protected by the time factor, and take the bid away from what often appears superficially to be the more obvious hand and safer declaration. You do this because that obvious declaration would require the wrong hand to be declarer—the one that does not control the timing and which, by holding the declaration, robs the other hand of the time control which it would possess only if it were led up to at the first trick. Recently, in a local tournament, my wife and her partner, E. Melvin Goddard, showed perfect bidding technique on the following hands: South, Mrs. Sims, held

Ht. K x	Cl. K x x

and bid a diamond. True, a no-trump bid might be considered, but this hand has no tenaces and requires to be led up to only because of the two lonely kings. In fact, it does not look so good for no trumps unless the partner can bid hearts, and the best way to get such bid from him is to facilitate a one-over-one in hearts by bidding a diamond rather than a spade. If he bids a heart, two no-trump rebid will protect the club situation. Her partner, however, made an unexpected response: One spade. He had

Sp. 10 9 8 x x x	Di. Q x
Ht. A Q J	Cl. x x

Mrs. Sims now bid four spades, saying, as you well know, "If you have a minimum hand and nearly passed, we should still make four spades; if you have any high card values, make a constructive rebid, as I think then we have a slam; don't worry about the spades; I know your spades are weak, for I have the tops in them. That's why I bid four spades instead of the jump leeway forcing response of three spades. I want you to rebid, if at all, on outside values." Ed Goddard now made a fine bid—five hearts. This is a kind of cue bid, showing top control of that suit in accepting and developing the slam try. My wife would read this for a four card suit, but that is immaterial; she knew they had a slam provided the opponents could not take in two club tricks immediately. Her club king had to be led up to, not through; she had to be declarer, and that could only be in no trumps.

Rightly Taking Control.

So she bid five no trumps. Six spades by her partner, having no further information to give and signing off in a spade slam, since he did not contribute the ace of clubs or a void in clubs permitting a cue bid to encourage a grand slam. Six no trumps by Mrs. Sims. Pass. Six no trumps were made, only the ace of clubs making against the hand. Where the hand was played in six spades, a club lead picked off two immediate club tricks, as the ace-queen were over the king.

The Stage

The recent censorship ban issued in Boston against the drama, "Within the Gates," by Sean O'Casey, eminent Irish playwright, has caused a cancelation of the company's tour, including its booking in Chicago. John Tuerk, producer of the play, announced that this incident had injured the prospects of a tour, and that he could not risk the chances of transporting a company of sixty people around the country with a censorship complex working against it.

Legal action will be taken against the city of Boston in the hope of recovering $3,000 spent in advertising and other advance expenses. "Within the Gates" will return to New York for a supplementary engagement, opening tomorrow night.

Five hundred students of Northwestern university will attend the Old Globe company's performances in the Studebaker theater next Thursday night. They will be the guests of an anonymous alumnus who is a devotee of Shakespeare and a promoter of the movement to give the Old Globe organization a permanent home in Chicago.

John Drinkwater's drama, "Abraham Lincoln," will be staged by the Circuit theater in the Goodman theater for one performance Friday night, Feb. 8. Forty performances of the play will be given during February in the smaller cities and college communities of Illinois and northern Indiana. The rôle of President Lincoln will be acted by Howard Cox.

Eva Le Gallienne's engagement in "L'Aiglon" at the Grand Opera house, opening Feb. 4, will be limited to one week. Her company includes Merle Maddern, Paul Leyssac, Hugh Buckler, Averell Harris, Sayre Crawley, Marion Evensen, Donald Cameron, Florida Friebus, Leona Roberts, John Salzman and Helen Walpole. . . . The engagement of "Stevedore" at the Selwyn theater has been extended indefinitly. C. C.

SCOLDED INTO TRYING IT

"A friend who knew how I suffered every month kept scolding me until I had to try Midol. I am glad that she did! Two tablets now see me through my worst day comfortably. I always tell every girl I discover who is still suffering the way I used to."

Many users speak just as highly of Midol. It acts fast, is effective for several hours, but it's not a narcotic. It is just a special medicine, for this special purpose, and specialists can tell you how well it works! You'll see it on the druggist's counter — or just ask for Midol. It always helps, and in some cases brings complete comfort, so it can hardly disappoint you!

Why Be Stingy with Words of Kindly Praise?

BY DORIS BLAKE.

Yesterday we partly answered V. D.'s query about whether or not it pays a young woman to be honest in her judgment in people. She meant, of course, whether it pays to make disparaging statements because you're not attracted enough to people to investigate them further. There's more to be said on this subject, because it is a thing that costs friendships.

One sets herself up as a pretty overbearing individual who elects herself judge of people at first glance. Women, we think, are more prone to this habit than men, although you'll find in a certain type of the latter the same tendency to begrudge a word of praise. In either event it denotes a character not well rounded out.

However, it's more of the habit of saying the unpleasant thing as against the far more remunerative one of looking for and finding the pleasant thing to comment on. You can cultivate either habit successfully.

You can develop the former habit until you scare people away with the biting tongue, yeah, scare away people who know your bite is not so bad as your bark. Or, you can endear people to you by having something nice to say about everyone. This can be done, too, without any reflection on your honesty. You can even keep silent, and still not reflect on your honesty, if you can't find a good word to say. But the idea of introducing the topic is simply to hold up the always carping criticism as the surest way to isolate people from you, even those who have not suffered the blight of your criticisms. Word gets around you're a woman with a sharp tongue. And that is no recommendation for one who enjoys friends.

Boston Police Prohibit Lecture on O'Casey Play

Boston, Mass., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Prof. Henry Wadsworth Longfellow Dana, grandson of the poet Longfellow, was prevented by the police tonight from lecturing on Sean O'Casey's play "Within the Gates," which was banned from a Boston stage last week. Several hundred persons were present in Byron hall, a short distance from historic Beacon Hill, when police told Prof. Dana that Mayor Frederick W. Mansfield had ordered the lecture stopped. Driscoll said no license had been obtained to hold a public meeting.

Moderate Use of Bran Foods Is Beneficial

Fascinating Dishes Employ Healthful Cereal.

BY MARY MEADE.

American meals straddle a pendulum. A new discovery by food workers will start us swinging violently toward a certain type of dining. Then a warning arrives against overdoing the good thing, and back we swing, determined never to touch that sort of food again.

All of which is most foolish—especially as it relates to bran. A handful of years ago we came to realize that lots of us weren't getting enough of the bulky material in our diet to insure us good elimination. Doctors and dietitians recommended the use of more whole grain cereals, fresh fruits and vegetables, and bran. Whereupon enthusiasts went in for these foods—especially for bran—in such a way that a good deal of inside irritation and sickness resulted. Physicians therefore sent out a warning against overdoses of this husky food—and back we came again, putting bran on the blacklist.

But let's not do it. Not only do we need these bulky foods taken in moderation for sparkling health, but they can give us something else as well—a whole new array of tasty dishes to vary the monotony of our three meals a day.

Bran and fruit seem to have a special weakness for each other's flavors. Figs, raisins, prunes, and dates all clamor for a chance to have fun in bran breads, puddings, and such. Just for instance, try slices of this one for next Sunday night's spread:

Bran Fig Honey Bread.

1 egg, well beaten
¼ cup brown sugar
½ cup honey
1 tablespoon butter or margarine, melted
1 cup bran
2½ cups flour
¾ teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup chopped figs
½ cup chopped nut meats
1½ cups milk

Blend the beaten egg, brown sugar, honey, and shortening. Add the bran. Sift together the flour, soda, baking powder, and salt. Stir into this the chopped figs and nuts. Add the dry ingredients and the milk alternately to the first mixture, stirring between additions. Turn the batter into a large greased loaf pan and bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) for 1¼ hours.

Or when the bridge hounds come baying over to your house astound them with round little sandwiches of:

Bran Prune Bread.

1 cup bran
1 cup sour milk
1 tablespoon molasses
½ cup chopped prepared prunes
½ cup sugar
1 cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
¾ teaspoon salt

Prepare the prunes by stewing, pitting, and chopping. Combine the bran, sour milk, molasses, and prunes. Stir in the sugar, then slowly add the remaining dry ingredients, which have been sifted together. Pour the batter into greased cans. Cover them tightly and steam for three hours. Cool and cut in thin slices for bread and butter sandwiches, or spread them lightly with a mixture of honey and butter.

Peanut Bran Refrigerator Cookies.

2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
2 cups bran
½ cup butter or margarine
½ cup peanut butter
1½ cups white sugar
½ cup brown sugar
2 eggs, well beaten

Sift together the flour, baking powder, and salt. Combine it with the bran. Cream together thoroughly the butter and the peanut butter. Add the sugars, creaming them in well. Beat in the eggs, then add the flour mixture gradually, beating well. Shape into rolls 1½ inches in diameter and roll them in waxed paper.

Let the cookie dough chill in the refrigerator overnight or until firm enough to slice. With a sharp knife cut it into one-quarter inch slices, baking them on a greased sheet in a hot oven (400 degrees F.) for eight minutes or until crisp and browned.

NOXZEMA—is wonderful for RED CHAPPED HANDS

Overnight relief. Hands made softer, whiter, too.

Many doctors use Noxzema themselves for Chapped Hands

IF YOU want quick, sure relief from ugly, Red Chapped Hands, get a jar of Noxzema today. Apply this snow-white, greaseless, medicated cream tonight—as much as the pores will absorb. See what a big improvement there is in the morning—soreness gone, hands softer, smoother, whiter in only 8 hours!

Famous Noxzema Cream was originated for sunburn relief. Doctors and nurses in Maryland Hospitals first began using it for Chapped Hands. Today over 12,000,000 jars are used yearly—more for Chapped Hands than any other use!

A Philadelphia Physician writes, "In my practice, my hands naturally get in very bad shape, and I have used all kinds of creams but Noxzema certainly gives better and quicker results than any other."

Noxzema costs very little—get a jar at any drug or department store.

Treat Constipation THE WAY THAT DOCTORS DO

Use A Liquid Laxative

Doctors and hospitals have always used liquid laxatives. So would you, if you knew how well they do their work—how much better you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Ask your doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help, and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly without any help.

Once you have experienced this comfort, you will never return to any form of help that does not encourage variation from the "fixed dose"—too often an overdose for sensitive persons, or young people! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit—even in children. Its action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset. It's the ideal family laxative because it's a doctor's prescription, and safe.

Try Syrup Pepsin. Give regulated doses until Nature restores regularity. Those who have made the "liquid test" know why a doctor favors a liquid laxative.

Your druggist has it

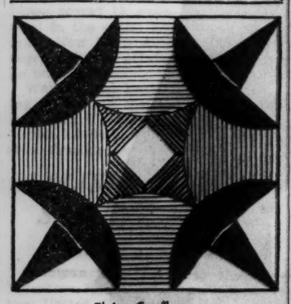
Modern Quilt Is Descendant of a Colonial Pattern



Flying Swallows.

Patterns of this quilt design are 5 cents, stamps or coin. Address Nancy Cabot, Chicago Tribune, or call at one of the Tribune Public Service offices, One South Dearborn street and Tribune Tower.

BY NANCY CABOT.

"Flying Swallows" is a comparatively new quilt. One may trace its genealogy, however, to the old colonial pattern, "Wandering Foot." "Mississippi Oak Leaves" is a descendant of the "Foot" family and a rather close relative of "Flying Swallows." The youngest generation of this family differs from its elders because it is set together in a novel block formation, and it is made entirely of plain materials. In the original coverlet the colors were rose, gold, blue, and white.

FARMS PREPARE FOR SERIOUS BUG PESTS THIS YEAR

War Council to Be Held Friday in Des Moines.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Pests loom as potential crop destroyers in the grain growing states. Chinch bugs threaten to repeat their destruction of millions of dollars' worth of corn and small grain in the middle west.

Farmers are being warned of the intensity and extent of the infestation of this pest. Agriculturists are laying their plans for a concerted war against the chinch bug next season. Entomologists and crop experts from eleven middle west states will meet in Des Moines, Ia., next Friday to arm themselves for the mighty fight that must be made to protect crops from invasions of the chinch bug. States to be represented at the meeting are: Iowa, Illinois, Missouri, Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma, Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Minnesota, and Wisconsin.

Prospect for Corn Borer.

The European corn borer may return in great numbers with favorable weather. It destroyed many acres of corn in the United States and Canada a few years ago. C. F. Curtiss, a former dean of the Iowa State college at Ames, is an authority on this pest, which he studied in its home in Europe. He warns:

"The recent dry years have put a crimp in the European corn borer, but, if the European experience is duplicated in the United States, we may look for the corn borer back in strong numbers after a season or two of favorable climatic and moisture conditions."

The chinch bug is of more immediate concern to farmers in the corn belt. Surveys made recently in Illinois, Missouri, Iowa, and Kansas indicate that this pest is hiberating in greater numbers and over a wider area than was the case last year. Entomologists in Iowa have found as high as 60,000 bugs to the square foot of soil in some localities.

Plan to Combat Pest.

Federal entomologists in Washington predict that chinch bug infestation will be more severe in the middle west this year than in 1934, unless weather unfavorable to the pest intervenes.

Farmers are urged to make their plans to meet the chinch bug situation this year by destroying them in their winter hiberating quarters as far as possible and by growing crops that are not attacked by this pest.

Illinois farmers already are out examining their stalk fields and fence rows to locate the bugs in their winter hiding places. Some have removed and destroyed millions of the bugs by cutting their corn and feeding the fodder to live stock this winter.

Many Destroyed on Fodder.

At THE TRIBUNE Experimental farm near Yorkville signs recently have been found indicating that the chinch bugs were desperate last fall in finding hiding places in fields left bare where crops were removed. For example, in a field of corn stubble men at the farm the other day found chinch bugs snuggly tucked away for the winter in two penny-sized match boxes. There were about two dozen in one box.

Most of the bugs, however, remained on the corn stalks and are being destroyed as the fodder is hauled out of the field, ground into coarse meal, and fed to cattle.

Removing the entire stalk of corn from the field and temporarily discontinuing the growing of wheat, barley, and rye—crops commonly attacked by the chinch bug—are practices that have been found effective in helping to keep the pest under control at THE TRIBUNE farm. Dust barriers with ribbons of oil on the brow of the ridge were also used successfully last summer in fighting chinch bugs.

DIES OF INJURIES FROM FALL.

Injuries incurred in a fall at his home Tuesday caused the death in the county hospital yesterday of John Forsyth, 32 years old, 2869 North Clark street.

News of The Tribune Experimental Farm

By Frank Ridgway

Alfalfa Stands Winter

Jan. 21, 1935.

A FIELD survey made today revealed that all of the 22 varieties of alfalfa planted last August are withstanding the winter and are in excellent condition at THE TRIBUNE experimental farm. There is a fine stand of all the varieties. The test plots have been protected by a blanket of snow which has stayed on during most of the severe weather this winter. There has been practically no alternate freezing and thawing to damage the tender young plants.

The 22 plots of alfalfa furnish an excellent opportunity for northern Illinois farmers to see the crops growing side by side under practical farm conditions. All of the seeds of these varieties were planted the same day, Aug. 15, 1934. With plenty of fall and early winter rains the plants were given a good start.

They also have been favored by a crop of volunteer oats which came up last fall. This has furnished a protective covering, helping to hold the snow.

The test plots are located on high ground; the soil is a light clay loam. Five years ago the soil was sweetened through the application of about 1½ tons of limestone to the acre. A half ton per acre of ground raw rock phosphate was applied in the fall of 1933. Inoculated alfalfa seed was sown at the rate of from 16 to 20 pounds to the acre on strips of land 20 feet wide and 500 feet long.

The following varieties of alfalfa are included in the experiment: Kansas Common, Oklahoma Common, Nebraska Hardy Common, Colorado Common, Bee Hive Utah Common, Montana 12 Common [South Dakota grown], Common, Idaho Common, Dakota No. A. B. Lyman Montana Grimm, Utah Grimm, South Dakota Grimm, Blackfoot Brand [Idaho grown], Michigan Grimm, Minnesota Grimm, Certified Hardigan [Michigan grown], Canadian Variegated, Cossack [Montana grown], Ladak [Montana grown], Hardistan [Nebraska grown], Turkistan Imported, Registered Chilian [Arizona grown], and Registered Hairy Peruvian [Arizona grown].

Some of these varieties already are established in this part of the state. The seed was collected by Dr. Earl Sieveking of Bloomington, Ill., from different sources, some of them coming originally from several foreign countries.

In the spring signs will be put up in the field to indicate the names of the different alfalfa varieties for the convenience of visitors at the Yorkville farm. The crops are being tested for both seed and hay production. Those that make a good showing likely will be tried out further at the farm on a larger acreage basis.

Satisfied with 30 Canaries, Robbers Spurn Other Loot

Thirty canaries valued at $100 comprised the sole loot of two gunmen who, posing as policemen, gained entrance to the home of Michell Bilek at 1518 Cornell street, Bilek reported to the Racine avenue police yesterday. The men, he said, bound and gagged him, put all the canaries in one cage, and then departed without seeking other loot.

Auto Radiator Shoots Stone Between Eyes of Motorist

Allerton, Ill., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The sudden drop in temperature caused an accident that may cost Frank Holgenberg, salesman, his life. When the radiator on his car froze up and boiled dry he borrowed a bucket of water from a farm west of here and filled the radiator. Steam shot a small pebble from the radiator striking him between the eyes.

HAWKS INVADE NEW YORK FOR PAIR OF GAMES

Chicago at New York Americans.
Montreal Maroons at Boston.
Toronto at St. Louis.
New York Rangers at Montreal Canadiens.

Manager Clem Loughlin and fourteen Blackhawks left Chicago yesterday at noon for New York, where they are scheduled to play the Americans tonight and the Rangers Thursday night.

Three complete forward lines, two defense lines, and a goal tender comprise the Chicago forces. The Hawks will be hard pressed for a substitute if they run into any more injuries. Both Donnie McFadyen and Doc Romnes were left at home because of shoulder separations. Neither will be available for hocky duty for two weeks or more.

Hawks Are Jubilant.

The Hawks set out for their eastern invasion in a jubilant mood as the result of their 2 to 1 victory over the powerful Toronto Maple Leafs Sunday night. The well earned decision over the Leafs was trebly sweet. It was the Chicagoans' first win over Toronto in five games between the two thus far; it brought them back into first place in the American section, and it was decided before a crowd of 14,632, the largest of the season at the Stadium.

Furthermore, a valuable asset in the person of young Norm Locking was uncovered. Locking assisted Paul Thompson in making the first goal and played a great all around game.

Four Games Tonight.

Four National Hocky league games are scheduled for tonight. The most important aside from their own game so far as the Blackhawks are concerned is the Montreal Maroons vs. Bruins clash at Boston. Should the Mafoons defeat Boston while the Hawks are whipping the Americans, the Chicago team will be 1½ games ahead of the second place Bruins. However, Manager Loughlin is not looking for an easy victory over the New York team. The Hawks have met the Americans three times this season and the eastern aggregation has won twice.

Other games scheduled for tonight are Toronto at St. Louis and New York Rangers at Montreal Canadiens.

The starting lineup at Madison Square Garden:

CONACHER BOOSTS LEAD

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Toronto's great forwards, Charlie Conacher and Harvey [Busher] Jackson, continued to increase their lead over National Hocky league scorers last week, statistics issued today by President Frank Calder revealed.

Conacher, who passed Jackson recently, added six points to his total during the week and now has a total of 36, six points more than Jackson and eleven more than Ralph Cooney Weiland, Detroit center, who is third.

Syd Howe of the St. Louis Eagles has moved into a third place tie in the Canadian division with Dave [Sweeney] Schriner, New York Americans rookie. Each has 23 points. Howe scored 13 goals, the third best total in the entire league. Art Chapman, New York American center, is fourth with 22 points, the best record he has compiled.

Weiland and Larry Aurie are fighting it out for the American division lead with Weiland leading by a point. Herbie Lewis is tied with Ranger veteran Frankie Boucher at 22 points.

BIALIS, OLYMPIC SKATER, LOSES LEG IN CRASH

Michigan City, Ind. Jan. 21.—(AP)—Valentine Bialis, thrice a member of the United States Olympic Skating team and a contender for the 1936 teams, lost his right leg in an automobile-train collision near here today.

The 32 year old Utica, N. Y. athlete was driving home from Minneapolis, where he competed in the Olympic tryout a few days ago. Two companions, John Buehler, 20 of Saranac, N. Y., and Marvin Gonover, 20 of Fort Johnson, N. Y., escaped injury as Bialis' car struck by a train on the Nickel Plate road east of here.

Buehler said the car skidded into the crossing as Bialis applied the brakes. He and Bialis leaped from the machine, but Bialis slipped on the ice and his right leg was severed by a car wheel.

Weak from loss of blood, Bialis was brought to St. Anthony's hospital here, where physicians said his condition was critical.

BILL SHULER, captain elect of the Army football team, used to play for California Tech before enrolling at West Point. . . . California Tech's main opponent was Occidental college. . . . The rivalry must have left a lasting impression because when Shuler was knocked groggy in last year's Notre Dame game the Army trainer, anxious to know if he was fit to continue, asked him what team he was playing against. . . . "Occidental," was the answer, and he stayed in the game. . . . President Lou Comiskey of the White Sox says the terms he has offered Zeke Bonura exceed those of any first basemen in the American league except Jimmy Foxx and Lou Gehrig. . . . Bonura has not signed his 1935 contract. . . . Ivan Blackmer, center on the Iowa basketball team, will be lost to the Hawkeyes after this season, a Big Ten ruling depriving him of another year's competition because he played with a Cedar Rapids quintet while enrolled at Iowa. . . . Cecil Vance, Evanston High school football coach, has directed his team to fifty-two victories in the last fifty-six games. . . . Myril Hoag, Yankee outfielder, wears a size 4 shoe on his right foot and a 4½ on the left. . . .

Joe Louis, Chicago Golden Gloves graduate who now is burning up the professional heavyweight ranks, says Adolph Wiater of Green Bay has given him his hardest fight. . . . Wiater was a Golden Glover two years ago. . . . Joe Lillard, colored football player who was a member of the Chicago Cardinals a few years ago, is now a butler for Leroy Prinz, movie dance director. . . . Stanford has a player on its basketball team named Howell. . . . He will be a constant reminder of the Rose Bowl. . . . Ellsworth Vines, who appears to be 35 years old, is only 23, which qualifies him as the baby member of the professional tennis troupe. . . . He is six months younger than Les Stoefen. . . . George Lott is 28 and Bill Tilden is in the early forties. . . . George Barton Jr., son of the Minneapolis Tribune sports editor, is playing in Chicago with Earl Burtnett's orchestra. . . . Joe McCarthy, manager of the Yankees, can remember word for word nearly all the old time songs. . . .

Roy Joiner, the Cubs' lone left handed pitcher in 1934, allowed 8.24 earned runs per nine innings during the season, when he overheard some one remark that he had seen Rip Collins of the Cardinals, a normal left handed hitter, knock a home run right handed, said: "Hell, that was no distinction. He made it off me." . . . Johnny Lyman, Stanford's great shot putter, probably will go to Oxford this spring. . . . He already is a Phi Beta Kappa. . . . In his five years at Marquette Coach Chandler's basketball teams have won sixteen games and lost eight in competition with Western conference opponents. . . . The University of Chicago fieldhouse is turning out to be a useful place. . . . Football, basketball, track, baseball and tennis practice have been conducted there regularly. . . . Now there is golf practice for students and faculty, the Washington Park Archery club uses the building Thursday evenings for bow and arrow work and the Illinois Casting club uses it Sunday morning for bait and fly casting. . . .

Grass brought from Africa by scientists associated with the United States Golf association is being used at the La Gorce Golf club at Miami Beach with such success that many experts consider it the solution to the winter greens problem. . . . It will be homecoming for Coach Lynn Waldorf when he returns to Northwestern university as head football coach. . . . His parents live in Wilmette and Mrs. Waldorf's parents reside in La Grange. . . . The Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority is leading the co-eds intramural sports sweepstakes at Northwestern, which is proof that we certainly get around. . . . Pittsburgh has the windup place on Southern California's football schedule next fall. . . . The date is Dec. 16. . . . The Pacific Coast conference has followed the example of the Big Ten in refusing to permit college officials to work professional games. . . . The college soon will find out this is a shortsighted policy. . . . The standout workmen will be in the pro ranks before long. . . .

Ten Years Ago Today—Johnny Dundee and his manager, Jimmy Johnston, were suspended by the French Boxing federation for running out on a fight in Paris. . . . George Little, Michigan football coach, announced that he had accepted Wisconsin's offer to become director of athletics. . . . Harry Greb knocked out Kid Lewis in the first round at Pittsburgh. . . . Heinie Engel of Dubuque threw Lou Talaber of Chicago and claimed the middleweight wrestling title.

JACK (KID) BERG STOPS HUMERY; RAMEY LOSES

LONDON, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Jack [Kid] Berg, veteran English lightweight, scored a technical knockout over Gustave Humery of France, in the eighth round tonight.

After a stiff right to the chin had sent him reeling to the ropes in the first round, Berg rallied. He cut Humery's eyes in the seventh and had the Frenchman reeling when the referee stopped the fight. Humery, furious when the fight was stopped, swung at Berg in the latter's corner but later apologized and shook hands.

In a preliminary bout Jimmy Walsh, of England, defeated Wesley Ramey of Grand Rapids, Mich., when the American was disqualified because of a foul in the sixth round.

NOTRE DAME IS 41-28 VICTOR OVER DETROIT QUINTET

Detroit, Mich., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Notre Dame's basketball team had no difficulty defeating the University of Detroit tonight, 41 to 28. The Irish jumped into the lead in the first minute of play on a long shot by George Ireland and never were headed. They led, 21 to 8, at half time.

The second Notre Dame team played the second half and easily defended the lead built up by the regulars.

O'DOUL SOUGHT AS MANAGER IN COAST LEAGUE

San Francisco Dickers with Giants.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The desire of the San Francisco Seals to make Frank [Lefty] O'Doul manager for 1935 today reached the point where Bill Terry, Lefty's present boss, said that the New York Giants will release O'Doul if given a suitable, and sizable, sum of money.

O'Doul, who was born in San Francisco in 1897, went to bat only 171 times for the Giants last year, his lightest schedule of work in eleven years. Though it was believed he was through as a major league regular, he finished the season with a batting mark of .316.

Lefty twice has been National league batting champion. In 1929 with the Phillies he topped the league with .398 and he led the list with Brooklyn in 1932, compiling a mark of .368.

Terry said at his home in Memphis today that he had received a proposition from the San Francisco club and that he would not block Lefty's chance to become a manager provided the cash offer was adequate.

Two Coaches Sign.

Although Terry is expected to name numerous shifts in his battlefront this spring, there will be no change in the Giants' board of strategy when the Stoneham forces gather at Miami Beach, Fla., next month.

This was revealed today when Secretary Jim Tierney announced that Tom Clarke and Frank Snyder had sent in their signed contracts for 1935 and would again comprise Terry's coaching staf.

Clarke, the lone survivor of the late John McGraw's régime, came to the Giants at San Antonio in the spring of 1930.

O. K. with Terry.

When McGraw resigned in 1932 and Terry asked Clarke whether he cared to remain under the new order, Tom replied:

"Well, Bill, I always gave the old man the best I had. I can't give you any more than that, but if it's enough everything is O. K. with me."

Terry accepted the bargain at once and Clarke's handling of the pitchers has gone on smoothly ever since.

O'DOUL SHIES AT MINORS

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Frank [Lefty] O'Doul, veteran major league slugger did not take the announcement seriously tonight that he was to be sent to the San Francisco club by the New York Giants to become manager of the Coast league team.

"I never have given the possibilities of returning to the minor leagues a thought," O'Doul told friends. "I don't believe my major league playing career is over. I'd like to go back to the Giants and help Bill Terry win that pennant. New York will be the team to beat in the National league race this year."

President Wants Him.

Terry had been quoted earlier in the day at his home in Memphis as saying that "if the terms are right the Giants will sell O'Doul to the San Francisco team."

Charles Graham, president of the San Francisco club, said he had discussed briefly with O'Doul the possibility of the Giants' outfielder coming to the coast.

"We did not discuss terms because O'Doul is a ten year man in the major leagues and cannot be sold to a minor league club under the rules," Graham said.

"O'Doul would be a great attraction as manager of our team, but of course we wouldn't want him unless he would be satisfied with his job," he continued.

Two Red Sox to Get Cuts, but Not Grove

Boston, Mass., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Only two of the Boston Red Sox veterans were listed for salary cuts today when General Manager Eddie Collins began preparing the 1935 contracts for mailing late this week. Collins refused to name the unlucky pair, but he emphatically stated that Bob [Lefty] Grove, who is reputed to have drawn about $25,000 last season for winning eight games and losing eight, was not one of them.

CUBS SIGN VETERAN TRAINER

Dr. Andy Lotshaw, veteran trainer for the Chicago Cubs, signed his contract yesterday. Lotshaw (left) has been with the team twelve years. Charley Root (right) is sampling the doctor's magic.

Cubs Sign Lotshaw, Veteran Medicine Man, Trunk Caddy

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Andrew D. Lotshaw, the old doctor himself, has signed a contract with the Cubs to train the team during the 1935 season. It will be the thirteenth year that Andy has ministered to the aches and pains of Cub athletes.

Dr. Lotshaw's appointment this year comes under the head of news, because other able candidates had been waging campaigns to get the job. There have been candidates ever since Joe McCarthy left the team, but the scramble this year was a little more intense than usual.

Manager Charley Grimm, who has been emphasizing pepper, energy, and enthusiasm in the organization of his 1935 ensemble, would have been woefully inconsistent had he failed to sign the old doc. Lotshaw is the unlaziest man ever associated with a baseball team, many old time observers frequently have pointed out.

The Doctor Tells 'Em.

Whatever opposition may have developed against Andy among ball players usually has been traced to a sharp way he has of pointing out lazy streaks in ball players foolish enough to engage the trainer in repartee.

There are those among Andy's friends who contend that he worships at the shrine of Ananias. His romancing, especially about his attainments as a slugger in the American association, frequently proves the bait which draws players into verbal jousts with their trainer. They always quit, tongue-tied and red of face.

During the 1933 season, when Grimm first discovered he had snoozers on his team, he ordered Lotshaw to sit on the bench during games for the express purpose of keeping the lazier players awake. He was a success as a pep talker to some extent in 1933 and he was noisy enough in the first half of 1934.

The Umpires' Friend.

In the latter half of last season, however, Andy became hoarse and a bit disgusted at the same time. His windiest moments were not loud enough to keep some of the lads awake. He continued on the bench, however, in all games except those umpired by Bill Klem. Bill doesn't care for Andy's type of insults.

Andy's duties are not confined to doctoring, rubbing and chiding ball players. He also is chief baggage master of the team. He minds not only the team baggage but also all personal trunks and paraphernalia. Once a personal trunk has traveled with Andy, he can spot it the length of the Pennsy railroad.

Lotshaw for several years has drawn a salary almost twice as large as most of the trainers in the league. Despite this fact he usually starts an eastern trip with $10, leaving the residue with his business manager and loving wife, Laura. This is not to say he completes an eastern trip on $10. The doctor approaches his friends weaving and bobbing, following with an irresistible swing.

Just an Old Medicine Man.

Dr. Lotshaw once took a course. What in, is a matter that never has been cleared up, though he is known as an outstanding master in spinning adhesive tape and in treating certain types of sprains.

After he had taken his course, Dr. Lotshaw pursuaded the late William Veeck to buy an illuminated volume of Materia Medica. The book cost $30, but the words therein proved too heavy for Andy to handle. But he did not let the tome go to waste. The pages thereof proved just dandy for wrapping up ointments and such for players to tote home with them.

Lotshaw has been the trainer of the Chicago Bears football team since the time when they were the Staleys of Decatur. He got his job with the Cubs after he had worked a miraculous healing of a sore shoulder that long had bothered Grover Cleveland Alexander.

EQUIPOISE LAME AFTER GOING FIVE EIGHTHS IN 1:01 1-5

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Equipoise, ace entry of C. V. Whitney in the $100,000 Santa Anita handicap Feb. 23, pulled up lame after a workout today. Clockers at the track said the big horse went five-eighths in 1:01 1-5 and went on for another furlong, finishing in 1:15 2-5 on a fast track. After Equipoise cooled off he was found to have become lame. It will be a day or two before his handlers know whether the ailment is serious.

M'SPADEN WINS COAST GOLF WITH 284; HAGEN IS 2D

Walter Finishes in 67 to Total 285.

Sacramento, Cal., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Harold McSpaden, square jawed youngster from Kansas City, Kas., today won top money in the $2,500 Sacramento open golf tournament. The 26 year old professional, who first came into prominence during the winter tournaments a year ago, posted a total of 284 for the 72 hole event to beat Walter Hagen by a stroke.

Leading the field at the start of the last two rounds, McSpaden turned in a 73 for the morning round and 71 for the final eighteen. Par is 72. Hagen made a brilliant finish, shooting a 67 to tie the record for the Sacramento municipal course.

Winner Gets $600.

It was McSpaden's second victory of the current tournament season, his first coming in the recent Pasadena open. Today he earned $600, while Hagen drew down $400.

McSpaden's four rounds were 73—67—73—71. On his final round he started with a 34, two under par, and came home with a 37.

Sarazen Putts Poorly.

Gene Sarazen, ranked as one of the greatest money players in the game, had trouble with his putting and finished with a 291. Vic Ghezzi of Deal, N. J., and John Revolta of Milwaukee, who divided first money in the recent Los Angeles open, finished far down the list. Ghezzi had 294 and Revolta 295.

Jack Finger of Burlingame was the leading amateur, finishing with 298.

Chicago's representatives failed to cut in on any of the major prizes. Dick Metz leading the group with 292. Horton Smith scored 297; Ky Laffoon, 298, and Abe Espinosa, 300. Johnny Dawson, Chicago amateur, came home with 304.

MAX BAER WINS EASILY; SO DOES BROTHER BUDDY

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Max Baer, heavyweight champion, experienced no difficulty in demonstrating his superiority over Tony Cancela, Tampa, in a four round exhibition bout tonight.

Tony appeared to be trying, but the champ toyed with him most of the time, clowning part of the way, and at times trading blow for blow. Just before the bell in the final round Baer caught Tony off balance and sent him reeling to the ropes with a solid punch.

More than 6,000 saw the card which included numerous four rounders.

REPORT INCREASE SOUGHT IN 'TAKE' OF RACE TRACKS

Reports were current last night that a bill to increase Illinois race tracks' percentage of the money wagered through the pari-mutuel machines would be introduced in the state legislature within the next two weeks. The report lacked confirmation, officials of the various tracks saying they had no knowledge of such a measure.

At present the "take" in Illinois is 6½ per cent.

Clyde Smith, Coach at Emporia College, Resigns

Emporia, Kas., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Clyde W. Smith, head coach of the College of Emporia, has resigned, effective at the close of the school year, it was announced today by President Kohy Bailey Kelly. Smith came to the college in 1931 after a distinguished record in Missouri valley and professional football. He coached at Bridgeport, Ill., high school two years.

WOLVERINES IN FIRST VICTORY OF BIG 10 RACE

Ohio State Whips Maroons, 37-21.

Ann Arbor, Mich., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Michigan broke into the Big Ten victory column by beating Northwestern, 19 to 11, here tonight. The Wolverines were in front all the way after taking a 3 to 0 lead during the first ten minutes. Their lead was 9 to 4 at half time.

The Wolverines displayed remarkable improvement in their play while the Wildcats, evidently expecting little opposition, were at a loss from the outset. Both teams guarded closely in the first half, but the Wolverines were superior.

Wolverines Drive in Close.

Loose handling of the ball, wild passing and failure to follow up shots which marked Michigan's play in past games was not at all evident. They were getting in for repeated follow-up tries and Matt Patanelli and Earl Meyers were under the backboard with regularity to take off Wildcat attempts.

Patanelli, a sophomore and the only one of the five old regulars to retain his job, seemed to hold the Michigan team together during the first three quarters. He went out on personal fouls with eight minutes to play.

Wildcats Stage Mild Rally.

Russ Oliver, who replaced him, played a bang-up game, however. Michigan had a 15 to 8 lead at the time, but the Purple scored 3 points in the next few minutes. Meyers then took a pass under the basket and scored. Northwestern then made a desperate effort to come back, but Gee broke loose for an easy basket and the scoring was over.

Capt. Lyle Fisher of Northwestern was held scoreless.

OHIO, 37; CHICAGO, 21

Columbus, O., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Ohio State whipped Chicago here tonight, 37 to 21, for its second Big Ten basketball victory of the season. The Maroons failed to score a field goal in the first half, which ended with the Buckeyes leading 18 to 5.

Warren Whitlinger, Ohio forward, led the scoring with seven baskets and three free throws for 17 points.

Bill Haarlow, Chicago's star forward, was held without a basket until the last five minutes of the game when he dropped in three in quick succession, which, added to three free throws scored earlier, brought his total to nine points.

Hurray! A Basket!

After nine minutes of the second half had elapsed Chicago managed to shoot its first field goal. This was on a pivot shot by Peterson from under the basket.

Ohio scored eight points before Chicago got a free throw and then ran the count up 18 to 5 at the end of the half.

Coming back strong, the Buckeyes ran the score up to 30 to 16 before the Maroons put on their belated rally. During the second period the Maroons were weakened through the loss of Peterson on personal fouls.

BADGERS, 38; GOPHERS, 31

Madison, Wis., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Wisconsin moved into fourth place in the Big Ten basketball race tonight by defeating Minnesota, 38 to 31. The Badgers took a 9 point lead shortly after the second half opened, and held a comfortable margin to the end of the game.

Wisconsin had a 23 to 19 advantage at the half after 20 minutes of slambang basketball, during which the score was tied eight times. Nick Demark, the Badgers' midget forward, opened the scoring with a basket, but Minnesota came back to make good on its first two shots, by Norman and Baker.

Couldn't Be Closer.

During the first half the score was tied at 2-2, 4-4, 6-6, 10-10, 13-13, 15-15, 16-16, and 18-18. Wisconsin's half time margin marked the first time that more than three points separated the teams. Chub Poser, Wisconsin, and Roscoe and Baker, Minnesota, were forced from the game on personal fouls in the second half.

Pete Preboski led Wisconsin's attack with six baskets and two free throws for 14 points. Nick Demark followed with 10 points. Norman led the Gophers with four and two. The Badgers made 12 of 20 free throws and Minnesota sank 7 of 13.

Despite a temperature of 12 degrees below zero, a near-capacity crowd of 8,200 witnessed the game, the last for the Badgers until after semester examinations. Lineups:

TONELLI WINS DECISION OVER PUGGY WEINERT

Midway Show Postponed Because of Cold.

Laddie Tonelli, Marseilles, Ill., won an eight round decision over Puggy Weinert, Chicago, in the windup bout last night at Marigold Gardens. Tonelli, who sustained a cut over his left eye in the third round, landed the cleaner and harder blows. Bob Tinsley, west side lightweight, beat Virgil Herrig of Battle Creek, Mich., in four rounds. Herrig, a substitute for Frank Keevil, was knocked down in the first round. Other results:

Eddie Carroll stopped Jack Lazar [5].
John Mirabal beat Charles Mack [4].
Mili Aron beat Vincent Sackoff [4].

Johnny Coulon called off his show scheduled at the Midway arena last night because of the extremely cold weather. He hopes to be able to present the same program headed by a ten round bout between Everett [Young] Rightmire and Frank Wolfram at the Midway next Monday. Wolfram, who has returned to his headquarters at Barberton, O., is willing to fulfill the agreement at that time, but Rightmire is not sure he'll be able to appear. Rightmire is matched with Johnny Fitzpatrick at St. Paul Thursday. In event Rightmire is not available, Coulon plans to sign Winfred [Moon] Mullins, Vincennes, Ind., or Pete de Grasse, New York, as Wolfram's opponent.

Chairman Joe Triner of the Illinois boxing commission yesterday approved Promoter Billy Cepak's request for a postponement of a ten round bout between Frank Sagilio, Cicero 140 pound fighter, and Young Joe Firpo, Philadelphia, Pa., at Cicero stadium from Friday to Feb. 8. The commission was told Sagilio needed additional time to train.

Frank Battaglia, Chicago, and Hayden [Young] Stuhley, Kewanee, Ill., both leading middleweights, will open training today at Trafton's gymnasium. Battaglia, ill for the last week with a cold, is matched against Lou Brouillard at Pittsburgh, Pa., Feb. 20. Stuhley has not fought since he boxed ten rounds to a draw with Battaglia last Nov. 2. Battaglia has been more fortunate, however, for after that conflict he knocked out George Black, Karl Ogren, and Kid Leonard in succession.

Art Sykes, Elmira, N. Y., heavyweight, returned to Chicago after a scheduled match with Larry Udell at St. Paul Thursday was canceled. . . . A show will be held at Quincy, Ill., next Monday. . . . Wrestling cards will be offered at Libertyville, Ill., and Springfield, Ill., Thursday. . . . Jim Londos will wrestle Lou Plummer at Libertyville. Ray Steele is matched with Sol Slagel and Everett Marshall will oppose Abe Coleman on the Springfield card. . . . Ed [Strangler] Lewis and Dr. Karl Sarpolis will wrestle at Peoria Feb. 1.

Solly Dukelsky, middleweight, and Bob La Monte, welterweight, will referee two of the eight amateur contests tomorrow at Community Recreation center. . . . Bouts already arranged match Jesse Robinson with Kenny Lottman, Mike Karbens with Tony Anselmo, Jack Janis with James Scott, Sammy Girshbein with James McCabe and Al Van Derbosch with Stanley Retzke. . . . Dukelsky will start boxing drills today for his ten round scrap with Eddie [Babe] Risko, Syracuse, N. Y., at the Stadium Jan. 31.

Mickey Cohen, Denver, Colo., lightweight, and Pat Kissinger of Kansas City, Mo., or Neil [Pug] Grubbs, Berger, Tex., will meet at Kansas City a week from tonight under the auspices of Tom McHugh. McHugh has arranged a series of bouts to be held at Kansas City tomorrow as follows:

Billy Vaughn vs. Paul Hamilton [6].
Orville Drouillard vs. Paul Estrada [8].
Jack Chavres vs. Cap Harding [8].
Pat Kissinger vs. Willie Davies [10].
Bus Breese vs. Joey Alcanter [10].

The finals of the Catholic Youth organization novice boxing tournament are scheduled at C. Y. O. center Feb. 1. . . . The second boxing show at Topeka, Kas., in two years will be presented on Feb. 3. . . . George Engel, Plymouth, Ind., junior welterweight, has placed himself under the management of Sam Buxbaum.

Jackie Davis, 1929 featherweight Golden Gloves runnerup to Barney Ross, is training for a bout with Izzy Janazzo at New York Saturday. . . . Billy Stevens has signed to manage Frank [Kid] Covelli, Brooklyn junior lightweight. . . . Johnny Phagen expects to box George Black at Milwaukee, Wis., Feb. 1. . . . Millio Milliti, Omaha, Neb., welterweight, now competing as a middleweight, is making preparations to come to Chicago in quest of matches.

Izzy Kline, trainer for Barney Ross, says the latter will weigh between 126 and 138 for his junior welterweight championship defense against Frank Klick at Miami, Fla., Thursday.

CLOSED SEASON FOR WATERFOWL SPLITS EXPERTS

Game Conference Will Argue Question Today.

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Proponents and opponents of a closed waterfowl season for 1935 drew battle lines today as 600 delegates from 48 states and every province in Canada arrived for the 21st American game conference.

Since the drouth of 1929, when breeding and refuge centers were dried out and a decrease in waterfowl, particularly diving ducks, became apparent, sportsmen have postponed recommending a closed season. Now, however, they face the necessity of taking such drastic action.

Leopold Starts Fireworks.

At today's preliminary sessions, devoted mainly to scientific research discoveries and breeding problems, Aldo Leopold, professor of game management at the University of Wisconsin, conducting the research program, set off the controversy by declaring 1934 should have been a closed season.

"It is clear that many states and many clubs would not have helped support and enforce any such move, partly because of disruptions of state fiscal structure, Prof. Leopold said. "Expressed in terms of game policy, 1934 taught us that our administrative engine, being dependent on shooting revenues, stalls when the mix gets too thin. This, of course, is when we need it most."

Sentiment Is Divided.

Other opinions on the question, which will be taken up at an open forum tomorrow, were expressed informally with sentiment divided. Die-hards are willing to compromise to the extent of cutting down the length of the season and reducing the bag limit, which already is down to 12 a day from a high of 50 of a few years ago.

Tomorrow's waterfowl symposium will be opened by talks by Hoyes Lloyd, chairman of the conference and supervisor of wild life protection in Canada; J. N. [Ding] Darling, chief of the U. S. biological survey; John N. Ball and Burnie Maurek, project coördinators of the Mississippi flyway nesting area.

Throw Open Meeting.

Afterwards the meeting will be thrown open for general discussion with the possibility of the convention arriving at a decision which will be recommended to the resolutions committee and then be passed on to the U. S. biological survey and ultimately to President Roosevelt, who annually determines the scheduled season.

One of the highspots of the first day's meetings was the talk given by F. C. Lincoln, of the U. S. biological survey, who revealed that North American waterfowl have such a strong attachment for their ancestral flyways —migratory routes to the south—that if a matured Atlantic flyway duck is taken to the Pacific coast it will migrate to the south via the far western route but return to its breeding place in the east.

Repopulaion Takes Time.

"It indicates that if a bird should be exterminated in any one of the four major flyways now definitely recognized, it would at best be a long time before that region could be repopulated, even though the birds of the species affected should continue over other flyways to return to their great breeding grounds of the north," Lincoln said.

FORMER K. OF C. STARS TO PLAY THURSDAY NIGHT

Basketball stars of ten to fifteen years ago will compete Thursday night in the Old Timers' games which will be played at the West Side clubhouse, 4711 W. Madison street, as a feature of the season's first mid-week card of games in the Knights of Columbus Basketball league.

Former stars of the west side will play retired veterans of the north side. The north side squad will include Judge Duke Dunne, Elmer Hooker, Wilfrid Smith, Al Krause, Ed Fallon, Erak Parenti, Dick Kraft, Al DeCaluwe and Ed Hughes. The west siders are Tom Cunningham, Mike Cunningham, Hank Baude, Jim Russell, Joe McAllister, Jack Tirney, Grover Clark, Roy Bedore, Ed Whelan, Tom Fleming, and John Winterhalter.

Four league games also will be played, starting at 7 p. m. They are Barry vs. Hughes, St. Cyr vs. Hennepin, Cardinal vs. Tonti and Damen vs. Lafayette.

Yelps of Fox Hounds Add Thrill to Hunt

BY BOB BECKER.

When fox hunters in the middle west read recently about 13 red foxes being killed in one part of Iowa over a period of a few weeks they must have regretted they missed the opportunity of turning out their hounds to catch those animals, because to every real fox hunter the use of hounds is more than half the fun of the hunting. In fact, to kill a fox without a run by the hounds is nothing less than heresy to the dyed-in-the-wool fox hunter.

Of all the hunting dogs we use in this country, the fox hound seems to tell us most plainly of his pleasure in a hunt. The old red bone hounds that are working on the hot scent of a raccoon open up and fill the woods with their music. Bagles also know how to broadcast when they rout a cottontail. But a pack of fox hounds in full chase constitutes a canine choir that thrills the fox hunter like nothing else connected with any kind of a hunt.

Chorus Thrills Spectators.

At one fox hound field trial which we watched in Tennessee we saw more than 100 hounds start on a chase before daylight one morning. When those lean dogs, each with a number painted on his side, went over a hill through a grove of beech trees the chorus was like an electric shock to the spectators.

Later it was amazing to us how a hound owner could pick out his dog just by the deep sounding bark of the animal. "There's Judy," you would hear some delighted southerner exclaim when a high pitched, but joyful, bark would come up the valley. And to see the enjoyment of the fox hound owner when he heard his dog in the lead of the pack was enough to convince any doubter that for a real fox hunt a pack of hounds is the very essence of the sport.

An experienced fox hunter was pointing out to us the other day another attraction of a fox hunt conducted in the traditional manner. He stressed the point that few, if any other, sports involving the use of dogs are so colorful. The flaming scarlet coat that usually is seen at an organized hunt in England or in this country injects life into a sport that already is full of life and excitement.

Scarlet Coat Adds Tang.

In duck shooting we wear drab brown clothing, because protective coloration is needed. In fact, most of us don hunting clothes of inconspicuous color shades for most any kind of upland game or marsh shooting. But with fox hunting goes the flaming scarlet of the hunting coat that puts an unusual tang into that sport.

Although some breeds of hunting dogs go up and down in their popularity among sportsmen, the fox hound, coon hound [a distinctively American hound], and the beagle continue to interest large numbers of sportsmen every year.

In fact, one authority states that nearly three-fourths of hunting dogs in this country today are in those three divisions of hounds. In England they began to keep hounds solely for fox hunting as early as 1689, according to early historians of the canine race.

Here in America one of the oldest strains of English fox hounds dates back to 1822, when some dogs were brought in from England to be crossed with American hounds to develop a faster dog to keep up with the red fox.

O'DEA RETAINS BILLIARD LEAD DESPITE DEFEAT

George M. O'Dea retained his lead in the qualifying 3 cushion billiard tourney at the 131 South Wabash Avenue recreation despite his defeat yesterday by R. O. Henderson, 25-38.

O'Dea leads with three victories and one defeat. W. A. Hegan, R. O. Henderson, and Donald Lindley are tied for second place, each with two victories and one defeat.

Other scores yesterday were: B. L. Graffman, 35; J. A. Stewart, 26; P. C. Redfield, 35; Roy D. Zeff, 21.

EARLIER CHICAGO.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., Jan. 21. — Dear Wake: About the year 1893 the old ramshackle carette, horse-drawn vehicle, wandered its weary way down Rush street and the Lake Shore drive. There also was a west side route. Seating at the most about 20 persons, the poor carette often found itself called upon to accommodate twice that number.

I remember, as a boy, jumping on the back platform of a carette. I crowded in among half a dozen passengers and the conductor, all on the small low platform at the rear, the carette inside being crowded to capacity. The speed of these vehicles, when loaded heavily, was scarcely more than a good horse could walk.

Suddenly the entire back platform dropped to the street, a distance of about 1½ feet. No one was hurt, but we had paid our fares and all of us, including conductor, wished to continue on with the carette. As there was no room inside, we all went over to the sidewalk and kept pace with the conveyance.

At a street crossing, a man coming down the cross street turned with us and continued in our direction. Judge our surprise when the conductor turned to him and said "Fare, please!" But carette conductors were well trained in those days.

In 1874 the large one-story frame building at the southeast corner of Wabash and 16th was occupied by "Reed's Temple of Music." A. Reed & Sons carried a full line of musical instruments, including Chickering pianos, for which they were Chicago agents.

Across the street on the northeast corner was the corset shop of Mrs. Newman. At the northwest corner was E. H. Sargeant's drug store, sold a few years later to Schmidt & Fischer. Fred Schmidt of this firm was one of the sons of Dr. Ernst Schmidt, at that time a leading Chicago physician. Two other sons, Louis E. and Otto L., today are well known in their respective branches of the medical profession.

Still Hanging On.

I am a patriot, I have been told,
One that's true blue, but somewhat bold.
I did not waste time nor hoard my money,
I kept at my work, gathered some honey,
Deposited my gold in the savings banks
Which folded up tight without sending thanks.
To keep prices up, I supported my stock.
Now, by jinks, my stock is in hock.
My equity dwindled as I followed the flag
So I find myself still holding the bag.

Day passes day, I near the River of Doubt.
Which way shall I turn to find my way out?
Whatever I do I shall always fight.
If I lift up my face and take it on the chin
I'm certain in the long run to win.
But being a patriot is really no joke
But I shall continue to take it—

F. A. Speik.

ICE YACHT RACES ARE POSTPONED; SNOW AND COLD

Madison, Wis., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—For two successive days the Madison Four Lakes Ice Yacht club's defense of its Stuart International trophy against two challengers from the Pewaukee Yacht club was postponed because of too much snow on Lake Mendota and not enough wind. Today the races were called off because of an extra two inch coat of snow during the night, and extremely cold weather. When the first race was scheduled to start at 10 a. m. the thermometer registered 13 degrees below zero. It was decided at noon today to postpone the races until this weekend.

PILOTS CHECK CARS FOR NEXT INDOOR RACES

Pilots who will compete in the ninth series of indoor auto races next Sunday night at the 124th Field Artillery armory yesterday were checking their cars so that they will be in perfect condition for the twelve race program.

The three coast stars, Householder, and Harry and Marshall Lewis, who made their first Chicago appearances at the Armory last Sunday night, will be back again next week to oppose other winners, Willaman, Shaw, and Snyder.

Baby Ruths to Play Canadian Sextet Sunday

The Chicago Amateur Hocky league has scheduled several games at the Stadium during the next month, starting with the year's first international battle between the league leading Baby Ruths and Essex Frontiers of Canada Sunday afternoon.

On Sunday, Feb. 10, the Holzbaugh Ford V-8's, leaders of the Michigan-Ontario circuit, will play here and will be followed by another Canadian six, the Windsor Mic Macs, on Feb. 17. The final intercity game booked so far will be played Feb. 24, when the Fairmerest team of Detroit appears at the Stadium.

In the meantime the league schedule calls for another double-header Thursday night, with the feature between Oak Park and Postl's, which are tied for third place in the Stadium division. The opening game of the evening brings Jones and Baumrucker against Whiting Macs.

Tony Beda, winger of C. Y. O., is out in front in Stadium division, scoring with 9 points made on 4 goals and 5 assists. In the Metropolitan division Louis Zeman of the Hornets is out in front with 7 goals and 6 assists for 13 points.

.423 Batting Mark Tops All Minor Leagues

Durham, N. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Jimmy Sanders, manager and outfielder of the Martinsville, W. Va., club of the Bi-State league, was crowned national minor league batting champion for 1934 today and named to receive the Louisville Slugger trophy.

Final minor league averages, received at headquarters of the National association of professional baseball leagues, show Sanders turned in a mark of .423, which was 36 points better than that of the runner-up, youthful Jimmy Graves of Siloam Springs in the Arkansas State league.

Tops Big League Leaders.

The trophy, an actual size sterling silver bat, engraved with the name of the winner and his average, will be presented to Sanders during the coming season.

Sanders' mark, which topped the minors, also makes him batting champion of all organized baseball, for he was ahead of the Major league pace makers, Lou Gehrig for the New York Yankees with .363 and Paul Waner of the Pittsburgh Pirates with .362.

Phil Weintraub, now with the New York Giants, batted .401 with Nashville of the Southern association, but rules of the trophy award call for a player to compete in 75 per cent of his team's games, which Weintraub failed to do.

Webb Loses Out.

Sanders, Martinsville, Bi-State	.423
Graves, Siloam Springs, Arkansas State	.387
Demaree, Los Angeles, Pacific Coast	.383
Rizzo, Elmira, New York-Penn	.379
Bryan, Norfolk, Piedmont	.376
Arnovich, Superior, Northern	.374
Huffman, Monessen, Pennsylvania State	.373
Bell, Tyler, West Dixie	.373
Boone, Toronto, International	.372
Washington, Indianapolis, Amer. assn.	.367
Patterson, Rock Island, Western	.360
Mackie, Johnstown, Middle Atlantic	.365

Malkov and Kasaboski Meet Tomorrow Night

Promoter Fred Kohler has completed his card of wrestling bouts to appear in the Marigold Gardens tomorrow night. Zack Malkov and Alex Kasaboski, the latter from Canada, have been here training for their 90 minute windup. Frank Malcewicz, Utica, N. Y., light heavyweight, and Buck O'Neill of California are in the 30 minute semi-windup.

De Paul Seeks 8th Victory at De Kalb Tonight

De Paul university will invade Little Nineteen conference territory tonight when the Demons battle the Northern Illinois Teachers in a basketball game at De Kalb.

The De Paul squad has been idle for the last eleven days due to examinations. The team disposed of St. Louis in its last contest, and tonight will seek its eighth victory of the season. The Demons have been beaten only once in the last two seasons, losing to Purdue this year.

Fearing the offense of De Kalb, which last year captured the Little Nineteen conference championship, Coach Jim Kelly will start his regular combination tonight.

Ray Adams, the squad's leading basket shooter, and Ed Campion, clever floor worker, will be at forwards; Nich Yost, a sophomore, will play center, and the guards will be Capt. Frank Linskey and Bill Wendt.

De Paul Gets Opening N. U. Football Date

Northwestern university 1935 football schedule was completed yesterday by the signing of De Paul university for the opening game at Dyche stadium Sept. 28. Announcement of the signing was made by K. L. Wilson, Northwestern athletic director, after a meeting with James Kelly, De Paul athletic director and football coach.

The game will mark the second time the schools have met on the gridiron, the only previous encounter having been in 1921 when the Wildcats won, 3[illegible] to 0.

Coach Lynn Waldorf, the Wildcats' new football coach, will fall heir to one of the hardest schedules ever played by a Northwestern team. The Purple will be called upon to meet the five teams that finished in the upper division of the Big Ten race last fall, plus Notre Dame.

Sept. 28—De Paul at Evanston.
Oct. 5—Purdue at Evanston.
Oct. 19—Ohio at Columbus.
Oct. 26—Minnesota at Minneapolis.
Nov. 2—Illinois at Evanston.
Nov. 9—Notre Dame at South Bend.
Nov. 16—Wisconsin at Evanston.
Nov. 23.—Iowa at Evanston.

Vilas, Evanston Youth, Ties for Golf Lead

Michigan Wrestlers Win Over Chicago, 19 to 15

The University of Michigan wrestling team defeated Chicago in a Big Ten meet last night, 19 to 15, at Bartlett gymnasium. Michigan won five of the eight matches.

Ramblers and Artillery Trio Play Saturday

Second place in the senior division of the Metropolitan Polo league will be at stake when the 124th field artillery meets the Ramblers Saturday night at the Artillery armory, 52d street and Cottage Grove avenue. Kansas City and the Chicago Shamrock trios of the junior division will play in the first game. Kansas City now occupies last place, and a victory for the Shamrocks will put them in second place in the standing.

Expect Hard Battle.

The Ramblers-Artillery battle is expected to be a thriller, as each team has in its lineup some of the best players in the game. The Ramblers have a team strength of ten goals, but will be giving away three points to the 124th, a seven goal combination.

In all probability the Ramblers will take the field with Maj. Richard G. Hunter at No. 1; Herb Lorber, No. 2, and Lieut. Steve Hammond, back. Lorber, whose thumb was injured three weeks ago, has recovered and has been practicing regularly.

Regulars to Start.

For Kansas City it looks like Roy Nafziger, Lieut. H. D. [Cowboy] Reed, and Al Sisler, against Capt. Leo Callahan, Capt. Les Ireland, and Lieut. Jimmy McAnulty of the Shamrocks.

The polo program at the Chicago Riding club, 333 East Erie street, next Saturday will include the clash of the Black Horse Troop team, led by Lieut. Roy D. Keehn Jr., and the Riding Club Seniors.

The meeting between the Lincolnshire Country club and the Riding Club Bees will top the card. This game will mark the entry of the Bees into Black Horse Troop league competition.

Original Lineup Will Open Play.

Entering their fourth year of polo, Lincolnshire will be represented by its original lineup of Charlie Roovaart, No. 1; Edwin Hirsch, No. 2, and John Bairnsfather, back.

League standings:

	W	L
Riding Club Seniors	3	1
Black Horse Troop	3	1
122d Field Artillery	3	1
Shamrocks	1	1
Lincolnshire	0	2
124th F. A. Hornets	0	4

TILDEN TROUPE WILL PERFORM HERE SATURDAY

Tennis Stars to Play at 108th Armory.

Bill Tilden's touring professional tennis troupe will make its only 1935 appearance in Chicago Saturday night at the 108th Engineers' armory, 2401 Wentworth avenue. Tilden, George Lott, Ellsworth Vines, and Lester Stoefen, all of whom were prominent amateurs and battled each other in that field, constitute the group.

A series between Tilden and Lott, dating back ten years, will be resumed Saturday when the veteran and the former University of Chicago boy meet in the feature of the program. Big Bill was riding high in the days when Lott entered the national picture, but their meetings have furnished many of the highlights of tennis. The Chicagoan at present is seeking to cut down the lead held by Tilden.

Ellsworth Vines and Lester Stoefen, too, have staged thrilling matches, and in 1932 Vines halted Stoefen's drive in the national tourney, after the latter had whipped Satoh and Mangin. Vines holds the edge in their professional matches.

OLYMPIC SKATE TEAM TO APPEAR IN MEDINAH MEET

The United States Olympic speed skating team consisting of Edward Schroeder of Chicago, Delbert Lamb and Robert Pedersen of Milwaukee, and Allen Potts of New York will appear in a series of exhibitions at the Medinah Country club on Feb. 3.

Besides the exhibitions a winter sports carnival will be presented. Races will be held for the class A men and women skaters, intermediates, juniors, and juveniles from the Chicago district. Among contestants will be Wilbur Marks Menne, Al Kucera, Tony Neberz, Eddie Stundl, Elizabeth Du Bois, Eleanor Thiel, Erico Bock McConnel, and Princella Richie.

The meet is being conducted under the auspices of the Medinah Country club and the United States Olympic speed skating committee. The races will be sanctioned by the Illinois-Western Skating association and the proceeds from the carnival will be turned over to the Olympic speed skating team's fund.

DU PONT TO MAKE STUDY OF CANCER IN DYEING PLANTS

Seek to Learn Effects on Health of Workers.

Wilmington, Del., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Investigation of a new phase of cancer, its recent appearance in connection with industrial dyes, was announced today by the du Pont company.

The discovery of these dye cancers, made in both the United States and Europe since 1930, is one of the significant clews to better understanding of the entire cancer problem.

The investigation here is one of 14 medico-industrial subjects to be taken up immediately in a type of scientific laboratory new to the United States, which the du Pont company opens tomorrow.

The first purpose is to learn the effects on health of workers, and then of the public, of the new chemicals continually coming to industrial products. The second is to give medicine and science the results of any medicinal values found in these strange mixtures.

The laboratory will do this work both for the du Pont company and for outsiders. It is under the direction of W. F. von Oettingen, M. D., who is both a physician and chemist.

Cancers Are Internal.

The new dye cancers were recently described in the American Journal of Cancer. Like those which form the most serious menace to the lay population, they are internal. Likewise they appear only after years of exposure to whatever causes them.

Therefore, they offer a unique opportunity to pin down the causes of one typical slow cancer, and that knowledge may be useful to every one.

There are other significant similarities. The dye cancers have been traced to a coal tar product called aromatic amines.

It is known that the human body produces naturally substances slightly similar, though to date no human aromatic amines have been found.

Medical records report to date the finding of about 75 of these dye tumors in the United States and about 180 in Europe.

Test with Animals First.

At the du Pont's new Haskell laboratory the first year will be devoted to studying in animals the relation of age, diet, and metabolism to the cancer producing substances. The second year it is expected to try the effects of these amines on animals treated with thyroxine and other drugs that effect metabolism.

Another immediate investigation will be the breathing of lead dust. A new apparatus will breathe mechanically for eight hours, or any other period, to record all the lead dust particles which a workman might encounter. This continuous record will fill gaps left by other air sampling methods, which sometimes missed the time when the lead dust was drifting.

Ethylene glycol is another investigation starting tomorrow. It is widely used in industrial products. A few persons have died of drinking it as a substitute for alcoholic beverage.

Aliphatic compounds will be tested. Alcohol is the aliphatic compound best known to the public. But it is not planned to study beverage alcohol.

MRS. ELLEN POE DIES; WIDOW OF POET'S COUSIN

New York, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Mrs. Ellen Eyre Conway Poe, who through marriage was a relative of Edgar Allan Poe, is dead.

She was the widow of Charles Poe, Baltimore lawyer, who was a second cousin of the famous literary figure. Born in Richmond, Va., of an old Virginia family, she was a great-great-granddaughter of Col. William Byrd of Westover, Va., and of William Giles, twice governor of Virginia.

Mrs. Poe died unexpectedly of a heart attack. Funeral arrangements have not been announced.

Fifty Years a Burlington Employe; Dies in Engine

Jules Landry, 65 years old, of Aurora, an engine hostler for the Burlington railroad by which he had been employed 50 years, was found dead, apparently of natural causes, in the cab of an engine on which he had been working in the Aurora yards yesterday. He is survived by the widow, four sons, and three daughters.

U.C. Langley Dies in South; Native of Manchester

Mobile, Ala., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Victor C. Langley, 64, formerly engaged in the lumber business at Green Lake, Wis., died at North Biloxi, Miss., today. He was a native of Manchester, Wis. Mr. Langley was regarded as one of the leading lumber estimators in the country. He operated large lumber concerns in Mississippi.

Mrs. Minnie Moore, Zion Resident 31 Years, Dies

Mrs. Minnie Moore, 68 years old, for 31 years a resident of Zion, died yesterday in her home, 2706 Emmaus avenue. Her husband, Charles, two sisters, and a brother survive. Mr. Moore said his wife had been in frail health since November, when her favorite brother died suddenly.

J. H. Wirtz Dies Suddenly at His Home in Waukegan

While reading in his parlor yesterday John H. Wirtz, 76 years old, 117 Washington Park, Waukegan, died of a heart attack. He retired nine years ago from a farm at Ivanhoe in Lake county, where he was born. His wife, Bertha; a son, and a daughter survive.

Robert L. Beeckman Dies; Rhode Island Ex-Governor

TODAY'S FEATURES

ON W-G-N.

TWO new programs will make their bow on W-G-N this morning at 9 o'clock, Arthur Wright, tenor, and Harold Turner will inaugurate 15 minutes of melody which will be heard every Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday. At 9:45 Quin Ryan, veteran W-G-N announcer and commentator, will be heard with the Cadets quartet in another 15 minute show. Mr. Ryan will return to the rôle he had before entering radio, a writer of humorous and sentimental verse, which will be varied with the music of the quartet. The program will be heard Tuesdays, Thursdays, and Saturdays at the same time.

ARTHUR WRIGHT.

On the "Theater of the Air" program from the Chicago theater at 9:30 p. m., radio listeners will hear Jack Benny, Mary Livingstone, Frank Parker, Mitizi Green and Art Jarrett, and the music of Cherniavsky. Bob Elson will announce the program.

Other features:

7 a. m.—"The Morning Service Program" with time signals, temperature readings and music.

ERNEST WARNER, SON OF PIONEERS, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Ernest G. Warner, 75 years old, a lifetime resident of the Palos Park section, died late Sunday in the county hospital of a fractured skull suffered when he fell during a paralytic stroke at his home.

Mr. Warner, the son of Peter and Julia Warner, who settled on a farm in Palos in 1845, was born in a log cabin at 131st street and the Southwest highway. The present homestead is on the same site. He achieved a considerable prosperity and devoted his farm to a haven for birds and wild game.

Three years ago he conveyed a 10 acre tract at 127th street and the Southwest highway to the Southwest Suburban Community center foundation. Funeral services are to be held in the foundation's fellowship house at 2 p. m. tomorrow. Mr. Warner, who was never married, is survived by a brother, Philip.

GIRL, 17, MISSING 24 HOURS FOUND FROZEN TO DEATH

Canton, Ill., Jan. 21.—(AP)—The frozen body of Miss Reba Brown, 17, who had been missing for almost 24 hours, was found tonight by a searching party in a creek bed near Breeds.

The girl apparently had fallen down an embankment last night as she attempted to make her way from a stalled automobile to the home of a sister, Mrs. William Baer, at Breeds.

A party of friends who were driving the girl from Canton to the Baer home concluded she had reached the house safely and returned to Canton when they were able to start the car.

Searching parties were organized today, however, when the girl's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Brown of Canton, learned she was not with her sister.

HENRY DUMMERT, MEAT PRODUCTS BROKER, IS DEAD

Henry Dummert, 77 years old, for more than 40 years a packers' products broker in Chicago, died yesterday in his home, 1330 Albion avenue, after an illness of almost a year.

Born in Hamburg, Germany, Mr. Dummert came to Chicago in the early '90s, and shortly thereafter went into the tallow brokerage business. Among his customers were P. D. Armour, Gustave F. Swift, the Kirk Soap company, and many of Chicago's earliest packers. He was considered a leading tallow expert of the United States. Until a year ago his offices were at 128 North Wells street.

EARLY INVENTOR OF FOUNTAIN PEN, PAUL WIRT, DIES

Bloomsburg, Pa., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Paul E. Wirt, 35, attorney and inventor of a fountain pen, died early today at his home here. Wirt started experimenting to make a fountain pen as the result of the constant annoyance of spilt ink on his legal papers. He obtained a patent on his invention and in 1885 placed the pens on the market.

They created something of a sensation and won prizes in several international expositions. In 1922 he retired from the pen manufacturing business.

State Tax Return Filed on R. E. Smith Estate

News of the Radio Stations

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Mary Pickford has introduced the "stand in" to radio. The duties of her "stand in" are slightly different from those of the motion picture lots. In Hollywood the double poses for the star while camera, lights and the sound apparatus are made ready. Sometimes the "stand in" actually substitutes for the star in distance shots. Commercial radio shows require a lot of rehersal and Mary is willing to do her part—16 hours of it each week, her press agents say. But the sponsors feel that sometimes additional rehersal is necessary for her supporting players. Thus Mary employs her understudy to work during those added hours while the finishing touches are applied.

Dorothy Page, winner of a contest recently as radio's outstanding beauty, is to sing nightly beginning next Saturday with the new Gold Coasters' orchestra Ben Marshall has organized for the Drake hotel. Dorothy is heard on Jan Garber's Supper club and the Headin' South programs on NBC.

Jack Benny and his assistants will headline the Chicago Theater of the Air over W-G-N at 9:30 o'clock tonight. Next week Phil Harris and his orchestra and the beauteous Leah Ray, his soloist, will be the attraction at the Chicago and will be heard on the broadcast from the stage of the theater.

Five minutes to 8 o'clock Sunday night with crowds milling about studio B at NBC, a bright looking youngster of eight or so rushed up to the usher exclaiming, "Mother is in there; I must see her at once!" The usher explained that he must have a ticket. They're used to all kinds of ruses. "But," continued the boy, "she wants to see me."

The usher thought that one over and said: "You'll have to wait."

Then his mother glimpsed him through the open door.

"Darling, why are you late?" she asked.

"Couldn't crash the gate," he replied. The mother was Olga Albani, the singing star of the program, "Silken Strings." The boy was Guardo, her young son. He had forgotten his pass.

Joe Sanders, the old Blackhawk maestro, who has been writing songs for the movies in Hollywood, is motoring back to Chicago with plans to reestablish himself in the orchestra and radio business. . . . Paul Whiteman did a prince of Wales Thursday in Central park when his new shied at some youngsters on bobsleds. Despite a badly bruised right arm he directed his music show broadcast that night. . . . Fred Hufsmith, radio tenor, will join Sigmund Romberg's show beginning Saturday night. And Muriel Wilson, his fiancée, who plays Mary Lou on Show Boat, flew down to Miami between broadcasts to visit his family.

JOHN B. DAILY, 58, BURIED; KINSMAN OF ABOLITIONIST

Funeral services for John B. Daily, 58 years old, 1142 South Wenonah avenue, Oak Park, who died Friday after an illness of more than a year, were held yesterday from St. Bernadine's Catholic church. Burial was at Mount Carmel cemetery. Mr. Daily had been employed by the International Harvester company for 38 years, and for the last twenty years had been auditor in the tractor branch. He was the son of Dr. R. T. Daily, formerly of Nebraska City, Neb., who survives, and a grandson of Samuel Daily, Nebraska abolitionist, who was a friend of Abraham Lincoln. Other survivors are his wife, Gertrude, and four sons, John B. Jr., Richard, Robert and Paul, all of Chicago.

MUSEUM TO GET 10 MILLION FROM MUNSEY ESTATE

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The Metropolitan Museum of Art expects o receive a total of about 10 million dollars as residuary legatee of the state of the late Frank A. Munsey, who died nine years ago.

"Owing to the nature of the assets of the Munsey estate," George Blumenthal, president, states, "an estimate of its value was impossible at the time of Mr. Munsey's death and even now it cannot be stated with absolute accuracy.

"The Munsey bequest represents the greatest single benefaction received by the museum since its founding," Mr. Blumenthal continued. "It has enabled us to go through these last five years of stress without curtailing activities and without making reductions in the salaries of our staf and employés, except to a very slight extent and for a period limited to two years, now fortunately ended."

AGNES STEWART, LEADER IN CLUBS, DIES IN HOSPITAL

Mrs. Agnes Torrison Stewart, a leader in several woman's clubs, died yesterday in Billings hospital. Funeral services will be held at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow from her home, 5624 Dorchester avenue. Burial will be Thursday at Manitowoc, Wis., her birthplace.

Mrs. Stewart was a director of the Chicago Woman's club and a member of the Chicago College club and the Wellesley alumnae here. She also was well known among Norwegian societies.

Her husband, Charles C. Stewart, and a brother, Dr. George Torrison, survive. She was a sister of the late Judge Oscar M. Torrison, municipal and circuit judge for 25 years and one time board of education member. Her father, Osuld Torrison, was a Wisconsin pioneer.

MRS. H. C. SPEER WILL BE BURIED TODAY IN WEST

Funeral services will be held at Redlands, Cal., today for Mrs. H. C. Speer, wife of the founder of the municipal bond house of H. C. Speer & Sons Co., 38 South Dearborn street.

Mrs. Speer, who died Sunday at the age of 85, was a resident of Chicago from 1885 when her husband, a former Kansas state superintendent of schools, founded the bond house, until his retirement in 1924. On Christmas, the couple celebrated their 62d wedding anniversary.

Mrs. Speer is survived by her husband and by three children, Henry D. Speer, William W. Speer, present head of the bond house, and Mrs. R. N. Dow, with whom the elder Speers lived in California.

MRS. DEAN, ONCE SOCIETY LEADER, LEAVES $25,000

Mrs. Suzanne Ella Wood Dean, 72 years old, member of a prominent Chicago family, whose varied career led from "presentations" at European courts to Hollywood where she became an "extra" after losing most of her fortune, left an estate estimated at $25,000. This was revealed yesterday when her will directing the estate to be held in trust for a niece and nephew, Mary and Kay Wood, 42 East Elm street, was admitted to probate.

Mrs. Dean was the daughter of Dr. S. E. Wood, financier, and the widow of John E. Dean, millionaire broker. After her husband's death in 1908, Mrs. Dean traveled extensively and became known for her social activities. She died last Sept. 11.

The following wills were also admitted to probate:

JAY D. MILLER, died Jan. 8. Estate $40,000 to widow, four sons and two daughters. Northern Trust company, executor.

GARABED MALAMAZIAN, died Aug. 11. Estate $10,000 to Paul Tarpinian, executor.

DAWES WRONG IN STEEL VIEW, SAYS INSTITUTE

Denies Setting Mill Capacity Too High.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The American Iron and Steel institute today issued a statement in which it took issue with the assertion made recently by Gen. Charles G. Dawes that the institute's estimate of the capacity of the steel mills in the country was 15 per cent too high.

"Gen. Dawes is entirely wrong in his opinion that the institute's estimate of ingot making capacity includes plants now obsolete," the statement read. "The records of each steel plant have been examined by an institute committee composed of operating officials from large steel companies. This committee has carefully excluded from the total, as used by the institute, all capacity that is obsolete and no longer capable of producing steel ingots.

Allowance for Idle Time.

"In addition, to estimate a capacity total at which plants actually could operate if business were available, an arbitrary allowance of 12½ per cent is made for idle time due to repairs and other emergencies which experience shows make it impossible to operate all available furnaces at full capacity at all times. Accordingly, the institute's figure of total ingot capacity in the country of approximately 67,290,000 gross tons a year really is 12½ per cent lower than it would be if no such allowances were made.

"Upon the erroneous assumption that the institute capacity estimate is wrong, Gen. Dawes concludes that the weekly reports on rate of operations are too low. These weekly operating rates are reported each Monday in telegraphic reports from companies representing more than 98 per cent of the ingot capacity in the industry, and on those reports the percentage of operation to total capacity is figured.

Says He Misread Record.

"In support of his contention that the institute figures are not accurate, Gen. Dawes says that during times of great demand, when steel producers were behind in deliveries, the industry as a whole has not produced at a rate of more than 85 to 90 per cent of capacity. He has misread the record, because in 1929 there were seven months during which output of ingots ranged from 92 per cent to 100 per cent of capacity. In March, 1926, also, operations reached 100 per cent of capacity.

"Even at the present time two important companies are operating at 100 per cent of their rated capacity, although the average for the industry as a whole for the week beginning Jan. 21 is 49.5 per cent.

"Apparently Gen. Dawes has fallen into the error of confusing ingot capacity in the steel industry with finishing capacity.

"Unquestionably, improvements in finishing processes in recent years have made many old finishing mills and processes more or less obsolete. But this fact does not affect ingot capacity nor lessen the accuracy of the steel institute's weekly operating rate estimate as an index of steel mill activities."

REPORTS OUTPUT GAIN

The American Iron and Steel institute yesterday estimated steel production at 49.5 per cent of capacity, the highest since last June.

As compared with last week's average of 47.5 per cent, the current rate represents a gain of 2 points, or 4.2 per cent. A month ago the steel industry was operating at 35.2 per cent, and the rate a year ago was 32.5 per cent. The latest upturn is the fourteenth consecutive weekly gain.

In some areas production is outstripping the predictions of the most optimistic observers, made when the old year was drawing to its close. A few plants are running at 100 per cent of capacity and a number above 80 per cent.

From important steel centers comes word that tin plate mills are swamped with more orders than they can meet immediately and rail tonnage is showing improvement. Also the carriers are producing an increasing volume of business in connection with air conditioning of equipment.

The Carnegie Steel company, a subsidiary of the U. S. Steel corporation, will resume melting next Friday in an idle blast furnace at its Ohio works group plant.

Four hundred men have been placed on full time shifts at the Shenango furnace at Sharpsville, Pa., after having been idle since last June. Officials of the company said the men would be kept on indefinitly.

REPORT ACTIVE PROXY DEPOSIT FOR WILSON PLAN

Proxies for the Wilson & Co. plan of recapitalization yesterday were reported coming in "satisfactorily" by Thomas E. Wilson, chairman of the board. Mr. Wilson said that no tabulations have been made, as last Saturday was the date of record for voting the stock. With that day past, he said, proxies are expected in increasing volume.

The plan will be put up to stockholders Feb. 19 at the annual meeting. It calls for wiping out dividend arrears on both the preferred and A stock so that dividends on all stock may be resumed immediately. Preferred shareholders are to receive a bonus in new preferred, while presnt "A" and common holders will be given new common, the former receiving the large share through receipt of five common shares for each share of their present stock carrying a $5 dividend rate.

Markets Held in Leash by Gold Decision

BY HOWARD WOOD.

The Supreme court's move yesterday in recessing until Feb. 4 without announcing a decision in the famous "gold clause" cases is expected to mean that uncertainty over the outcome of these cases will continue to dominate market sentiment for at least two more weeks.

Financial experts expect no sensational movement of stock and commodity prices either up or down. In the absence of any indication concerning the attitude of the court investors and speculators find it almost impossible to hedge because they do not know in which direction they should hedge.

The two weeks' recess, however, gives the dealers in foreign exchange more leeway. Yesterday all of the remaining gold standard currencies, French, Swiss, Dutch and Belgian, were still quoted at prices sufficiently low to make the transfer of gold from those countries to the United States profitable.

* *

Last week the potential profits to be made by transferring gold to the United States from the European gold nations were much larger because of the wider spread between the currencies of those nations and the United States dollar. But most dealers in foreign exchange hesitated to engage gold for shipment here for fear that the Supreme court might force a revaluation of gold while their shipments were on the high seas, thereby not only destroying their potential profit but a lot more besides. Gold at present is worth $35 an ounce. Prior to the departure of the United States from the gold standard it was worth only $20.67 an ounce.

Gold shipments to the United States during the interval between now and Feb. 4, when the Supreme court reconvenes, may be small if the treasury uses its two billion dollar stabilization fund to manipulate foreign exchange. None of the four European gold currencies yesterday was far below the point where it becomes unprofitable to import gold into the United States.

* *

In view of the Supreme court's decision in the NRA "hot oil" case there are some who argue that congress acted unconstitutionally in permitting the President to use his discretion concerning the amount of devaluation of the dollar. If this were the only flaw the Supreme court should find, however, it would be of small consequence, because congress within twenty-four hours could pass a law setting the exact amount of the devaluation at the amount decreed by the President.

In the act of May 12, 1933, congress authorized the President to reduce the gold value of the dollar not more than 50 per cent. In an amendment passed Jan. 30, 1934, it ordered that in no event should the gold value of the dollar exceed 60 per cent of its former value. The President was given a range of 10 per cent in which to use his own discretion for three years.

* *

The question of the constitutionality of congress' action in abrogating the "gold clause" in private and public contracts, however, is much more vital. The constitution gives congress no specific power to abrogate contracts. It does grant congress the specific power "to coin money, regulate the value thereof, and of foreign coin, and fix the standard of weights and measures."

Congress has only those powers specifically granted or which are necessarily or fairly implied in the powers specifically granted. Since the power to abrogate contracts is not specifically granted and is not necessarily implied in the power to regulate commerce, the financial experts figure that the only possible basis for congress' power to abrogate contracts would lie in the argument that such power is necessarily or fairly implied in the power to regulate money.

In his argument before the court Attorney General Cummings dwelt little on this, however, and based his pleas largely on expediency or what would happen to the country if congressional abrogation of the gold clause were held unconstitutional.

* *

If the court should hold abrogation of the "gold clause" unconstitutional and the government should be faced with the problem of paying a premium of 69 cents on each dollar of outstanding gold clause bonds, there are some who argue that the government could pay the premium and then take it back by enacting a law laying a special tax on the bondholders. The income tax amendment to the constitution gives congress the power to "lay and collect taxes on income from whatever source derived."

Whether congress could apply such a tax to holders of the gold bonds and mortgages of private corporations and individuals, and pass the proceeds back to the debtors in order to keep them from going broke through increased debt charges is another large question. If not, a return to the old dollar containing 23.22 grains of gold might be the only way out for the administration in the event of an adverse ruling by the Supreme court.

MICKEY MOUSE IS TRUE HERO; RESCUES FIRM

Newark, N. J., Jan. 21—(AP)—Mickey Mouse was the hero of the tale of a toy firm's troubles which ended happily in federal court today.

Judge Guy L. Fake dismissed the receivershihp of the Lionel corporation, toy manufacturers, after the receivers told of rescue work by Mickey and Minnie.

Just before Christmas, Worcester Bouck, one of the receivers in equity, designed a mechanical toy with Mickey and Minnie pumping a hand car around a circular track. Children liked it and 253,000 of the toys were sold. This, with some new streamlined trains, helped the receivers to discharge obligations of $296,197 and turn back assets totaling $1,900,000.

Chicago Has 5 Banks in 100 Largest

Five Chicago banking institutions continued to rank among the country's 100 largest banks last year, according to the annual poll of the American Banker. The survey lists 300 of the nation's 15,290 commercial banks in the order of their deposits.

The figures reveal there are 15,834 licensed banks open and transacting business in the United States, with total deposits of approximately $40,000,000,000. Of this total there are 177 banks whose deposits Dec. 31, last, ranged from 25 millions to more than a billion dollars. Their total deposits were $24,526,110,000, an increase for the group of $4,466,527,000 for the year.

The compilation indicates the government has a financial interest in 30 of the first 100 banks. Among the first twenty, 8 lie in this category. They are the Chase National, National City and Manufacturers Trust of New York, Continental and First National of Chicago, Security First National of Los Angeles, National bank of Detroit, and Cleveland Trust company.

Ranking Chicago Banks.

The five local institutions in the order of their size and their ranking nationally are: 6, Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company; 7, First National bank; 21, Northern Trust company; 33, Harris Trust and Savings bank; and 54, City National Bank and Trust company.

Continental Illinois, which for several years has held down fifth place in the national list, was ousted by the Bankers Trust company of New York, despite the fact that Continental's deposits rose from $629,944,034 Dec. 31, 1933, to $824,483,600 at the close last year. Bankers Trust deposits soared from $611,725,754 to $882,988,031.

First National, Northern Trust, and Harris Trust held the same respective positions in the preceding year, but City National fell from 48th to 54th position, the place it occupied in 1932.

American National Bank and Trust company held down 176th place, Drovers National was rated 215th in size, Live Stock National 237th and the Lake View Trust and Savings bank 289th.

Record Deposit Gain.

Last year, American Banker says, witnessed the greatest deposit gain ever seen in a single year—$4,500,000,000 being added to the totals of the first 100 banks which carried deposits to the near record figure of $21,892,329,827. This is higher than the 1929 boom total and within 1 per cent of the historical peak of $22,158,000,000 at the end of 1930.

"This vast increase," the journal says, "is indicative of the tremendous deposit money inflation which is taking place due to the twin forces of dollar devaluation and federal budgetary deficits. The usual inflationary effects of a huge increase in money supplies was negatived in 1934 by the disposition to pile up large idle cash balances and concentrate them in banks, rather than risk them in business or investment."

Twenty-six of the banks included in the tabulation are in New York, which boasts three institutions whose deposits exceed the billion dollar mark. These are the Chase National, National City, and Guaranty Trust company. The Bank of America National Trust and Savings association of San Francisco is within 22 millions of the billion mark.

REPORT GERMANY WILL SOON OFFER HUGE BOND ISSUE

BERLIN, Jan. 21.—(AP)—Burgstrasse, Berlin's Wall street, was agog today with rumors that the government would soon offer an internal loan of vast proportions to fund a large part of its floating debt, which at the close of 1934 amounted to 2,371,400,000 marks.

Reliable banking experts said banks have been groomed for such a loan for weeks. Announcement of the terms of the loan and its size is expected by the end of this week or early next week.

One banker estimated that 1,500,000,000 marks [about $600,000,000] of bonds would be issued. Another banker, whose predictions usually come true, expressed the opinion that "it will be only half that amount." The interest rate, he said, would probably be 4 to 4½ per cent.

Newsprint Makers Unable to Agree on Price Advance

MONTREAL, Que., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Canadian newsprint producers are notifying their American customers that the industry has been unable to agree on projected price advances for 1935 and that they are abandoning their efforts to raise prices.

FORD MOTOR BOOSTING OUTPUT TO 130,000 CARS FOR FEBRUARY

Dearborn, Mich., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Strong upward trend of the automotive industry was indicated today when officials of the Ford Motor company set the production schedule for February at 130,000 units. This is 20,000 more units than were scheduled for February when first estimates of future production were set ten days ago.

The figure covers only production within the United States. Production in Canada and foreign countries is not included because estimates for those fields will not be ready for another week.

The figure for February will mark the largest monthly production of Ford V-8s to date, as well as the largest production of any type of Ford car since June, 1930. In that month Ford built 150,000 model A's. The V-type motor was not introduced until March, 1932.

Boosting of the February production figure is due to the steady inflow of orders from all parts of the United States—a flow that so far has kept well in advance of the demand for model A's when that type of car was brought out late in 1927.

Sales indicate that the motor industry will make a satisfactory showing in January. Sales are now estimated at 275,000 units, which is a considerable increase over predictions made last month.

THE FAIR STORE VOTES DIVIDENDS ON PREFERRED

The board of directors of the Fair Department store yesterday authorized the payment of three quarterly dividends of $1.75 each on the preferred stock to apply on arrears, D. F. Kelly, president, announced. The payment, which totals $5.25, will be made Feb. 15 to preferred stock of record Feb. 5. The last payment on preferred stock in arrears was made on May 15, 1934, when $3.50 was disbursed.

The payment of the $5.25 will clear up the arrears through 1933, leaving only $7 due on the preferred stock.

Mr. Kelly explained last night that a very much better showing would have been made had it not been for the state occupational tax and for the increased costs resulting from the operation of the NRA. In the past retail merchants absorbed the occupation taxes, but recently the procedure was changed, the tax being added to the bill which the customer pays. Mr. Kelly said business is holding up very well, although "nothing to brag about."

Harbison Walker Refractories company declared a dividend of 25 cents a share on the common stock, compared with a payment of 12½ cents in the preceding quarter. The dividend is payable March 1 to stock of record Feb. 11. The regular quarterly disbursement of $1.50 a share on the preferred stock was also declared, payable April 20 to stock of record April 8.

Directors of the John R. Thompson company yesterday declared the regular quarterly dividend of 12½ cents a share on the common stock, payable Feb. 15 to stock of record Feb. 1.

Allied International Investing corporation declared a dividend of 35 cents a share on the $3 convertible preferred stock on account of accumulations, payable Feb. 1 to stock of record Jan. 25. The last previous payment was 75 cents quarterly on Nov. 1, 1930.

Old Landmark on Gold Coast Being Razed

BY AL CHASE.

Chicago's campaign to clear the city of unlivable dwellings, heretofore confined to insanitary, decrepit fire hazards in slum areas, has reached the gold coast. Wreckers are busy tearing down one of the outstanding residential works of the late John W. Root, famous Chicago architect, at the northwest corner of Astor and Goethe streets. This is a three story limestone house owned by L. Montefiore Stein, of Stein, Brennan & Co., La Salle street brokers, who bought it in 1927 shortly after a fire had destroyed the interior.

L. MONTEFIORE STEIN.

He purchased it for a reported $125,000 to protect his own residence adjoining it on the north, at 1304 Astor street. At that time he contemplated wrecking it and using the site for a tennis court, but later decided against that program.

Housing Board to Clear Site.

Recently Mr. Stein received notice from the city to start work within five days getting the property into shape or it would be torn down. He at once conferred with the state housing board, which already had investigated the situation at the instance of nearby property owners. The board agreed to have the house razed without cost to Mr. Stein and it is expected the site will be cleared within two weeks.

The house was one of the first in Chicago to figure in a real estate building promotion. Mr. Root, in association with several other wealthy Chicagoans in the late '80s, erected six houses on the west side of Astor street, extending north from Goethe street to an alley halfway between Banks and Goethe.

Bought by Spalding Family.

William Gowdy purchased the corner house—now being wrecked—and a few years later, about 1900, sold it to Charles F. Spalding, wealthy Chicago lumberman. Mr. and Mrs. Spalding and their three children, Vaughan C. Spalding, now of Lake Forest, Mrs. John Coleman, also of Lake Forest, and Jesse Spalding, lived there until about 1926.

The house contains twenty rooms and five baths. The top floor, at one time a ballroom, was used by the Spalding family as an apartment for the boys. The residence occupies a lot fronting thirty-five feet on Astor street and 110 feet on Goethe street. Since the fire it has been vacant. Nearby residents of tall buildings complained of their outlook on the roofless structure. Complaints also were made that tramps slept there at night and it was dangerous for children who played there during the day.

Mr. Stein, who now lives at the Ambassador East, said he has no intention of building when the site is cleared.

Federal Income Exceeds 2 Billions Since June 30

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—Government income for the current fiscal year has passed the $2,000,000,000 mark. Today's treasury statement put receipts since July 1, 1934, at exactly $2,000,535,488. This total is almost $400,000,000 in excess of the corresponding income a year ago.

RFC IS STERNLY REBUKED FOR LOAN 'FAILURE'

Morgenthau Plan Is Hit by House Group.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—A stern rebuke of its loans to industries operations was handed the Reconstruction Finance corporation today by members of the house banking committee. An outright "failure" was one description of these activities given during a hearing on a measure to extend the life of the RFC two years, until Feb. 1, 1937.

Equally strong criticism was directed at a section of the bill which some committeemen claimed would allow the budget bureau and treasury to rule the agency.

With Jesse Jones, chairman of the corporation, in the witness chair, Representative Fish [Rep., N. Y.] asserted:

"Both the RFC and the federal reserve banks have absolutely failed in carrying out our intent to make loans to private industry."

"Not Too Strict."

Jones said he did not think the corporation had been too strict in making loans and recalled that "adequate security" was required by law. "We can give the money away if you want us to," he said at one point. "Industrial loans have been our most difficult job because most people who come to us apparently can't provide the security required by law."

Other committeemen quickly took up the "failure" refrain sounded by Fish, with Democratic members joining in.

A movement toward establishing a central bank to control loan policies of all private banks through the treasury was construed by Representative Wolcott [Rep., Mich.] as the meaning of one section of the bill.

The section would allow the RFC to make commitments for spending its money only if they fell within estimates approved by the budget director. The treasury secretary would be authorized to set up methods of enforcing this section.

Morgenthau's Suggestion.

Jones said the only comment he had to make on this portion of the bill was that it was written in at the suggestion of Secretary Morgenthau. One committeeman asserted the section would allow the budget bureau and treasury to hamstring the RFC and control its authorizations and another declared it would give them veto power over congress.

"That's the effect as I understand it," Jones said.

Jones produced figures to show that of 300 million dollars available for loans to industry less than 7 million dollars had been paid out and less than 35 million dollars authorized for advances.

O'CONNELL ASKS RFC LOANS ON ILLINOIS BANKS

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—William L. O'Connell of Chicago, general receiver for all closed banks of Illinois, expressed confidence today that plans would be worked out with the Reconstruction Finance corporation whereby that organization would advance "as much money as possible" to expedite repayments to depositors of defunct institutions.

He said he expected to close a loan in a short time for the Bain bank system. This chain of ten, he said, closed in 1931. Only a comparatively small dividend has been paid to date.

"The delay here, as in many other banks, has been caused," he said, "by the necessity for deciding which are preferred deposits."

O'Connell said he was hopeful that the corporation would give him quick action on every bank under his jurisdiction.

In his annual report Jesse Jones, chairman of the RFC, reported the corporation from Feb. 2, 1932, to Dec. 31, 1934, authorized $50,373,985 in loans to receivers, conservators and mortgage-loan companies to aid closed Illinois banks. Of this $31,788,167 was disbursed and $13,859,022 has been repaid.

Loans on and subscriptions for preferred stock, and purchase of capital notes and debentures of banks and trust companies in Illinois from March 9, 1933, through Dec. 31, 1934, totaled $92,882,000, of which $89,417,864 was disbursed and $120,000 repaid.

Argentine Wheat Export Surplus 4,403,805 Tons

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 21.—It was announced officially today that the Argentine exportable surplus of wheat is 4,403,805 tons; of linseed, 1,525,956 tons, and of maize, 382,021 tons.

Federal Utility Rule Disaster, Magill Asserts

A plea for the private operation of the nation's utilities as opposed to government ownership was made last night by Dr. Hugh S. Magill, president of the American Federation of Utility Investors, in a talk before the school of commerce of Northwestern university. Dr. Magill said that government competition with private business will ultimately prove a disaster, particularly when consideration is given to "its demoralizing influence upon the spirit and purpose of a free citizenry."

"The utility industry has been developed during the last fifty years by the same forces that made America great—individual initiative, individual responsibility, and individual pioneering and investigation," Dr. Magill said.

Waste in Political Control.

"Government ownership and operation, or the application of Marxian principles of state socialism, mean political management and control, which, in the present state of our social development, mean extravagance, waste and in many instances corruption and graft, all of which must be paid for by the taxpayers," he continued.

Dr. Magill quoted from statements which he said the late Thomas Edison made regarding the development of hydro-electric power by the government.

"'The development of hydro-electric power is very important and usually requires an auxiliary coal steam plant,'" Dr. Magill quoted Edison as having said. "'Some of the best water power is too far away from our manufacturing centers to make its utilization wholly practical. Water power is a political issue, and not a business one. It can never at best mean very much more to us except as something to talk about.

"'There is far more danger in public monopoly than there is in private monopoly for when the government goes into business it can always shift its losses to the taxpayer. If it goes into the power business it can pretend to sell cheap power and then cover up its losses. The government mixes a little business with a lot of politics and no one ever gets a chance to find out what is actually going on.'"

TVA Yardstick Criticized.

Criticizing the TVA "yardstick," Dr. Magill likened it to a slide rule which could be varied to suit any desire. He cited some of the advantages enjoyed by the TVA, such as franking of mail, reduced freight rates and lighter taxes.

He said he had recently received from the TVA a package with a franking stamp on it, which would have cost an individual 38 cents to mail. It contained a reprint of a sixteen page article from the Journal of the National Educational association, which goes to 200,000 school teachers, describing the benefits of the TVA. With it came a suggestion that the article might well be used as a model for instruction in the class room. Thus, said Dr. Magill, the government is using the same methods of propaganda in the schools for which they have criticized some utility organizations in the past.

BLOCK DENIES NATIONAL STEEL, INLAND MERGER

L. E. Block, chairman of the board of the Inland Steel company, last night denied reports from New York that his company has been carrying on negotiations with the National Steel corporation looking toward the merger of the two companies. "There is no foundation for the report," Mr. Block asserted.

New York dispatches said that if the merger was effected it would have resulted in the creation of the fourth largest steel organization in the United States.

WEIGH TAXING UTILITY HOLDING UNITS TO DEATH

President, Aids Map Control Program.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—President Roosevelt today discussed with advisers the feasibility of taxing out of existence certain utility holding companies.

FRANK R. McNINCH

"The ultimate elimination of public utility holding companies" is the end being sought by the chief executive as he swings into serious work on his tary, decrepit fire gram, according to one of the White House confrères. The federal government's taxing power may be called into play in this connection, it was learned for the first time.

No final decision for administration action was reached at today's conference, however, and no actual draft of proposed legislation was discussed, the conferees declared.

List of Conferees.

Those summoned to the White House were Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau Jr., Frank R. McNinch, chairman of the power commission; Donald Richberg, chairman of the emergency council; Edwin L. Davis, chairman of the trade commission; Basil Manly, member of the trade commission; Oswald Ryan, general counsel of the power commission; Herman Oliphant, general counsel of the treasury, and Robert H. Jackson, general counsel of the revenue bureau.

Secretary Morgenthau revealed that the taxing power would be used as part of the control scheme, and Chairman McNinch explained that the tax probably would be on the earnings of holding companies. It is believed that the tax may be so graduated as to eliminate holding companies more than once removed from operating companies or to gradually squeeze out all holding companies over a period of years.

Plan Tax on Earnings.

"It will be a revenue tax on the earnings of the companies," was all that Chairman McNinch would say after seeing the President. "There is now an exemption of dividends that a holding company gets from its subsidiaries. If you remove any part of that exemption it would be equivalent to a tax on the holding company."

Electric and gas companies and "all the ultilities that sell service of a monopolistic character" are the subjects of the present discussions, according to Chairman McNinch. No mention was made of telephone companies, he said, although there were indications that they would be excluded.

Attorney General Cummings added that elimination of or control of holding companies outside of the utility field is not under consideration.

Those attending the conference said further conferences will be held, probably within the next four or five days.

STOCKS EDGE UP, BUT GOLD CASE DULLS TRADING

Senior Issues Again Meet with Good Demand.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Jan. 21.—After marking time for two hours, following the adjournment of the Supreme court until Feb. 4 without rendering a decision on the gold clause case, the stock market resumed its advance in light trading the last hour today. Volume amounted to 687,760 shares.

The tendency of traders to await a Supreme court decision before moving far in either direction was even more pronounced throughout the day than it was last week. A little flurry of excitement was stirred up in the early hours over whether the court might give its decision today but in most quarters that, as well as the nature of the decision, were regarded as beyond the scope of private guessing. Consequently there was only mild disappointment at the postponement.

Expect Trade to Improve.

It was pointed out that while last week's quick recovery from the nervous condition of the first day or two caused by the arguments on gold reflected optimism over the nature of the expected decision, it also probably indicated the market's ability to outride an unfavorable decision. It was also said business is moving ahead slowly and promises to be better, on the whole, than it was last year, barring fresh disturbances.

Preferred shares of many corporations continued in good demand, and this was especially true in the case of steel corporations. The most spectacular issue in the latter group was Otis Steel prior preferred, which at one time showed an advance of 11¼ points. Other preferred issues to join the list were Bethlehem and United States Steel, interest in these shares being increased by speculation as to the probable action of directors on dividend meetings to be held this week. The preferred issues of Youngstown, Jones & Laughlin, Ludlum, Midland, and Sloss Sheffield showed substantial gains.

Steel Common Stocks Mixed.

The common stocks of the steel companies were somewhat mixed. United States Steel just about held its own, while Bethlehem declined slightly.

Mining issues were strong throughout the day, activity in this group cropping out toward the close of the initial hour. They met with some offerings later in the session, and U. S. Smelting, after spurting more than three points, had to be content with a 1 point gain. American Smelting, Cerro de Pasco, and others in the group advanced fractionally.

The carrier section of the list started off in impressive fashion but turned dull quickly. On the other hand rail equipments staged a flurry on the upside under the leadership of Pullman, which gained 1½ points.

Small gains were the rule in liquor and aviation shares, while the utilities were neglected.

Tobacco shares were strong, as were the oils. Chemicals were fractionally higher.

'AUBURN'S LOSS FOR LAST YEAR SET AT $3,642,499

The Auburn Automobile company yesterday reported a net loss of $3,642,499 in the fiscal year ended Nov. 30. This was after all charges, including $477,647 depreciation and $913,156 in special write downs of tools, patterns, dies, jigs, and fixtures. In the preceding year net loss amounted to $2,307,973.

Current assets as of Nov. 30 were carried at $5,681,365 and current liabilities at $649,079, against $3,548,601 and $618,444, respectively, a year earlier.

Roy H. Faulkner, president, said during the last quarter the company's dealer organization was strengthened and that the new line of cars had proved popular. He revealed Auburn's subsidiary, Lycoming Manufacturing company, sold its airplane and propeller business and henceforth Auburn's activities will be devoted exclusively to the automobile industry.

"Since my return to Auburn last August, after nearly three years absence I have held sales meetings in practically every important automobile buying center from coast to coast," R. H. Faulkner, president, stated. "I feel that a definite change to the trend of buying better things has come over the American public."

Sales of new cars in the last quarter accounted for more than 31 per cent of the year's sales in that quarter, he said, while usually not more than 10 per cent of a year's sales are made in the final quarter.

MEMBER BANKS LEND MORE AS DEPOSITS RISE

Securities, U. S. Bonds Also Show Increase.

Employment of federal reserve member bank funds kept pace fully with a sharp increase in deposits last week, according to the report issued yesterday, covering operations in 91 leading cities of the country.

Individual deposits rose 109 million dollars, gaining 45 millions in New York, 11 millions here and 53 millions elsewhere, while total loans and investments expanded 106 millions, New York's rise of 155 millions being partially offset by losses of a million in Chicago and 48 millions in the other 89 cities.

Gross Deposits Spurt.

Gross deposits gained 246 millions through upturns of 130 millions in New York, 21 millions here and 95 millions in the interior. The government drew down 4 millions from its war loan account with interior banks, while interbank deposits spurted 85 millions in New York, 10 millions in Chicago and 46 millions elsewhere, a net expansion of 141 millions.

Security loans and holdings of government bonds accounted for most of the upturn in use of funds. Brokers' loans gained 45 millions, other security loans were unchanged, holdings of government bonds rose 53 millions, securities other than governments expanded 24 millions, Commercial acceptances contracted 4 millions, real estate loans gained a million and business loans fell 13 millions.

The 89 cities, New York and Chicago excluded, reported a drop of 43 millions in total loans and investments.

DOUBT U. S. ABLE TO CONTROL WAR PROFIT BY TAXES

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—(AP)—A vain effort by the government to tax the New York Shipbuilding company on more than $10,000,000 of wartime profits, which the company claimed it did not receive, was cited today by senate munitions investigators as evidence of the difficulty of controling war profits through taxation.

Although the big shipbuilding company reported an income of $8,444,000 for the years from 1917 to 1921, inclusive, the government claimed it made more than $24,000,000. Under a settlement reached in 1928, taxes were paid on about $13,000,000.

Other developments, as the munitions committee went back to work after a month's recess, were:

Evidence that the company obtained for $500,000 in 1923 a wartime shipyard build by the government on its property at a cost of $14,000,000 which two years later was appraised at more than $2,000,000.

Testimony that the company sought to collect from the government under wartime ship contracts $17,000 which was spent for cigars, wines, and liquors.

Charges that the company attempted to "pad" its cost by including $300,000 paid in income taxes, and that the salary of its head was doubled.

Introduction of a letter by G. L. Bardo, vice president of the company, suggesting that "every honorable means" be used privately to stop a congressional investigation of the cost of the airplane carriers Lexington and Saratoga.

HIBBARD SPENCER BARTLETT EARNS $3.11 PER SHARE

Hibbard, Spencer, Bartlett & Co. yesterday reported net earnings of $519,535 for the year ended Dec. 31, 1934, after all charges, equivalent to $3.11 a share, compared with net of $279,290, or $1.67 a share, in the preceding year.

Sales during 1934 were substantially larger than in 1933 and an aggressive sales campaign is planned for 1935, C. J. Whipple, president, stated. Gross profit for the year was $2,441,602, against $2,051,887.

Current assets as of Dec. 31 amounted to $5,349,332, against current liabilities of $1,186,655, compared with $5,571,181 and $1,773,581, respectively, at the end of the preceding year. Notes payable were reduced from $1,100,000 to $500,000 during 1934, while surplus increased from $3,256,133 to $3,549,345. All directors and officers were reelected for 1935, it was stated.

Senate Votes Approval of Moffett Appointment

Washington, D. C., Jan. 21.—[Special.]—Although James A. Moffett, federal housing administrator, has again expressed to administration leaders a desire to resign as soon as organization work on the privately financed housing campaign is finished, probably in midspring. The senate voted today to notify President Roosevelt of its approval of Moffett's ad interim appointment as administrator, an action which will almost certainly block Senator Long's announced intention to obtain reconsideration of the nomination.

New York, Jan. 21.—[Special.]—The listed bond market closed irregularly higher today in fairly active trading in which most of the activity centered in domestic corporation bonds. The United States government group closed up 5-32ds point to down the same fraction, with the heaviest dealings in the called Fourth Liberty 4¼s, which closed unchanged on the day.

Public utility issues generally extended their recoveries. The high grade rail issues were firm, while industrial bonds were a trifle lower on the average. However, in the latter group steel issues were strong, reflecting the improvement in the industry. Otis Steel 6s jumped 6 points and Pressed Steel Car 5s mounted 9⅝ points.

Some Reach New Highs.

Fractional advances in a number of seasoned investments carried prices to a point equaling, if not exceeding, the highs of the last year, including obligations of Santa Fe, Armour & Co., Chesapeake and Ohio, Burlington, Detroit Edison, Gannett Publication, Louisville and Nashville, Northern Ohio Traction, Union Pacific, and Western Electric.

An overflow of investment funds into the lower priced field was indicated by advances of 1 to 2 or more points in a long list of these issues.

German Loans Stronger.

German loans showed about the best strength in the foreign group on the news that the German authorities have registered the scrip covering interest payments due for the first half of last year. Although the scrip arrangement does not apply to the German government Dawes and Young plan loans these issues gained a point or more today.

Bulova Watch.

Investors' Guide: Will you please give me a report on Bulova Watch company?—U. E. E.

Answer: Bulova Watch Co., Inc., was established in 1875. It is an important manufacturer of jeweled watches. Plants are in Switzerland, New York, and Waltham, Mass.

The current fiscal year has seen the company emerge from the red for the first time since the year ended March 31, 1931. Net income for the six months to Sept. 30, 1934, was $114,000, or 9 cents per common share, against loss of $304.000 for the corresponding 1933 period.

A decrease of $800,000 in charge-offs for bad accounts enabled the company to cut its loss for the year ended March 31, 1934, to $311,000, from the loss of $1,072,000 for the preceding year. Loss in the March 31, 1932, year was $193,000, against net income of $792,000 for the year ended March 31, 1931.

On March 31, 1934, current assets were $4,992,000, and current liabilities, including $917,000 loans payable to foreign banks, were $1,222,000.

Capitalization consists of 50,000 shares of $3.50 dividend cumulative no par preferred and 275,000 shares of no par common. Nothing has been paid on the preferred since Dec. 1, 1931.

The preferred is speculative and the common more so.

Chicago & Western Indiana R. R.

Investors' Guide: I shall be very glad to receive a rating on Chicago and Western Indiana 5½s, due 1962, with a view toward including them in a widow's funds.—Mrs. B. H. D.

Answer: Chicago and Western Indiana Railroad company operates valuable clearing yard and belt line facilities in Chicago and performs a vital function in the interchange operations of thirteen railroads. A portion of its properties are leased to Chicago and Eastern Illinois Railway; Chicago, Indianapolis and Louisville; Chicago and Erie; Grand Trunk Western, and Wabash railway, which pay, as rental, upkeep and bond charges. The remainder is leased to Belt Railway company of Chicago, whose facilities are used by the Santa Fe road, the Rock Island, Illinois Central, Pennsylvania, Burlington, the "Soo" line, Chesapeake and Ohio, Pere Marquette, Grand Trunk, Wabash, Chicago and Erie, Chicago and Louisville, and Chicago and Eastern Illinois.

Although current position of the issuer is unimpressive, this is of little importance. The valuable security behind the first 5½s, due 1962, and the guarantee of the five lessor roads entitle the bonds to a sound rating.
